FIRST AMERICAN CONGRESS.

PROCEEDINGS OF THE BRITISH PARLIAMENT AND OF THE COLONIES IN RELATION TO THE MEASURES WHICH OCCASIONED THE FIRST CON-TINENTAL CONGRESS OF THE NORTH AMERICAN COLONIES, HELD IN NEW-YORK, IN OCTOBER, 1765

I. Passage of the Act of 4 Geo. III. ch. 15. for raising a revenue in the Colonies.

Extract from the King's Speech, on the opening of the Session, November 15, 1763.

"The improvement of the public revenue, by such regulations as shall be judged most expedient for that purpose, deserves your most serious consideration: this will be the surest means of reducing the national debt, and of relieving my subjects from those burdens which the expenses of the late war have stained, in Persia, China, or East-India, im-brought upon them; and will, at the same time, establish the public credit upon the most solid foundation."

Extract from the Commons' Address of Thanks.

"Your Majesty may be assured that we will bestow the strictest attention upon that interesting subject, which your Majesty has pointed out to our serious consideration: and will diligently weigh every Regulation which may be proposed for the improvement of the public revenue, as the most effectual method to reduce the national debt, to relieve your Majesty's subjects from the burdens of the late war, and to confirm and strengthen the public credit."

Resolutions proposed by the Committee of Ways and Means and agreed to, unanimously, by the House, for raising a revenue in the American Colonies.

March 10 1764.

11. That the said act be, with amendments, made perpetual, from the 29th September, 1764.

12. That from and after the said 29th September, 1764, in lieu of the duty granted by the said act upon molasses and syrups, a duty of 3*d.* per gallon be laid upon all molasses and syrups of the growth, product, or manufacture, of any foreign American colony or plantation imported into the British colonies and plantations in America.

13. That the produce of all the said duties, and also of the duties which shall from and after the said 29th September, 1764 be raised, by virtue of the said act, made in the 6th of his late Majesty, be paid into the receipt of his Majesty's exchequer, and there reserved, to be from time to time disposed of by parliament, towards defraying the necessary expenses of defending, protecting, and securing, the British Colonies and Plantations in duty be paid into the receipt of his Majesty's exchequer, and there reserved to be, from time to time, disposed of by parliament, towards defraying the necessary expences of defending, protecting, and securing, the British Colonies and Plantations in America.

18. That the importation of rum and spirits, of the produce or manufacture of any foreign or American Colony or Plantation, into the British Colonies and Plantations in America, be prohibited.

4. That no allowance be made for leakage, upon the importation of any wines into this Kingdom, unless such wines be imported directly from the place of their growth, or from the usual place of their first shipping, except only Madeira wines, imported from any of the British Colonies or Plantations in America, or from the East Indies.

5. That any person or persons, be permitted to import, in ships belonging to his Majesty's subjects, whale fins, taken from whales caught, by any of his Majesty's subjects, in the gulph or river of St. Lawrence, or in any seas on the coasts of any of his Majesty's Colonies in America, without paying any custom, subsidy, or duty, for the same (other than and except the rate of duty commonly called the old subsidy) for the term of 7 years, from the 25th December, 1763.†

* This was an independent, substantive Resolution, followed by nothing; and yet was a resolution not only of extreme magnitude, but of the most general and highest legal nature involving in it a decision of the first and most fundamental principles of liberty, property, and government; and was also well worthy, as to the temporary policy of it, the most serious of all consideration. This was resolved too, if I am informed right, at the close of the night, and at the rising of the House: so that every body must have taken it as a clear thing, that they could at any time come to a resolution upon any general point of law, whenever they should see it expedient so to do. Letters on Libels.

The Ministry deemed it necessary this year to contemplate America as a source of future revenue. A series of Resolutions was brought into the House for regulating the trade and imposing duties on certain articles of American commerce: they formed the basis of an Act, which afterwards passed the legislature, and directed that the new duties should be paid in specie into the English exchequer. The Resolutions were accompanied with one for introducing a Stamp duty into America; but the Minister withdrew it for the present, in order to allow time for the colonists to petition against it, when brought forward in another session.

While the yell of Indian carnage was yet in their ears, and the smoke of their ruined habitations before their eyes, the rage and despair of the Americans were further inflamed by the arrival of the British Resolutions for imposing taxes. A more unfavourable moment could not have been selected. The unaccommodating regulations on trade, gave no hope of compromise or evasion of the new duties. The Americans perceiving in these Resolutions the first appearance of a general and extensive plan of taxation, the limits of which being concealed from their sight, were magnified to their apprehension, determined not to wait for the gradual exposure of the plan to combat it by parts, but to strike at once at the basis, by denying the right of the mother country to impose taxes on the colonies, which not being represented in parliament, did neither really nor virtually consent to the imposition." Adolphus.

† These Resolutions caused very little debate, and were passed unanimously by the House of Commons. While they were before the House Mr. Grenville, first Commissioner of the Treasury, among other reasons advanced by him, represented the Colonies "as overflowing with plenty, unembarrassed with taxes, and distinguished by unequalled ease and happiness. He soon convinced the House of the impoverished state of the finances of the Kingdom, that beside all the former load of debt, the last war had created

On the 5th of April, 1764, an Act entitled "An Act granting certain duties in the British Colonies and Plantations in America, for continuing, amending, and making perpetual, an Act passed in the sixth year of the reign of his late Majesty King George II. (intituled, an Act for the better securing and encouraging the trade of his Majesty's Sugar Colonies in America :)" &c. in which the foregoing Resolutions were embodied, received the King's assent. The following is the Preamble to the Act—

"Whereas it is expedient, that new duties and regulations should be established for improving the revenue of this kingdom, and for extending and securing the Navigation and Commerce between Great Britain and your Majesty's dominions in America, which by the peace have been so happily enlarged: and whereas it is just and necessary, that a revenue should be raised in your Majesty's said dominions in America, for paying the expenss of defending, protecting, and securing the same. We, your Majesty's most dutiful and loyal subjects, the Commons of Great Britain in parliament assembled, being desirous of making some provision in this present Session of Parliament towards raising the said revenue in America, have resolved to give and grant * to your Majesty, the several rates and duties hereinafter mentioned," &c.

Extracts from the Act. (4 Geo. 3. c. 15.)

§ 18. That from and after the 29th day of September, 1764, no rum or spirits of the produce or manufacture of any of the Colonies or Plantations in America, not in the possession or under the dominion of his Majesty, his heirs or successors, shall be imported or brought into any of the Colonies or Plantations in America which now are, or hereafter may be, in the possession or under the dominion of his Majesty, his heirs or successors, upon forfeiture of all such rum or spirits, together with the ship or vessel in which the same shall be imported, with the tackle, apparel, and furniture thereof; to be seized by any officer or officers of his Majesty's customs, and prosecuted in such manner and form as herein after is expressed; any law, custom, or usage, to the contrary notwithstanding.

§ 25. That if any British Ship or Vessel laden, as aforesaid, with any goods of the produce or manufacture of any British Colony or Plantation in America, or having on board any molasses or syrups the produce of any foreign Colony or Plantation, shall be discovered by any officer of his Majesty's customs within two leagues of the shore of any British Colony or Plantation in America and the master or person taking charge of such ship or vessel shall not produce a certificate that bond has been given, pursuant to the directions of this or any other act of parliament, as the case may require; or if he shall not produce such certificate to the collector or other chief officer of the customs where he shall arrive, either in Great Britain or any British American Colony or Plantation. such ship or vessel, with her tackle, apparel, and furniture, and all the goods therein laden, shall be forfeited, and shall and may be seized and prosecuted as herein after is directed.

§ 41. All sums of money imposed as penalties or forfeitures, by this or any other act seventy-three millions, sixty-three millions of which were the work of the last four years of it; and in addition to all this, the Germans claimed seven millions of arrears: that the state of the national income made it indispensably necessary that every part of the Government should contribute to the utmost to lighten the public burden; and that the whole charge of the American governments being three hundred and fifty thousand pounds, it was highly reasonable that they should submit to the taxes he was about to impose upon them." Minut.

* But the grand manœuvre in that business of new regulating the Colonies, was the fifteenth act of the fourth of George the Third, which, besides containing several of the matters to which I alluded, opened a new principle; and here properly began the second period of the policy of this Country with regard to the Colonies, by which a scheme of regular plantation parliamentary revenue was adopted in theory, and settled in practice. This act, sir, had for the first time, the title of 'giving and granting' duties in the Colonies and Plantations in America; and for the first time, it was asserted in the preamble, 'that it was just and necessary, that a revenue should be raised there.' Then come the technical words of 'giving and granting,' and thus a complete American revenue act was made, in all the forms, and with a full avowal of the equity, policy, and even the necessity of taxing the Colonies, without any formal consent of theirs. There were, contained also in the preamble to that act, these very remarkable words, 'the Commons being desirous to make some provision towards raising the said revenue.' By these words, it appeared to the Colonies, that this act was only the beginning of sorrows, &c. 'his ill prospect appeared boundless in extent and endless in duration. Burke on American Taxation.

The principle of commercial monopoly ran through no less than twenty-nine acts of parliament from 1660 to 1764. In all these acts the system of Commerce was established, as that from which, alone, their contributions to the strength of the empire were expected. During this whole period, a parliamentary revenue was no part of the object of colonization. Accordingly, in all the laws which regarded them, the technical words of revenue laws were avoided. Such have usually a title, purporting their being "grants," and the words "give and grant," usually precede their enacting clauses. Although duties were imposed on America, by previous acts of parliament, no one title of "giving an aid to his Majesty," or any other of the usual titles to revenue acts, was to be found in any of them. They were intended as regulations of trade, and not as sources of national supplies. Till the year 1764, all stood on commercial regulation and restraint. Ramsay, of parliament relating to the customs, which shall be paid, incurred, or recovered, in any of the British Colonies or Plantations in America; shall be deemed, and are hereby declared to be sterling money of Great Britain, and shall be collected, recovered, and paid, to the amount of the value which such nominal sums bear in Great Britain; and that such monies shall and may be received and taken according to the proportion and value of five shillings and sixpence the ounce in silver, and that all the forfeitures and penalties inflicted by this or any other act or acts of parliament relating to the trade and revenues of the said British Colonies or Plantations in America which shall be incurred there, shall and may be prosecuted, sued for, and recovered in any court of record, or in any court of admiralty, in the said Colonies or Plantations where such offence shall be committed, or in any court of vice admiralty which may or shall be appointed over all America (which court of admiralty or vice admiralty are hereby respectively authorized and required to proceed, hear, and determine the same) at the election of the informer or prosecutor.

46 That from and after the 29th day of September, 1764, in case any information shall be commenced and brought to trial in America, on account of any seizure of any ship or goods as forfeited by this or any other act of parliament relating to his Majesty's customs, wherein a verdict or sentence shall be given for the claimer thereof; and it shall appear to the judge or court before whom the same shall be tried, that there was a probable cause of seizure, the judge or court before whom the same shall be tried shall certify on the record or other proceedings, that there was a probable cause for the prosecutor's seizing the said ship or goods; and, in such case, the defendant shall not be entitled to any costs of suit whatsoever; nor shall the persons who seized the said ship or goods, be liable to any action, or other suit or prosecution, on account of such seizure: and in case any action, or other suit or prosecution, shall be commenced and brought to trial against any person or persons whatsoever, on account of the seizing any such ship or goods, where no information shall be commenced or brought to trial to condemn the same, and a verdict or sentence shall be given upon such action or prosecution against the defendant or defendants, if the court or judge before whom such action or prosecution, shall certify in like manner as aforesaid, that there was a probable cause for such seizure, then the plaintiff besides his ship or goods so seized, or the value thereof, shall not be entitled to above two pence damages, nor to any costs of suit; nor shall the defendant in such prosecution be fined above one shilling.*

* Agreeably to the spirit of this law, all the Officers of the Ships of War, stationed on the coasts of America and the West Indies, were made to take the Custom House oaths, and act as revenue officers for the prevention of smuggling. But the alertness and activity, which those gentlemen had so lately exerted with so much advantage and honour to themselves and their country in taking prizes from the enemy, were more prejudicial than serviceable to the general interests of Commerce in their new employment. Little acquainted as may be supposed, with rules which require long study and practice to understand them, and still less with the prudential reasons, which had hitherto induced a relaxation of the vigour of the law in cases where a judicious overlooking was for the national advantage, they eagerly sought, and indiscriminately seized every vessel they found in the smallest degree transgressing the strict letter of the law, the interpretation of which was in a great measure in their own hands. In cases of improper seizure redress might be sought by appeal to the board of admiralty or treasury at home [England;] which, considering the delay and distance, and the circumstances of the plaintiffs and defendants, could very seldom be productive of any redress. Macpherson.

At the same time that they, [the Ministers] thought it expedient to fit out armed cutters, under the command of sea-officers, to prevent smuggling on the coasts of Great Britain and Ireland, they obliged all sea-officers stationed on those of our American Colonies, to act in the capacity of the meanest revenue officers; making them submit to the usual custom house oaths, and custom house regulations for that purpose; by means of which the nature of their own important and exalted character was debased, and that irregular vivacity of theirs, and contempt of common forms, which had been so lately, and with such advantage, exerted against the common enemy, was now inconsiderately played off upon the subject.

If these gentlemen did not understand all those cases in which ships were liable to penalty, they as little understood those, in which ships were exempt even from detention; and, of course, hurt the interests of trade in the same proportion that they disappointed the expectations of the treasury; so that, through the natural violence of their disposition, and their unacquaintance with the revenue business, (and how could it be expected they should all at once become acquainted with a business, which requires, at least, as much study at that they had been bred to?) the trade still carried on between British subjects, in spite of that vast number and intricacy of bonds, clearances, cockets, affidavits, stamps, certificates, registers, manifests, &c. with which the heart has been so unskilfully oppressed to benefit of the members, was very much injured.

What served greatly to aggravate this evil, was its being, in a great measure, without prevention or redress; or at least that speedy prevention and redress, which so great an evil required. Those who did the mischief, lived on an element, where civil justice is well known to have but little influence: or, if they sometimes ventured on shore, it was in bodies too numerous not to intimidate the civil officers; or in places, where their blun-

"Gentlemen of the House of Commons, I thank you for the Supplies which you have so cheerfully and unanimously granted. The ample provision you have made for the several services recommended to you, and especially for maintaining my fleet in a respectable state, will, I am confident, preserve to this nation its proper weight and influence, and give strength and security to all my dominions.

"The wise regulations which have been established to augment the public revenues, to unite the interests of the most distant possessions of my crown, and to encourage and secure their commerce with Great Britain, call for my hearty approbation."

ders, to call them by no worse a name, were not cognizable, or where, at least, they ran no risk of being met by those whose business it was to prosecute them. The Lords of the Admiralty, or of the Treasury in Europe, could alone remove the evil; so that considering the time an application to these Boards must have taken in reaching them, and the orders of these Boards in reaching the transgressors, it may fairly be accounted one of the greatest blessings Great Britain has had for a long time past to boast of, that the trade of her Colonies, as far as it depended upon these new fangled Custom House officers, was not in the mean time totally annihilated. Ann. Regis.

II. Petitions and Remonstrances of the Colonies, in 1764.

General Assembly of New-York, April 30, 1764.

ALDERMAN Livingston, in Behalf of the Merchants of the City of New-York, laid before the House, a Copy of a Memorial drawn up by the said Merchants, in order to be presented to the Parliament of Great Britain, complaining of the Hardships the Trade of this Colony labours under, by Reason of a Statute of the sixth of his late Majesty King George the Second, commonly called the Sugar Act; and praying Relief in the Premises: Which said Copy of a Memorial, being read, and a Copy of a Letter wrote by the Committee of Correspondence, inclosing the said Memorial, to the Agent of this Colony at the Court of Great-Britain, being also read,

Resolved, Nemine Contradicente, That the House do approve of the said Memorial, and of the Letter accompanying the same.

Resolved Nemine Contradicente, That this House will provide Ways and Means for paying all Expenses attending the said Memorial, and which may accrue by Means of opposing the Renewal or Continuation of the said Statute of the sixth of his late Majesty King George the Second, commonly called the Sugar Act.

Ordered, That the Committee of Correspondence, direct the Agent of this Colony to give all possible Opposition to the Renewal or Continuation, of the said Act of the sixth of his late Majesty King George the Second; and acquaint him, that this House will pay all such Expenses as may accrue by Means of the said Opposition.

To the Honourable the Knights, Citizens, and Burgesses, in Parliament assembled. The Memorial of the Merchants of the City of New-York, in the Colony of New-York, in America.

Humbly Sheweth,

THAT the declining state of the Commerce of this and the other Northern Colonies, from the present rigorous execution of the statute of the 6th of his late majesty king George the Second, called the Sugar Act, is become an Object of such serious and universal Concern, that the Mercantile Part of the Community who are more immediately interested, would at so melancholy a Juncture, be lost to all Sense of Duty to their Country and themselves, were they to remain silent Spectators of the impending Ruin; they therefore most humbly beg Leave, in Behalf of themselves and their Country, to represent to this honourable House, so great and fatal an Evil; in full Confidence, that the Impartiality, Justice, and Wisdom of the British Parliament, and their equal Regard to the Welfare of every Part of his Majesty's Dominions, will effectually secure them an adequate Redress

And to this End your Memorialists beg leave to shew, that the inhabitants of this Colony are dutiful and loyal Subjects to his most sacred Majesty, and zealous for the Honour and Interest of Great-Britain, having given distinguished Proofs of their cordial Attachment to both, as well by their strenuous Efforts as the vast Expence they have cheerfully sustained during the late just and necessary War.

That by the great Labour and Industry of the Inhabitants of these Colonies, they have so cultivated a rude and Savage Wilderness, as to be able from the Produce of their Lands to carry on several Branches of Commerce, both useful to themselves and highly advantageous to Great-Britain.

That the Northern British Colonies are by the Nature of their Climate, unhappily distinguished from most other Countries, for besides the Injury which our Wool receives from the excessive Heats of our Summers, by rendering it coarse and hairy; the Length and Severity of the Winters, attended with the extream Depth of the Snow, forbid the raising of Sheep, but under the greatest Difficulties and Hazards; and thus the Manufacture of Wool becomes precarious and almost impracticable: Vast Quantities of Warm Clothing, which can only be supplied us by the Mother Country, are nevertheless wanting; while at the same Time the Soil produees little or nothing that affords a direct Remittance thither in Payment.

The Inhabitants have from these natural Causes, been driven to seek a Market for their Produce in the British West-Indies; and such Produce by the further Population and Improvement of the Country, becoming too great for a Vent there, they have for many Years past, carried on a very beneficial Traffick with several of the foreign Sugar Islands as well before as since the Act, which by imposing Duties that amount to a Prohibition, would long since have deprived them of the Life and Support of their Commerce and Credit, had they been severely exacted; for your Memorialists conceive, a Truth capable of the clearest Demonstration, that the Suppression of their Trade with the foreign Sugar Islands, by whatsoever Means effected, must necessarily end not only in the utter Impoverishment of his Majesty's Northern Colonies, and the Destruction of their Navigation, but in the grievous Detriment of the British Manufactures and Artificers, and the great Diminution of the Trade, Power, Wealth, and naval Strength of Great-Britain.

In order to this, as well to set the vast Advantages Great-Britain derives from her Northern Colonies, in the clearest Light, they implore the Patience of this honourable House, while they exhibit a brief State of their general Commerce.

The Produce, except the inconsiderable Articles sent directly to Great-Britain, and Ireland, consists of Fish; the far greater Part whereof is transported to Spain, Portugal and Italy, and there principally converted into Cash or Bills of Exchange, which are remitted to England, and Part of the Remainder sold in the West-Indies, to the English, according to their Exigencies, and the rest of the foreign West-India Islands; or consists of Flour, Beef, Pork, Lumber and Horses, which are also exported to the British West-Indies; and afterwards supplying their Markets, the remaining Overplus is sold in the foreign Colonies, either for Specie, Sugar or Molasses: This Specie is immediately remitted to Great-Britain, and the Sugar either consumed among us or exchanged for the Produce of some of the Southern Colonies which is remitted home or shipped to some foreign ports in Europe, and there invested in Bills, to discharge our Debts in Great-Britain; and the Molasses is either consumed amongst us in the brewing of Beer, and by the poor sort of People, in great Quantities, in the Room of Sugar, or distilled into Rum: And this again, is a most essential article in that branch, partly exchanged in a course of Commerce with our own Colonies for Fish, the Proceeds of which, as before is shewn, center in Great Britain, and partly disposed of in Africa, for Gold, Ivory and Slaves: Of these, the two first are directly remitted home, and the latter sold in the British West-Indies, for Money or Bills of Exchange; both which are also immediately remitted home, and partly bartered with the Indian Natives, (who will deal with no Traders destitute of this Spirit, and resent the thoughts of being stinted in their favourite Liquor, with the highest Indignation,) for Furs and Skins, -which constitutes another very considerable Remittance to our Mother Country.

The amazing Quantities of British Manufactures and other Goods, which the Colonies on this Continent have thus been enabled by their Produce and Trade, to import from Great Britain, and the vast Advantages thence arising to her, can be much better ascertained at home, than by your Memorialists. But should they be indulged in a Conjecture founded on their best Information, they conceive the Value will not fall short of Three Millions, Sterling, per Annum; and supposing half a Million to be expended by the Mother Country, in the unwrought Materials, and other Articles from abroad, and which constitute part of our Supply, it will leave in favour of Great-Britain, exclusive of all other Advantages, the Prodigious Profit of Two Millions and an Half, Sterling; a Profit greater, your Memorialists presume, than any Nation in the World derives from her Colonies.

What Share this Colony in particular contributes towards so vast an Accession of Wealth to the Mother Country, your Memorialists can determine with greater Clearness and Certainty; for which, among other Purposes, they beg leave to have recourse to the Custom House Books of the Port of New-York from which it appears, that for the five last Years, there have been entered yearly, at a Medium, from Great-Britain, Thirty Nine Ships, the mean difference of whose Cargoes amounted, on a moderate Estimate each Year, so Six Hundred Thousand Pounds, Sterling; and an ordinary Valuation of the Quantity of Exports of this Colony to Great Britain and Ireland, from the Month of November, 1762, to November, 1763, collected from the said Books, and consisting of Flax Seed, Furs, Pig and Bar Iron, Beeswax, Copper Oar, naval Stores, Ship Timber, Plank, and other Things, amounts to L. 34,252 Sterling; the Exports to the West-India Settlements, and what hath been sent coastwise, consisting of Flour, Beef, Pork, Bread, Lumber, &c. about one half whereof is vendid, at the British West-India Islands, and the Rest at the foreign Settlements, amounted for the Year 1763, to L. 117,531, Sterling, both which Sums are equal to L. 151,783, Sterling, which deducted from the Value of the Imports, shews that they exceed all our exports by L. 468,217, Sterling.

Such being the prodigious balance against us, it may be necessary to show how we have hitherto been enabled to support our Credit, especially as that part of our Produce which is proper for a direct remittance, appears so very inconsiderable, that it could not be done from an intercourse with the British West-India Islands only, to which the law in Question would confine us, will they conceive be evident from a few observations: Sugar and Molasses have been shewn to be the very Sinews of our Commerce, and the sources from which, in a course of Trade, we draw the most valuable Remittances, it would therefore seem necessary that they should be imported in quantities sufficient to supply the various demands of our several commercial Interchanges, as well as our own Consumption; but our Sugar Colonies are unable to afford this ample Supply, nor if they were, could they take our Produce, which alone would capacitate us to purchase it.

Considering the prodigious Consumption of West-India Produce, in Great-Britain, in Ireland, and in the Colonies on the Continent; the amazing increase of those Colonies, their Inhabitants already amounting to above two Millions; the vast accession of Subjects by the late Conquests, computed at two hundred Thousand, besides the innumerable Tribes of Indians in the extensive Countries ceded to the British Crown; the most strenuous Advocate for the interest of those Islands, must admit their utter incapacity to afford a supply equal to so immense a demand.

As an instance of this inability, without dwelling upon the Artifice of importing foreign Sugars, and then reshipping them in English Casks, as their own produce; a practice two frequent in the Islands, we beg leave, on the Articles of Rum and Molasses, to have recourse to the Custom House Books of the Ports of Boston and Salem, in the Colony of the Massachusetts Bay: by these it appears, that from the month of January, in the Year 1762, to the same month in the Year following, were imported from the French Islands lately reduced to his Majesty's Obedience, Seven Thousand Hogsheads of Molasses; and from our English Islands, not above Four Hundred and Six of Rum, and Four Hundred and Twenty-Four of Molasses; of which Molasses Four Hundred and Twelve were of the Island of Jamaica, Twelve only from all the other English Islands together.

Besides the scarcity of these Articles so apparent, it is the constant practice of all our West-India Islands, (Jamaica excepted) to distill their Molasses; and this, though done in a warm Climate by Slaves, fed with salt Herring and Roots; the latter of which are raised by the Slaves themselves, on Days in all other Christian Countries, devoted to Rest, and the Service of Almighty God; their Rum of equal Proof and Spirit, however incredible, is sold at our Market thirty per Cent. higher than what is manufactured at North America, where Labourers are scarce, and their Clothing and Provisions, on account of their Qualities and the price of Labour, owing to the disproportion of Inhabitants to the extents of the Tracts of Land still uncultivated, much higher than in any other part of the World.

Our Produce on the contrary, even when we had the freest intercourse with the foreign Islands, was from the great Quantities poured upon them from the several Colonies, so low at a Medium in the British West-Indies as seldom to afford the Exporter any profit.

Thus supplied with the Staple of this Country in vast Abundance, and at a cheap Rate, while their produce is so scarce and extravagantly dear, your Memorialists think it manifest, that did we depend for upon them alone, it would be utterly impossible to procure more than a Competence for our necessary Consumption, and consequently nothing being left for the Purposes of our Traffick, our Credit with the Mother Country could not be supported by an Interchange so vain and unprofitable; your Memorialists therefore presume, that this important Object, so interesting to Great-Britain, can only be secured by the free and unrestrained Exportation of all the Produce we raise and can spare, and by an ample Importation of Sugar and Molasses, sufficient not only for our Consumption, but for the various Branches and Trade, to which it is essential from every Place where it can be obtained on reasonable Terms. They cannot indeed take upon themselves to say, that even such an Indulgence in its wish'd for Extent, would enable us effectually to discharge the Load of Debts we contract in Great-Britain, without still farther encouragements, sensible that during the late war, we enjoyed many additional Advantages now in a great Measure suspended or at an End: Among these were the Contractors' Bills, the Money from England for supplying his Majesty's Troops in America, and the great Success of the Privateers of this Port; each of which afforded a very considerable Resource for Remittances; by these the Exchange between Great-Britain and us, was so far influenced, as to be reduced from Ninety to Sixty five per Cent, and to their Cessation is to be ascribed its sudden Rise again to that enormous Standard of near twenty per Cent. above the Par: a circumstance alone sufficient to plunge us into the greatest Difficulties.

But the Memorialists conceive that if instead of Indulgences and Encouragements suitable to our distresses, this dreaded Law be revived or continued, it must infallibly be attended with a Train of Consequences highly prejudicial to Great-Britain, and ruinous to her Colonies: a few of which, they pray the Indulgence of this honourable House, succinctly to enumerate.

The Incapacity of making good our Payments, already severely felt, must necessarily sink our Credit, and gradually decrease our Imports from Great-Britain, till they are reduced to the narrow Compass of those Remittances consisting barely of Articles of our own Produce.

This being the Case, numbers of Manufacturers will remain without Employ, and be obliged to transport themselves with their Arts, to foreign Parts for a Subsistence.

The Manufacturing Towns, those Springs of British Opulence, decay. The Rents of Lands, Iron Works, and Collieries, fall; and Trade in general, languish and decline.

If in addition to this, the Marine of Great Britain, be considered as her chief Glory and Strength, and her Colonies and Fisheries, as the Nurseries of her Seamen, the Measure in question must, in this view, be of the most immediate and pernicious Consequences to the whole Nation. To give some Idea of the great Number of Seamen maintained in the Trade of the Continent of America, may your Memorialists be permitted to observe, that they are well informed that the Massachusetts-Bay, employs in her Fishery and Navigation, not less than Five Thousand while, Pennsylvania, we suppose, falls not above a Third short of that Number; and to shew how many are engaged in the Service of this Colony, your Memorialists beg Leave to observe, that it appears from a careful Estimate that this Colony has, for the five last years past, Communibus Annis, annually employed Thirty Thousand Ton of Shipping, the Seamen of which, allowing eight to every Hundred Tons, were Two Thousand Four Hundred, exclusive of great Numbers in the Service of the great Vessels of War.

Should our Trade with the foreign West-Indies be denied us, a proportionable reduction both of our shipping and seamen, must be the consequence, the owners of Vessels disabled otherwise to employ them, must through necessity, sell them to the subjects of other States, upon which the Crews being discharged will have no means of subsistence, but by entering into, and augmenting a foreign Marine.

The same evil consequences are to be dreaded in the other Colonies, who, under the like disadvantages, will be obliged in the same way to dispose of their useless shipping.

Add to all this, that the continuation of the Sugar Act will be productive of the double mischief of impoverishing the subjects of Great Britain, and enriching those of the several European States, who have dependent Plantations in the Islands of the West-India Seas.

Upon removing the restraints of that law, the vicinity and other Superior advantages of our Colonies, for the ready supply of those articles which the Islands cannot do without, especially Provisions, Timber and Lumber, would totally obstruct all such Importations from Europe, and by forcing a great part of their own Produce into our Hands, we should weaken the connection between the foreign European Powers and their Colonies, draw them into a state of dependence upon ourselves, take the profits of their Produce into our own hands, and in no small degree render them as effectually our own, as if they were really subject to the British Crown: Whereas by enforcing the Payment of high duties upon the foreign West-India Produce, our Trade with those Planters must cease, and the Supplies coming to them from France, Spain, Holland, Portugal and Denmark, those Nations will be proportionably enriched, and being awakened to Husbandry, Manufactures and Arts, they will be strengthened by an increase of People, subsisting by employment, without which many thousands of fellow Subjects in Britain, Ireland, and the Colonies, must be reduced to the greatest distress.

And since our own Islands cannot supply these extensive Dominions, and that Incapacity must increase in proportion to the rapid augmentation of our numbers, one of the first sacrifices Great Britain will make, will be all the profits now gained by the refinement and exportation of Sugar. A profit not contemptible as the London refiners can evince, though lessening under the influence of the Act, we complain of the present scarcity of Sugar, enabling the Planters to set up refining Houses in the Islands, and to undersell the British Manufacturers in that Branch.

From these Remarks, your Memorialists think it evident that the prosperity of Great Britain, is inseparably connected with that of the Northern Colonies, in the Support and Encouragement of the Trade in Question. They proceed now to observe, that even should it be supposed prejudicial to the British West-India Islands, in some, or even a great degree, this would be no good reason for its suppression, if that measure would be attended with worse, or as bad consequences to the Northern Colonies, since their superior Utility and importance to the Mother Country, are capable of very satisfactory proof.

The remittances made to Great Britain by those Islands in return for her Manufactures consisting of Sugars, are chiefly consumed by the Mother Country, with no considerable addition to the national Stock whereas, those from the Northern Colonies being principally in money, do greatly augment the public Treasure. Besides their warm Climate requiring but little and slight clothing, and their Produce being of very great value, the balance of their Trade with the Mother Country, is immensely in their favour: With the Northern Colonies the case is just the reverse, our utmost Industry and the greatest possible Indulgence, being scarcely sufficient to enable us to discharge our Debts contracted in Britain. Again the principal European Imports into those Islands, consisting of Osnabrigs and other foreign Manufactures to clothe their Slaves, yield little other advantage to Great Britain, than the inconsiderable one arising from the Duties on those commodities. But her supplies to the Northern Colonies are chiefly her woollen Manufactures and other Staples, the principal value of which, centers with her, and constitutes a great Source of her opulence; and as to the amount of their respective supplies from Great Britain, your Memorialist have already shewn, that those of the Colonies are annually equal to three Millions Sterling, while those of the West India Islands, exceed not one Million; and should our Imports increase for twenty Years to come, in the same proportion as for the twenty Years past, they must necessarily at the close of that Period, annually amount to a prodigious Sum, whereas the Lands of the Sugar Colonies fit for Cultivation, besides being the graves of so many of his Majesty's useful Subjects, are almost entirely improved and incapable of any great Increase of Inhabitants to add to their Consumption of British Manufacture; Jamaica may be an exception, and the Islands lately acquired certainly are, but it cannot be presumed that their further improvement, will by any means essentially alter the case, and with respect to number of Subjects, in which the true Glory and Strength of a Nation consists; those of the continental Colonies, are as before observed, universally believed to exceed two Millions, while the Islands are known to be thinly peopled, and for the greater part by miserable Slaves employed in raising and manufacturing their Produce, From all which your Memorialists conclude, that considering the matter in these true Points of Light, the superior importance and usefulness of these Colonies to Great Britain, is undeniable manifest.

But, notwithstanding the Reasons that have hitherto influenced a Parliament, celebrated throughout the World for the Wisdom, Equity and Justice of her Laws: Notwithstanding the arts of the West-India Planters, and the most unkind and invidious Reflections upon their fellow subjects in the Northern Colonies calculated to render them suspected in the eyes of their Sovereign, and odious to their Mother Country; Your Memorialists are persuaded, it will appear from a fair and candid Examination of every objection hitherto urged against the Trade in Question, that it is not in reality injurious to the British Islands, and therefore, your Memorialists are induced to hope, they will not be deemed uncharitable in concluding, that the opposition raised against us, on this Account, springs not as is pretended, from a Regard to the Welfare of Great-Britain, but from Motives of Self-Interest, and a desire to grasp at a partial and dangerous Monopoly.

Your Memorialists presume, if our Trade with the foreign Colonies is injurious to our own Islands it must either have raised the price of our produce there, or diminished the Value of their own.

To shew that such a Pretence is destitute of the least Foundation, we need only cast an eye on the great Numbers of West-India Planters, whom from the smallest beginnings, have acquired Fortunes so splendid as to rival and often eclipse in stately Edifices, Equipages and Magnificence, of many, even of the Nobility of Great-Britain.

It is also a known Fact, that within thirty Years last, their Estates far from declining in Consequence of this Trade, have actually received an Increase of at least Thirty per Cent.

Your Memorialists are therefore persuaded, that with the justest cause might the Northern Colonies complain, who have the Mortification to find every Article of their Produce, sold in the English West Indies, with little or no profit to the Exporter, while the price of Sugar is already very high, and has hitherto been continually increasing.

After what hath been offered, it may be thought Superfluous, particularly to consider the remonstrance of the West-India Planters, on this Subject, to the Lords of Trade and Plantations in the year 1750. But as it was attended with success and made an impression extremely disadvantageous to these Colonies, your Memorialists entreat the further patience of this honourable House, while they point out the weakness of the Foundation on which it was built.

Your Memorialists pass over their assertion, that the Trade in Question impoverishes our Islands, while it enriches those of foreign States, since it is notorious to every one, the least acquainted with their respective Markets, that it never had that effect, the latter underselling them very considerably, although subject to the great disadvantage of giving a far superior price for their Provisions and other Necessaries than the former.

More plausible, but equally unjust is their pretence, that the Profits of their Sugar Plantations, depend on Rum and Molasses, without which, Sugar would hardly pay the expence of Culture and Manufacture, and that therefore, a Prohibition on us, to receive those articles from the French, must necessarily occasion the decline of their Colonies, because they are not suffered to import them into France, as interfering with Brandy the Manufacture of that Country.

To this your Memorialists answer, that from the vast Wealth arising from those Plantations, and the excessive Price of Sugars, it is obvious that very considerable Profits must result were they confined to Sugar alone. But it is a well known fact, that the Rum and Molasses, instead of constituting the sole profit, actually defray all Expenses, and leave the Sugar a clear and absolute Gain to the Planter, and so far would the Prohibition aimed at, be from effecting the Decline of the foreign Sugar Colonies, that having no other vent for their Molasses, those Colonies would undoubtedly redouble their application to the distilling of Rum, and by that Means, acquire very considerable Branches of Commerce, now in Possession of British Subjects, and would in particular deprive them of the African Trade, as they could afford their Ruin so much cheaper, than what is made or distilled from the Produce of the British Islands. It was urged as another Objection, that the foreign Rum and Molasses, being purchased by us for Specie, drains us of our Gold and Silver, and disables us from paying the Balances annually becoming due to Great-Britain.

On which the Memorialists observe, that so far from being able to send any Specie to the foreign Islands, the greatest Part of all the Gold and Silver they ever had was actually imported from thence: They admit indeed, that during the late War, when Gold and Silver were Plenty, by means of the Army employed in America, a Trade was carried on to the foreign Islands, in British Manufactures and Specie; but that this instead of disabling these Colonies from paying their Debts to Great-Britain, did on the contrary, by creating a Profit from one to two Hundred per Cent. capacitate them to purchase and pay for larger quantities of British Manufactures, than they were ever able to do either before or since.

They further insisted in their Memorial, that the permission of such a Commerce would encourage us in a Trade directly with the foreign Nations of Europe, for all the Commodities we now take from Great-Britain; to this the Memorialists reply, that whatever Violation of a few daring and enterprising Spirits, common to all Countries, may have committed against the Laws, wisely forbidding so pernicious an Intercourse with foreign Nations, it has generally been regarded with the highest Disapprobation, not only injurious to the fair Trader, but also to the Mother Country, from whom alone, the Colonies ought to receive all the European Manufactures they want and she can spare; But your memorialists insist, that even were the Colonies destitute of the duty and regard, they so justly owe to the Fountain from whence they originated, and by which they have been supported and protect'd (as the Planters would unkindly insinuate) such vigorous Measures may be pursued, as will effectually remove the most distant apprehensions of so disobedient and presumptuous a Practice.

The General Assembly was adjourned on the 21st. the day after the adoption of the foregoing Memorial, and did not meet again until the 4th of September, following. On the 5th the Committee appointed to correspond with the Agent of the Colony, at the Court of Great Britain, laid before the House several letters and other papers received by the Committee from the agent during the Recess; which were read, and referred to the consideration of a Committee of the whole House. On the 11th an Address, in which the Right of the Colonies was maintained, was presented to the Lt. Governor. On the 19th the Committee reported that it was expedient to Petition Parliament: Petitions were accordingly prepared, adopted by the House, and signed by the speaker, on the 18th of October.

But nothing can add to the pleasure we receive from the Information your Honour gives us, That his Majesty, our most gracious Sovereign, distinguishes and approves our conduct. When his service requires it, we shall ever be ready to exert ourselves with Loyalty, Fidelity and Zeal, and as we have always complied in the most dutiful manner with every Requisition made by his Directions; we with all humility hope, that his Majesty, who, and whose Ancestors, have long been the Guardians of British Liberty, will so protect us in our Rights, as to prevent our falling into the abject State of being forever hereafter incapable of doing what can merit either his distinction, or approbation. Such must be the deplorable State of that wretched People, who (being taxed by a power subordinate to none, and in a great Measure unacquainted with their circumstances) can call nothing their own. This we speak with the greatest deference to the wisdom and justice of the British Parliament, in which we confide.

Depressed with this Prospect of inevitable Ruin by the alarming Informations we have from Home, neither we nor our constituents can attend to Improvements, conducive either to the Interests of our Mother Country or of this Colony. We shall however renew the Act for granting a Bounty on Hemp, still hoping that a stop may be put to those measures, which if carried into execution, will oblige us to think that nothing but extreme poverty can preserve us from the most insupportable bondage.

We hope, your Honour will join with us, in an endeavour to secure that great Badge of English Liberty, of being taxed only with our own consent, to which we conceive, all his Majesty's Subjects at home and abroad equally entitled; and also in pointing out to the Ministry, the many mischiefs arising from the Act, commonly called, the Sugar Act, both to us and to Great Britain.

PETITIONS TO PARLIAMENT, 1764.

To the King's most excellent Majesty. The humble Petition and Representation of the Representatives of your Majesty's loyal Colony of New-York.

DEMIT, most gracious Sovereign, your faithful Representatives for your Majesty's loyal Subjects, the Freemen and Freeholders of your Colony of New York, to approach the Throne, with a Submissive Tender of the most firm and unshaken Allegiance. And as they shall ever esteem it a peculiar Mark of the Royal Favour, in behalf of themselves and their Constituents, to be indulged in renewing their Demonstration of the most inviolable Fidelity to their Prince, may they be allowed at a juncture so critical, to the Rights and Liberties of those whom they represent, with all Humility to show,

That your Majesty's royal Predecessors, sensible that the Subject, by the Laws of our happy Constitution, carries with him his Allegiance to the most distant corners of the Earth, and that the Protection of his Constitutional Rights and Privileges, is the true Reason of that Allegiance, not only authorized the Emigration of their Subjects, but acquiesced in the transfer of those Rights and Privileges, to this distant Part of your Dominions, to be enjoyed by them, on the same Tenure of Subjection by which they held them at Home.

That hence so soon after the first Planting of this Colony, as in the Year 1683, a political Frame was erected, in the nearest possible Resemblance to that of our Mother Country; of which the constituent Parts were a Governor and a Council, in the royal Appointment, and a Representation of the People by their own free Election.

That in these three Branches was lodged the legislative Authority of the Colony, and particularly the Power of taxing it's Inhabitants for the support of Government. And in the uninterrupted Enjoyment of this Constitution has your Majesty's Colony of New York continued, from that Period down to the present Day.

That under influence of this happy Imitation of the Political Frame of our Mother Country, we are, by the numerous Emigrations from your Majesty's Kingdoms of Great Britain and Ireland, and the Accession of foreign Protestants become a Dominion filled with subjects, who esteem themselves happy in the firmest Attachment to your royal Person, Family and Government; the more happy, as under this Allegiance, they have had the highest Reason, from the hitherto uninterrupted Enjoyment of their civil Rights and Liberties as individuals, to consider themselves, in a State of perfect Equality with their fellow Subjects in Great Britain, and as a political Body, enjoying the like the Inhabitants of that Country, the exclusive Right of Taxing themselves; a Right which with the most profound submission be it spoken whether inherent in the People, or sprung from any other Cause, has received the royal Sanction; is at the Basis of our Colony State, and become venerable by long Usage.

Your Majesty's faithful Representatives for this your Colony of New York, cannot, therefore, without the strongest Demonstrations of Grief, express their sentiments on the late Intimation of a Design, to impose Taxes on your Majesty's Colonists, by Laws to be passed in Great Britain. On a subject so interesting to us, we have the peculiar Felicity of observing, that the royal Prerogative, by our tender Regard to which, we shall ever be ready to evince our unfeigned Obedience to our prince, is not in the least interested: For we humbly conceive that, whether the Aids, which the support of your Majesty's government require from this People, be raised by ourselves, or our fellow Subjects, will neither heighten or diminish the lustre of the imperial Diadem, but as one or other of those Modes of Taxation will either prove advance or destructive of the publick Weal.

Permit us, therefore most gracious Sovereign, in behalf of ourselves and our Constituents, to supplicate our Prince as the common Father of all his People, who sees with equal Eye, and regards with indiscriminating Tenderness and Concern the Interests of his British and American Subjects; who by our happy Constitution, is armed with the Power to negative every unconstitutional Law: and whose princely Goodness, we account ourselves happy in the Reflection will ever direct the Execution of his Authority.

That the Power of taxing ourselves has been fundamentally interwoven in our Constitution, we flatter ourselves will not be denied; that we have uninterruptedly enjoyed this Power, the numerous Acts we have passed for the support of Government, in the Enacting of which, the Crown has always participated, will fully evince; and that we have not abused this Power, our strenuous Exertions, upon every publick Emergency, will we humbly hope most fully demonstrate. Many indeed are our Testimonials on this Subject, furnished by the Speeches of our Governors, under your Majesty and your royal Ancestors, and recorded in our Acts of Assembly, for a long and uninterrupted Series of Years.

But we flatter ourselves, that this People has given your Majesty, the most recent Proofs, of their Zeal for the Glory of their Sovereign, of their Readiness to bleed at every Vein in his service, and of that uncommon Alacrity with which they have in the late War, so glorious to your Majesty, and your royal Grandfather, even out of their Poverty, so liberally contributed to the common Cause: Proofs which, with the fullest Conviction have reached the Breasts of those who through the most groundless Misperceptions are now moved, to destroy the Power which furnished them. For we conceive that those frequent parliamentary Provisions, to lighten the heavy Taxes, which we voluntarily burthened ourselves, for the national Weal, could have been dictated by nothing less, than the fullest Conviction, that in exercising the Power of Taxing ourselves, your Majesty's Service and the Publick Welfare were our invariable Objects.

May we not therefore humbly hope, for your Majesty's royal Approbation of our Unwillingness to part with a Right, which on the Authority of the Prince, in the Infancy of this Colony, thought proper to put into your Hands, as the Birth Right of the Subject, a Right which we have ever since undisturbedly possessed; a Right to which even could it be forfeited by abuse, we have secured our Title by the best Improvement of it. May we not also, while the liberty of the Subject has ever been the greatest Glory, of the illustrious House of Hanover, with full assurance of acceptance lay at your Majesty's Feet, our jealousies upon every Invasion of our Rights? We value ourselves in being the free Subjects of a glorious Prince, who tenderly regards the Liberties of his People, and who will ever maintain that excellent Constitution, which with all others, that the Wisdom of Man has hitherto contrived, forbids that any Part of a Community shall, as Individuals, claim the Right of taxing the whole. And these our jealousies we bring recommended with an Argument, which we trust will ever have the greatest Weight with our Sovereign.

For besides, that involuntary taxes and impositions, are absolutely and necessarily excluded from a State of Liberty; that it would be the basest Vassalage, to be taxed at the Pleasure of a Fellow Subject; that all real Property is lost, whensoever it becomes subordinate to laws, in the making of which, the Proprietor does not participate; and that thus to treat us, would be to sink us into a subjugation, infinitely below the ignominious Rank of the most tributary States: Besides all this, we have the Welfare of the Nation, that most powerful Advocate with a wise King, to plead our Cause before your Majesty; and by this we are encouraged to observe—

That your Majesty's North American Colonies, in the extensive Tracts of Country they contain, furnish Room for an endless increase of Inhabitants. And as Numbers are the most athletic sinew of national Power; the strength of Great Britain, which can never grow from this Cause at Home, must gain continual and never ending Accessions in her Colonies. That the Consumption of British Manufactures originally made necessary by the nature of our Climate, will continually increase with our Numbers, and by this Means, the Trade and Maritime Power of the Nation, will grow daily more dreaded, unrivalled and irresistible; and your Majesty and your royal Descendants, become more conspicuously, as your Majesty in Truth is, the most powerful Princes in Europe.

These we presume are the happy Effects, which can flow only from the Increase and Prosperity of the Colonies; and for which the Mother Country, being long ere now arrived at the fullest Maturity, can afford no Room.

But as Liberty is at the Bottom of all our Enjoyments, as your Majesty's Subjects can neither be happy nor rich, but in the Independent Fruition of their Property; can your Majesty, we ask it with submission, conceive, that a Discrimination of Privileges between the Mother Country and the Colonies, will be attended with a Consequence, less fatal than the Decrease of the latter? While the subject, can under the nearest Protection of the Crown enjoy the largest Portions of Liberty, and the greatest accumulations of Privileges that a free People can even wish for, the more inhospitable climes of America more inhospitable for our Vicinity to a Barbarian, or irreconcilable Foe, will furnish no Temptations to emigrate. Actuated by the same principles, which will prevent all future Emigrations, great Numbers of our present Inhabitants will transplant themselves into the Mother Country; where they may enjoy their Property with the fullest security and a perfect Equality with their fellow Subjects. Thus will our Colonies decrease, and with them the strength, the Glory, the Lustre of the British Empire.

These, permit us, with the deepest Concern for the Honour of our King, and the Prosperity of the Nation, to assure your Majesty will be the fatal, yet unavoidable Consequences of a Method of Taxation for the Colonies, so inconsistent with the Genius of the British Constitution, so destructive of that Right of taxing ourselves, which in common with our fellow Subjects in Great Britain, we have hitherto uninterruptedly enjoyed; and which it is hoped, we may with the strictest justice say, have been secured against a Forfeiture as far as the most invaluable Rights can, by the best Improvement of them be secured.

May we not therefore, most gracious Sovereign, with a Measure of Confidence hope, that an Evil, so great, so extensive, will by your Majesty's wise and princely Interposition be prevented? An Evil, which no Instance in the whole Tenor of our Conduct, can possibly make necessary; for what Period we ask it with all Humility can be assigned, in which even our Backwardness, much less our Refusal, to exercise the Right of Taxation for the Benefit of ourselves, or the national Weal was manifested? We have been a People, zealous for the Honour of our Sovereign, sanguine in the public cause, ready to strain every Nerve, upon every Occasion; we have supported the whole Weight of Canadian Fury, for near a Century; been as liberal of our Blood, as our Treasure; and even anticipated the Demands of our Sovereign, on every Occasion of public Emergency. So conspicuous indeed, was our willingness, to exercise this invaluable Right in the national Cause, that at a juncture, when a Failure of the Military Chest, suspended your Majesty's important Operations, for the Conquest of Canada, (the most luminous Event, that ever adorned the Page of English History) your Majesty's Commander in Chief betook himself to the Legislature of this Colony, for Relief. And on that momentous Occasion, how cheerfully did they load the Colony with a sum, immensely beyond the Abilities of a poor People to bear, upon no other security for a Reimbursement, than the Merit of the Service.

Next to the Right of taxing ourselves, for the support of your Majesty's Government, we beg leave, humbly, to recommend to the gracious Consideration of our Sovereign, the present ruinous State of our Commerce. If the Trade of Great Britain is her chief Glory, if she is to excel her Neighbours in commercial Arts, we speak from our present woful Experience, the Prosperity of our Trade, is absolutely necessary for the support of hers. This Country can, at best, afford a very incompetent supply of immediate Remittances, for those prodigious Quantities of her Manufactures, which we daily consume. Our staple is calculated, principally for the West India Markets; and their Produce is the best Return we can possibly make for her Commodities. And as our communication with the foreign Islands, would, besides a Vent for our own Staple, open a wide Door for the sale of British Manufactures, the Trade of Great Britain, would by this means, be immensely increased; while on the other Hand, your Majesty's Sugar Colonies afford a very inadequate Market for British Wares, and the Staple of our Country; and by such a Restriction, our Trade and of course the Trade of Great Britain, is reduced to the most scanty Limits. It is therefore with a Concern, that equally embraces our Mother Country, as well as our Colony Interests, that we received the late Act of Parliament, by which all Commercial Intercourse between these Colonies, and the foreign West India Settlements is at an end; The Duties thereby imposed being equal to a Prohibition. And we have too great Reason, from the present Decay of our Commerce to conclude, that this Measure, which can only be serviceable to a very inconsiderate Part of the British Empire will be attended with Consequences, destructive to the general Interest, of your Majesty's Realm and Dominions.

Our Demands for Linen Manufactures, which till the passing of the late act, we have been permitted freely to supply, by Importations from your Majesty's Kingdom of Ireland must remain, in a great Measure, unsatisfied, by the Prohibition laid on our Exportation of Lumber to that Kingdom. As we humbly conceive, that no national advantage can arise, from this Restriction; we flatter ourselves with the Hopes, of your Majesty's most gracious and powerful Interposition, in this Instance, for our Relief.

It is with the deepest Distress, that our Duty to our Constituents, constrains us to observe to our Prince, that this, and many others of the Acts of Trade, have diverted the public Stream of Justice, from their ancient Course. The Wisdom of our Ancestors shines in nothing more brightly, than in the Institution of juries, for the Decision of all Controversies, that concern the Lives, Liberties, and Property of the Subject; and if we are emboldened, with equal Earnestness and Humility, to supplicate your Majesty's royal Favour and Countenance, in this important Point, we have that conspicuous Tenderness for the Rights of the subject, which is one of the most distinguished Graces of your Majesty's illustrious House, to plead our Excuse. Your Majesty's unexampled Goodness will, therefore, pardon the Bitterness of our Grief, at the gradual, though not the less dangerous Diminution, of this ancient Badge of English Liberty. For though we could, with the most becoming alacrity, submit our Lives and Property, and what we hold dearer than both that inestimable Liberty with which our Ancestors have set us free, to your Majesty's royal Clemency, and Princely Discretion; yet the unavoidable Delegations of the royal Authority, which necessarily exposures us to the rapacious Designs of wicked Men, leave us, neither Rest nor Security, while a Custom House Officer may wantonly seize, what a Judge of your Majesty's Court of Vice Admiralty may condemn in his Discretion; or at best restore to the honest Proprietor, without the Possibility of a Restitution for the Injury. Shall we not therefore be allowed, with the most lowly Reverence, and upon the Arms of the most firm and unshaken Fidelity, to tender our humble Petitions to the Throne, that this great, this growing, this mighty Evil may be removed from among us?

Permit us, most gracious Sovereign, to observe on the want of a paper Currency, as the last, though not the least Evil, to which the Colonies are unhappily made Subject, by an Act of Parliament lately passed for that Purpose. Our Commerce affords us so small a Return of Specie, that without a paper Currency, supported on the credit of the Colony, our Trade, and the Commutation of Property, must necessarily fail. The Want of Money will disable us to pay our internal Taxes, and effectually prevent our Exertions in the common cause; ever on the most interesting, and alarming Occasions. In the use of this Means for supplying our political Wants, we have been continually indulged, ever since the Reign of your Majesty's glorious Predecessor, King William the Third. And what use we have made of it, we appeal to past Occurrences for Proof; your Majesty's poor Subjects in the Colonies, are unable to bear the Weight of a heavy, and immediate Tax: And no other Expedient can possibly be devised, to acquit them in the Discharge of public Duties in momentous and pressing Occasions, than an Emission of Paper Money; to be sunk at a distant, though certain Period, by Taxes gradually and annually imposed. Had the immense Sums this loyal Colony has contributed, to promote your Majesty's Service, during the late War, been immediately imposed; besides the absolute Impossibility of supplying them, the whole Colony must have sunk under so intolerable a Burden. Had we then been deprived of this easy Method, of raising a Sum for immediate use, we should have lost the opportunity of testifying our Love and Loyalty to our Sovereign, when his General made Requisition of the prodigious Sum of One Hundred and Fifty Thousand Pounds, without which, the important Operations, of the most eventful Campaign, must at least unavoidably have stagnated, if not miscarried. These, Sire, were the good uses that we made of this political Engine; and we may safely defy the World, to produce an Instance, in which by neglecting, to sink our Emissions of Paper Currency, in due Season, we suffered it either to depreciate, or fall into discredit. May the consideration of our past faithful Services, and a sincere Tender of our Readiness, on all future Occasions, have their proper weight with your Majesty; and produce a Repeal of that Law, which has deprived this people of the most effectual Means, to demonstrate their Fidelity and affection to their Prince.

These, may it please your Majesty, are the important Points, upon which your faithful Representatives for your loyal Colony of New York, have in behalf of their Constituents, and with the most humble submission, presumed to approach the Throne, assuring your Majesty, that one of the principal Blessings they have to expect, from a continuance of their exclusive Right to tax themselves, the Restoration and Extension of their Commerce, the Execution of Law, in the ancient and ordinary Method, and the Continuance of their Bills of Credit, will be, their Capacity to do the most faithful and ready Services, to their King and Country, upon every Occasion.

The Inhabitants of this your Majesty's loyal Colony of New York, have the highest sense of the Wisdom, Justice, Integrity and Impartiality, of both your Majesty's Houses of Parliament; and are therefore fully convinced, that measures so destructive of our and the public Emolument, must be grounded, on the misrepresentations of those, who, by opposing the Interests of the Colonies, strike at the well being of the Nation in general. It is extremely difficult, for those highly honoured Houses, at so great a distance, to preserve from Pollution, the Channel of Intelligence. But your Majesty, being representatively present, by your Governors, and Councils, who doubtless, will be ready, to give the trust Intelligence when commanded by their Sovereign, may, by this infallible Method, discover our truly deplorable Circumstances; and provide such Redress, for this, and your other loyal and distressed North American Colonies, as to your Majesty in your princely Wisdom and Goodness, shall seem meet.

That Almighty God, in whose Hand are the Hearts of Princes, may direct the Counsels of our most gracious Sovereign, for the Welfare, even of his most distant Subjects; that the Imperial Diadem of Great Britain, may sit long and easy, on his royal Head; that he may be conspicuously blest, among the Princes of the Earth, in his sacred Person, illustrious Family, and auspicious Government; that the British Sceptre may never depart, from his August House, nor his faithful Subjects, throughout his extensive Kingdoms and Dominions, want Hearts on every Occasion, to testify the most unshaken Fidelity, the most ardent affection, and the most cheerful and unreserved obedience to a Prince of his royal Lineage, while Sun and Moon endure, are the sincere, the ardent, the unremitted Prayers, of your Majesty's most dutiful, most loyal, and most devoted Subjects, the Representatives of your Majesty's Colony of New York.

By Order of the General Assembly,
 W. LIAM NICOLL, Speaker
Assembly Chamber,
City of New York, Oct. 18th, 1764.

To the Lords Spiritual and Temporal in Parliament, Assembled.

The General Assembly of the Colony of New York, beg Leave with all Humility to shew.

THAT at a time when measures are proposed for the consideration of the British Parliament, tending to the impoverishment of the North American Colonies; the great Detriment of Trade, the diminution of the Interests both of the Crown and the Nation; the insecurity of our property, and the apparent Abridgement, if not utter Destruction of our Liberties; to remain unconcerned and silent would ill become the Representative Body of the People of this Colony, who must unavoidably share in the public Calamity; and consequently cannot but be alarmed at the impending danger. Your Petitioners therefore beg leave, most humbly to represent to your Lordships that ever since the glorious Revolution, in which this Colony displayed the most distinguished Zeal and Alacrity, we have enjoyed the uninterrupted Privilege, of being taxed only with our own consent, given by our Representatives in General Assembly. This we have ever considered as the inextinguishable Right of British Subjects, because it is the natural Right of Mankind, and so inseparable from the very Idea of Property, as not to be divested even by conquest itself, without totally despoiling the Vanquished; and reducing them to a State of absolute Vassalage. Subjected States have indeed been often compelled to submit to heavy Tributes; but none were ever depressed to the deplorable necessity, of paying such Tribute as should, to all Futurity, be imposed at the boundless will of the Conqueror. The Tribute was generally fixed; and that duly discharged, the residue was enjoyed with undisturbed security. Nay even such a State of Slavery, in which the supreme Power of the conquering State is vested in a single Person, wretched as it is, would be infinitely preferable, to what, according to our most alarming Information, has lately been proposed for the British Colonies; but which, we have the highest Reason to hope, from your Lordships deep Sense of the inestimable Value of Liberty, and the patriot disposition of your illustrious House, can never recommend itself to your serious approbation. For where ever the supreme Power is lodged in a single Person, he will naturally consider himself as having an equal Relation to all his Subjects; and thence equally dispense his Favours: And the conquered, finding their condition gradually mending, will become reconciled to his Government, and forget their primitive Freedom; but a Constitution, in which one part of his Majesty's Subjects, are forever to be taxed by another, which so absolutely challenges that Right, as not to suffer the least alteration in the Laws proposed for that purpose, is such a System of Government, as was never adopted by any People, hath not its Parallel in the whole compass of History, nor perhaps ever entered into the Imagination of any Political Writer. It is the most unequal Constitution that ever existed; and no human Foresight or Contrivance can prevent its infallible advances to and its final consummation in, the most intolerable Oppression. For all taxes being paid with Reluctance, and every man willing to alleviate the Burden; it is natural to suppose that whoever has the uncontrollable Right of imposing them, will bear no part of them himself, as long as they can possibly be laid on others. If such therefore be our Constitution it must follow, that the whole Burden of the Government, as fast as it can be transferred, will be thrown on the Subjects in America; while all the advantages of it remain to those of Great Britain; And a future House of Commons, not possessed of that Love of Justice and Liberty, which so eminently distinguishes the present, will wanton in our spals. Reasoning thus from the nature of Men, and in general, and without designing the least Reflection on any Particulars, we humbly presume, our Freedom will not be thought to merit the Censure of a British House of Peers, the constant Guardians of Liberty, and the invariable irreconcilable Foes to every species of Bondage.

Having thus shewn, as we humbly conceive with the greatest submission to your superior Wisdom, that a Government so constituted, must necessarily degenerate into a Tyranny; we beg leave to observe, that the Claim of an Exemption from being taxed by the supreme Legislative Power, is far from involving in it, the notion of an Independency. For the experience of near a Century, has fully evinced, that our subjection to Great Britain, and her Laws, and our strenuous efforts upon every public Emergency, have not been the less conspicuous under an Immunity from taxes, imposed by a British Parliament. And should we add, that during that long Tract of Time, taking the Colonies collectively, we have not been surpassed by any of his Majesty's Subjects, either in the usefulness and affection to the Mother Country, in Fidelity and Loyalty to the Crown, or in the Liberality both of our Blood and Treasure, in compliance with every Requisition; the notoriety of the Facts, and the Propriety of rehearsing them on so important an occasion would acquit us before your Lordships of Vanity and self applause. We have by improving a Country inhabited only by Savages and far remote from our native Soil, greatly extended the Dominions and Trade of Great Britain; and will undoubtedly, if not checked by a new model of our Constitution, and an Abridgement of the essential and fundamental Rights of Englishmen, continue the since it prohibits our shipping of Lumber to Augmentation of both, till she shall equal the that Kingdom or even the Dunnaging our great Empire recorded in the Annals of Flax Seed Vessels with staves, without which Fame. Our Trade has always been so regulated by her Laws, as to leave us no other will not admit our Importation of the Irish Riches than what are annually expended on Linens.

her Manufactures; whence the extraordinary hardships resulting from the Imposition of while we presume to point out the extreme taxes are the more apparent. Was Britain Inconvenience of another Act, passed in the altogether without Trade, she could evidently not raise a tenth part of what she now does Paper Bills of Credit hereafter issued in any for the support of her Empire. Still worse of his Majesty's Colonies or Plantations in America, from being a legal Tender. Our Commerce affords us such inconsiderable Returns in specie, that without a Paper Currency supported on the Credit of the Colony, both our Trade, and the Commutation of Property, must meet with perpetual Obstructions. Nor could we, without such expedient, have co-operated with vigour in the Reduction of Canada, that ever memorable and most valuable addition to the British Empire in America. Had we been obliged to borrow money for that purpose, lenders could not have been found, had we been obliged to pay Interest for the immense Sums we then expended, it had been extremely difficult to have paid the principal, notwithstanding the assistance we received from the British Parliament; and we had remained in debt such Sums, as we could not, in the course of many years, have been able to discharge. The quantity of Paper Currency emitted by furnishing us with Cash, enabled us to pay the heavy Taxes we charged ourselves with which had otherwise been impossible: And hence it appears that by this Law, his Majesty's Service in this Colony, may on future occasions, and when there is the most urgent necessity for our exertions in the common cause, be unfortunately impeded. When to this we subjoin, that the giving a Currency to Paper, hath been our constant Method of supplying our political Wants, ever since the Reign of King William the Third.—That we have not hitherto suffered it to depreciate or ever perverted it to illaudable purposes, that with respect to ourselves as a Colony, it is a medium essentially necessary to our commercial Interests, and that without it, most deplorable must be the case of all debtors, who meet with cruel Creditors and whose estates must, for want of current Cash, be sold below their value to the Impoverishment of many Families; your Petitioners cannot question your Lordships' benevolent Interposition in their behalf.

Matters may indeed have been represented in a different Light, by Gentlemen who were the more liable to be led into mistakes, by their short Residence amongst us; and especially by making their observations in Time of War. It is then that the French and Spanish West Indies, open an extensive Field for Commerce; and Britain acquires, by our Means, the whole Trade of the New World.—Immense are the quantities of her Manufactures thereby expended; and the Profits almost exceeding Imagination. At such a time, it is no Wonder if many Merchants grow rich, or that their Luxury by the sudden acquisition of their Wealth, can scarcely keep pace with their Profits. But on the return of Peace, our Trade again subsides into its primitive contracted Channel. The Cash we had acquired takes its speedy Flight to Great Britain; and nothing remains but the Trappings of Luxury, which serve at once to gild and increase our Poverty.

As the Trade of the Colonies must ever constitute the principal advantage which Great Britain derives from them, your Petitioners conceive it their indispensable duty, as well to the Nation in general, as their constituents in particular, humbly to observe to your Lordships, that all commercial Inter-course between us and the foreign Sugar Colonies, being, by the high duties imposed by a late Statute, intirely at an end, must inevitably prove a Restraint, equally detrimental to the Mother Country and all her Northern Dominions; since by that Trade those Commodities, which will not serve for Remittances Home (and which are now become utterly useless,) were converted into Cash, and other Merchandize fit for that purpose. By the same Act we are also prevented from satisfying our Demands for the Linen Manufactures of Ireland, (a Manufacture

We shall not presume, further to trespass on your Lordships' Patience, than to observe that the amazing Powers vested by some of the late Acts of Trade, in the Judges of the Vice-Admiralty Courts, who do not proceed according to the course of the common Law, nor admit of Trials by Juries, one of the most essential Privileges of Englishmen, has so unfavourable an aspect on the Property of the Subject, that we could not, consistent with our duty, suppress our apprehensions.

All which your Petitioners, reposing the highest confidence in your Lordships' Wisdom and Justice, humbly pray may be taken into your most serious consideration, and that such relief may be granted, as shall seem most conducive to the united Interest of Great Britain and all her Colonies.

WILLIAM NICOLL, Speaker
Assembly Chamber,
City of New York, Oct. 18th, 1764.

To the honourable the Knights, Citizens and Burgesses, representing the Commons of Great Britain, in Parliament Assembled. The Representation and Petition of the General Assembly of the Colony of New York. Most humbly shew,

THAT from the year 1693, to this Day, there have been three Legislative Branches in this Colony; consisting of the Governor and Council appointed by the Crown, and the Representatives chosen by the People, who, besides the Power of making Laws for the Colony, have enjoyed the Right of taxing the subject for the support of the Government.

Under this Political Frame, the Colony was settled by Protestant Emigrants from several Parts of Europe, and more especially from Great Britain and Ireland: And as it was originally modelled with the Intervention of the Crown, and not excepted to by the Realm of England before, nor by Great Britain, since the Union, the Planters and Settlers conceived the strongest hopes, that the Colony had gained a civil Constitution which, so far at least as the Rights and Privileges of the People were concerned, would remain permanent, and be transmitted to their latest Posterity.

It is therefore with equal concern and surprise, that they have received Intimations of certain Designs lately formed, if possible, to induce the Parliament of Great Britain, to impose taxes upon the subject, here, by Laws to be passed there; and as we who have the honour to represent them, conceive that this innovation, will greatly affect the interest of the Crown and the Nation, and reduce the Colony to absolute Ruin; it became our indispensable duty, to trouble you with a reasonable Representation of the Claim of our Constituents, to an exemption from the Burthen of all taxes not granted by themselves, and their foresight of the tragical Consequences of an adoption of the Contrary Principle to the Crown, the Mother Country, themselves and their Posterity.

Had the freedom from all taxes not granted by ourselves been enjoyed as a privilege, we are confident the Wisdom and Justice of the British Parliament, would rather establish than destroy it, unless by our abuse of it, the Forfeiture was justly incurred; but his Majesty's Colony of New York, cannot only defy the whole World to impeach their Fidelity, but appeal to all the records of their past Transactions, as well for the fullest Proof of their steady affection to the Mother Country as for their strenuous efforts to support the Government, and advance the general interest of the whole British Empire.

It has been their particular misfortune, to be always most exposed to the incursion of the Canadians, and the more barbarous incursions of the Savages of the Desert, as may appear by all the maps of this Country; and in many Wars we have suffered an immense loss both of Blood and Treasure, to repel the Foe, and maintain a valuable dependency upon the British Crown.

On no occasion can we be justly reproached for withholding a necessary supply, our taxes have been equal to our abilities, and confessed to be so by the Crown; for Proof of which we refer to the speeches of our Governors in all times of War; and though we remember with great gratitude, that in those grand and united struggles, which were lately directed for the conquest of Canada, part of our expenses was reimbursed, yet we cannot suppress the remark, that our contribution surpassed our strength, even in the opinion of the Parliament, who under that conviction thought it but just to take off part of the Burthen, to which we had loyally and voluntarily submitted; in a word if there is any merit in facilitating on all occasions, the public measures in the remote extremes of the national Dominion, and in preserving untainted loyalty and cheerful obedience, it is ours; and (with submission) unabused, nay more, well improved Privileges cannot, ought not, to be taken away from any People.

But an exemption from the Burthen of ungratified, involuntary taxes, must be the grand Principle of every free state. Without such a right vested in themselves, exclusive of all others, there can be no Liberty, no happiness, no security, it is inseparable from the very Idea of Property, for who can call that his own, which may be taken away at the pleasure of another? And so evidently does this appear to be the natural right of mankind, that even conquered tributary States, though subject to the Payment of a fixed periodical Tribute, never were reduced to so abject and forlorn a condition, as to yield to all the Burthens which their conquerors might at any future time think fit to impose. The tribute paid, the debt was discharged; and the Remainder they could call their own.

And if conquered Vassals upon the Principle even of natural justice, may claim a freedom from assessments unbounded and unassented to, without which they would sustain the loss of every thing, and life itself become intolerable, with how much Propriety and Boldness may we proceed to inform the Commons of Great Britain, who, to their distinguished honour, have in all ages asserted the Liberties of mankind, that the People of this Colony, inspired by the Genius of their Mother Country, nobly disdain the thought of claiming that exemption as a Privilege.— They found it on a Basis more honourable, solid and stable; they challenge it, and glory in it as their Right. That Right their ancestors enjoyed in Great Britain and Ireland; their descendants returning to those Kingdoms, enjoy it again;—And that it may be exercised by his Majesty's Subjects at Home, and justly denied to those who submitted to Poverty, Barbarian Wars, loss of Blood, loss of Money, personal Fatigues, and ten thousand unutterable Hardships, to enlarge the Trade, Wealth, and Dominion of the Nation; and unreasonable spirit be imputed to us, or, to speak with the most unexceptionable than to the Parliament of Ireland, or any other modesty, that when as subjects, all have of his Majesty's Subjects. Left to the enjoyment of our ancient Rights Discrimination should nevertheless be made the Government will be truly informed when between them, no sophistry can recommend a tax is necessary, and of the Abilities of the to the sober, impartial decision of common People; and there will be an equitable Partition of the Burthen. And as the public sense.

Our constituents exult in that glorious charges will necessarily increase with the In- Model of Government, of which your Hon. crease of the Country, and the augmentation House is so essential a part: and earnestly or reduction of the Force kept up, be regulated by the power and temper of our barbarian pray the Almighty Governor of all, long to support the due distribution of the Power of Enemy, the necessity for continuing the present Model must appear to be most strongly enforced. At the remote distance of the British Nation in the three great Legislative Branches. But the Advocates for divesting the interior Parts of this Desert, false Intelligences of the State of the Indians may be of the Right to tax ourselves, would by the Success of their Machination, render Devolution of all civil power upon the Crown alone, a Government more favourable, and therefore more eligible to these American Dependencies. The supreme Ruler in a Monarchy, even in a despotic Monarchy, will naturally consider his relation to be, what it is, equal to all his good subjects: An equal Dispensation of favours will be the natural Consequence of those Views; and the Increase of mutual affection must be productive of an increase of the Facility of all. But no history can furnish an instance of a constitution to permit one Part of a Dominion to be taxed by another, and that too in effect, but by a Branch of that other part; who in all Bills for public aids, suffer not the least Alteration. And if such an absurd and unequal Constitution should be adopted, who, that considers the natural reluctance of Mankind to burthens, and their inclination to cast them upon the shoulders of others, cannot foresee, that while the People on one side of the Atlantic, enjoy an exemption from the Load, those on the other, must submit to the most unsupportable oppression and tyranny.

Against these Evils, the indulgence of the present Parliament, of which we have had such large Experience, cannot provide, if the grand Right to tax ourselves is invaded. Depressed by the prospect of an endless train of the most distressing Mischiefs, naturally attended upon such an Innovation, his Majesty's American Subjects, will think it no inconsiderable augmentation of their Misery, that the measure itself implies the most severe and unmerited Censure, and is urged, as far as they are acquainted, by no good Reasons of State.

They are unconscious of any conduct, that brings the least Imputation upon their Love and Loyalty, and whoever has accused them, has abused both the Colonies and their Mother Country; more faithful subjects his Majesty has not, in any Part of his Dominions nor Britain more submissive and affectionate Sons.

And if our Contributions to the support of the Government upon this Continent, or for the maintenance of an Army, to awe and subdue the savages should be thought necessary, why shall it be presumed, without a trial that we more than others, will refuse to hear-ken to a just requisition from the Crown? To requisitions for Aids salutary to our own Interests? Or why should a more incorrigible

Nor will the Candour of the Commons of Great Britain, construe our Earnestness to maintain this Plea, to arise from a Desire of Independency upon the supreme Power of the Parliament. Of so extravagant a Disregard to our own Interests we cannot be guilty. From what other Quarter can we hope for Protection? We reject the Thought with the utmost abhorrence; and a perfect knowledge of this Country will afford the fullest Proof, that nothing in our Temper can give the least Ground for such a jealousy.

The peaceable and invariable submission of the Colonies, for a Century past, forbids the Imputation, or proves it a Calumny.—What can be more apparent, than that the State which exercises a sovereignty in Commerce, can draw all the Wealth of its Colonies into its own Stock? And has not the whole Trade of North America, that growing Magazine of Wealth, been, from the Beginning, directed, restrained, and prohibited at the sole Pleasure of the Parliament? And whatever some may pretend, his Majesty's American Subjects are far from a desire to invade the just Rights of Great Britain, in all commercial regulations. They humbly conceive, that a very manifest Distinction presents itself, which, while it leaves to the Mother Country an incontestible Power to give Laws for the Advancement of her own Commerce, will, at the same time do no Violence to the Rights of the Plantations.

The Authority of the Parliament of Great-Britain, to model the Trade of the whole Empire, so as to subserve the Interest of her own we are ready to recognize in the most extensive and positive Terms. Such a Preference is naturally founded upon her superiority, and indissolubly connected with the Principle of Self Preservation.—And therefore, to assign one Instance, instead of many, the Colonies cannot, would not, ask for a Licence to import woollen Manufactures from France; or to go into the most lucrative Branches of Commerce, in the least Degree incompatible with the Trade and Interest of Great Britain. But a Freedom to drive all kinds of Traf-sick in a subordination to, and not inconsistent with, the British Trade; and an Exemption from all duties in such a Course of Commerce, is humbly claimed by the Colonies, as the most essential of all the Rights to which they are intitled, as Colonists from, and connected, in the common Bond of Liberty, with the unenslaved Sons of Great Britain.

For, with submission, since all Impositions, whether they be internal Taxes, or duties paid, for what we consume, equally diminish the estates upon which they are charged; what avails it to any People, by which of them they are impoverished? Every thing will be given up to preserve Life; and though there is a Diversity in the means, yet, the whole Wealth of a Country may be as effectually drawn off, by the exaction of Duties, as by any other Tax upon their estates.

And therefore, the General Assembly of New York, in Fidelity to their Constituents, cannot but express the most earnest supplication, that the Parliament will charge our Commerce with no other Duties, than a Necessary Regard to the particular Trade of Great Britain, evidently demands; but leave it to the legislative Power of the Colony, to impose all other Burthens upon its own People, which the public Exigences may require.

Latterly, the Laws of Trade seem to have been framed without an Attention to this fundamental claim.

Permit us, also in defence of our Attachment to the Mother Country, to add, what your Merchants (to whom we oddly make the Appeal) know to be an undoubted truth; that this Continent contains some of the most useful of her subjects.—Such is the Nature of our Produce, that all we acquire is less than sufficient to purchase what we want of your Manufactures; and, be the Policy of your Commerce what it will, all our Riches must flow into Great Britain. Immense have been our contributions to the National Stock. Our Stable, Industry, Trade and Wealth, all conduce to the particular advantage of our fellow subjects there.—The natural state of this Country, necessarily forms the Balance of Trade in her favour. Her growing opulence must elevate her above all fear and jealousy of these dependences. How much stronger then the reasons for leaving us free from ungranted Impositions? Whoever will give full scope to his meditations on this Topic, will see it the Interest of Great Britain, to adopt the Maxim that her own happiness is most intimately connected with the Freedom, Ease and Prosperity of her Colonies: The more extensive our Traffick, the greater her gains; we carry all to her Hive, and consume the Returns; and we are content with any constitutional Regulation that enriches her, though it impoverishes ourselves.—But a fuller display of these Principles, being prepared by our Merchants, to be laid before the Honourable House, at the last sitting, we shall only beg leave to add, that any information repugnant to this Account of the low state of our Traffick must proceed from partial, or incompetent witnesses; who may have formed their estimate of the Wealth of the Colony, during the late War, when the French and Spanish

West Indies, were laid open to our Trade, and those immense Profits acquired there, for the Manufactures of Great Britain and Ireland, flowed into the Colonies, and luxury advanced upon us slower than our gains. But Trade being now confined to its old Channels, and indeed still more restricted, and the late acquired Cash, remitted home for necessary Cloathing, other very indifferent appearances begin to take place, and the British Merchants are, or will soon be convinced to their sorrow, that our splendor was not supported by solid Riches.

The honourable House will permit us to observe next, that the Act of the last Session of Parliament, inhibiting all intercourse between the Continent and foreign Sugar Colonies will prove equally detrimental to us and Great Britain. That Trade gave a value to a vast, but now almost unsaleable Staple, which being there converted into Cash and Merchandise, made necessary Remittances for the British Manufactures we consumed: The same Law contains a Clause unfriendly to the Linen Manufactory in Ireland, for the resumption upon the Exportation of Lumberto that Kingdom. prevents even our dunnaging the Flax Seed Casks sent there with Staves. And when we consider the Wisdom of our Ancestors in contriving Trials by Juries, we cannot stifle our Regret, that the Laws of Trade in general, change the Current of Justice from the common Law, and subject controversies of the utmost importance to the Decision of the Vice Admiralty Courts, who proceed not according to the old wholesome Laws of the Land, nor are always filled with Judges of approved Knowledge and Integrity. To this objection, the aforementioned Statute will at first view appear to be so evidently open, that we shall content ourselves with barely suggesting, that the amazing Confidence it reposes in the Judges, gives great Grief to his Majesty's American Subjects; and pass on to a few remarks on that other Law of the same Session, which renders our Paper Money no legal Tender.

The use of this sort of Currency in procuring a speedy supply on Emergences, all the Colonies have often experienced. We have had Recourse to this Expedient in every War, since the Reign of King William the Third; and without it we could not have co-operated so vigorously into the Reduction of Canada, that grand stroke which secured to Great Britain, the immense Dominion of the Continent of North America. We had no other alternative but that, or the taking up Money upon Loan, Lenders could not have been easily found, and if they were, the Interest upon all the sums raised in that way, would have exceeded our ability now to discharge. Happy for us, therefore, that we fell upon the project of giving a Credit to paper, which was always supported by seasonable taxes on our Estates; the Currency of the Bills being prolonged only till we were able to burn up the Quantity from time to time emitted. Our Laws, or the copies transmitted to the Plantation Office, will evince that of the numerous Emissions we have made since the first, which was on the 8th of June, 1709, all were for the urgent service of the Crown. One instance is so recent, and shews the necessity of the continuation of such a Power in the Colonies, in so striking a point of Light, that it deserves more particular Notice. The Operations of the year 1759, were nearly at a Stand for want of Money. The military Chest being exhausted, the General was alarmed; and seeing no other method to ward off the impending Disaster, was obliged to ask the Colony for a Loan of one hundred and fifty thousand Pounds: We immediately gratified his request—Such was our concern for the public Weal! We wish his Majesty's service may suffer no Impediment, by this new Restraint in an article which has been of so much Utility. The Traffick of the Colony certainly will, for want of a competent medium; and on that account, and in behalf of those miserable Debtors, whose Estates, through the scarcity of legal Cash, must be extended by Executions, and hastily sold beneath their true Value, to the ruin of many Families, permit us to implore your tender Commiseration.

The General Assembly of this Colony have no desire to derogate from the Power of the Parliament of Great Britain; but they cannot avoid deprecating the Loss of such Rights as they have hitherto enjoyed, Rights established in the first dawn of our Constitution, founded upon the most substantial Reasons, confirmed by invariable Usage, conducive to the best ends; never abused to bad purposes, and with the loss of which Liberty, Property, and all the Benefits of Life, tumble into Insecurity and Ruin: Rights, the deprivation of which, will dispirit the People, abate their Industry, discourage Trade, introduce discord, Poverty, and Slavery; or, by depopulating the Colonies, turn a Vast, fertile, prosperous Region, into a dreary Wilderness, impoverish Great Britain, and shake the Power and Independency of the most opulent and flourishing Empire in the World.

All which your Petitioners (who repose the highest Confidence in your Wisdom and Justice) humbly pray, may be now taken into your reasonable Consideration, and such measures, pursued, as the Event may prove to have been concerted for the common Weal, of all the Subjects of Great Britain, both at home and abroad.

By order of the General Assembly.

City of New York, October 18, 1764

Extract of a Letter from the Agent of the Colony of New York, dated 9th February, 1765.

Gentlemen,

"Since writing my Letter of the 8th and 11th December, whereof Duplicates are inclosed, your original Letter of the 25th of October, with the original Representations and Petitions to the King, the House of Lords and House of Commons were delivered to me by Captain Jacobson, who was specially charged therewith.

In consequence of what I then wrote and considering the importance of the matters contained in these papers, and that the minute of your House directs that I should take the Assistance of Counsel learned in the Law, I first had recourse to some Gentlemen here, of the highest Eminence in the profession of the Law, and of great knowledge in the constitutional Principles of this Country, Gentlemen of Independency, and in no other Public Station than that of serving their Country in Parliament, whose names I am not at Liberty to mention, since through favour only towards me, they were induced at my earnest Request to take these papers into their Consideration; who after deliberating maturely for some days thereupon gave them back to me, plainly telling me that for divers Reasons they were absolutely unfit to be presented.

"Upon this Judgement passed on them by Gentlemen of so great Abilities I would have rested the matter had I thought myself vested with any discretionary Powers over these Papers; I recurred therefore to further advice, and to divers members of the House of Commons to know whether they would present the Petition to the House, as you know that is the rule that all Petitions (those from the City of London excepted) must be presented by a Member, and here I was equally disappointed, every Gentleman desiring to be excused from so disagreeable a Task, and returning the papers with severe strictures on their extraordinary boldness, and the want of that due and accustomed respect at all times paid to the House of Commons, so that I began to doubt whether I should be able to find a Member that would present your Petition.

"In the mean time the Agents had a Meeting, who finding that the Stamp Duty would be unquestionably moved for and carried, and being desirous to gain a little Time, it was proposed and agreed to, that five of them should wait on the Chancellor of the Exchequer and propose that if he would name the Quantum intended to be levied by the Tax, and would apportion it amongst the Colonies, each Agent would recommend to his Constituents the raising the required sum in such manner as might best suit the circumstances of each Colony, but the result of this Deputation was that he questioned the authority of the Agents to make such a proposition, urged the difficulty of making the apportionment, and in fine said that he stood engaged Parliament to bring the matter before them.

"Hereupon continuing my applications to divers Members to present Your Petition and meeting still with objections and Repulses, I found at last a Gentleman who appeared inclined to introduce it, in whose hands it remained several Days for Consideration. And as I found it became my duty to acquaint the Earl of Halifax, the Secretary of State for the Southern Department with the Petition to the King and to the House of Lords, I furnished his Lordship with Copies of these papers, and the Chancellor of the Exchequer with a copy of the Petition to the House of Commons, and desired the Gentlemen in whose hands the Petition was to communicate the same to Mr. Speaker.

"The Chancellor of the Exchequer having given Notice that he would move the Stamp Duties on Wednesday the 6th Instant, I had proposed that before the House should resolve itself in the Committee of Ways and Means the Petition of New York should be presented, that it might be under Consideration before the Committee had affirmed their Right to lay such duties; so likewise Mr. Montague, Agent for Virginia had resolved, who had prepared according to his Instructions, a Petition asserting the exemption; but on that Day, the Gentleman who had your Petition, came to me in the Gallery of the House, and before Mr. Montague, and Mr. Garth, Agent for South Carolina, now Member of Parliament for Devizes, returned the Petition to me, informing me that upon communicating it to Mr. Speaker, and having himself considered it with attention, he found it in many places so void of respect and decency towards the House, and so justly exceptionable, as must give great offence, and raise a general indignation in the House, that therefore he would not take upon him to present it, nor could Mr. Montague find a Member to present his Petition, though a very temperate one, and but little liable to objection, except that it asserted the claim of exemption: indeed as to your Petition, several even of the Agents have made no scruple of declaring their doubts that it was like to be of greater hurt, than service to the Interests of America."

To the Honourable the Commons of Great Britain in Parliament assembled.

The Petition of the Council and House of Representatives of his Majesty's Province of Massachusetts Bay, Most humbly sheweth,

THAT the act passed in the last session of parliament entitled, An Act granting certain duties in the British colonies and plantations in America, &c. must necessarily bring many burdens on the inhabitants of those colonies and plantations, which your petitioners conceive would not have been imposed, if a full representation of the state of the colonies had been made to this honourable house—

That the duties laid upon foreign sugars and molasses by a former act of parliament entitled, An act for the better securing and encouraging the trade of his Majesty's sugar colonies in America: if the act had been executed with rigor, must have had the effect of an absolute prohibition—

That the duties laid on those articles by the present act still remain so great, that, however otherwise intended, they must undoubtedly have the same effect—

That the importation of foreign molasses into this province in particular, is of the greatest importance, and a prohibition will be prejudicial to many branches of its trade, and will lessen the consumption of the manufactures of Great-Britain—

That this importance does not arise merely nor principally from the necessity of foreign molasses, in order to its being consumed or distilled within this province—

That if the trade for many years carried on for foreign molasses can no longer be continued, a vent cannot be found for more than one half the fish of inferior quality, which is caught and cured by the inhabitants of this province; the French permitting no fish to be carried by foreigners to any of their islands, unless it be bartered or exchanged for molasses—

That if there be no sale of fish of inferior quality, it will be impossible to continue the fishery; the fish usually sent to Europe will then cost so dear, that the French will be able to undersell the English at all the European markets, and by this means one of the most valuable returns to Great-Britain will be utterly lost, and that great nursery of "seamen" destroyed—

That the restraints laid upon the exportation of timber, boards, staves, and other lumber from the colonies to Ireland and other parts of Europe, except Great-Britain, must greatly affect the trade of this province, and discourage the clearing and improving the lands which are yet uncultivated—

That the powers given by the late act to the court of vice-admiralty constituted over all America, are so expressed, as to leave it doubtful, whether goods seized for illicit importation in any of the colonies, may not be removed to any other colony where the judge may reside, although at many hundred miles distance from the place of seizure—

That, if this construction should be admitted, many persons, however legally their goods may have been imported, must lose their property, merely from an inability of following after it, and making that defence which they might do, if the trial had been in the colony where the goods were seized; that this construction would be so much the more grievous, seeing that in America, the officers by this act are indemnified in case of seizure, whensoever the judge of admiralty shall certify that there was probable cause; and the claimant can neither have costs, nor maintain an action against the persons seizing, how much soever he may have expended in defence of his property—

That the extension of the powers of courts of vice-admiralty, have so far as the jurisdiction of the said courts have been extended, deprived the colonies of one of the most valuable of English liberties, trials by juries—

That every act of parliament, which in this respect distinguishes his Majesty's subjects in the colonies, from their fellow-subjects in Great Britain, must create a very sensible concern and grief—

That there have been communicated to your petitioners sundry resolutions of the House of Commons in their last session, for imposing stamp duties or taxes upon the inhabitants of the colonies, consideration whereof was referred to the next session—

That your petitioners acknowledge with all gratitude, the tenderness of the legislature of Great-Britain, of the liberties and privileges of the subjects in the colonies, who have always judged by their representatives, both of the way and manner in which internal taxes should be raised within the respective governments—

That they humbly hope the colonies in general have so demeaned themselves, more especially during the late war, as still to deserve the continuance of all those liberties and privileges which they have hitherto enjoyed—

That although during the war the taxes upon the colonies were greater than they have been since the conclusion of it, yet the sources by which the inhabitants were enabled to pay their taxes having ceased, and their trade being decayed, they are not so able to pay the taxes they are subjected to in time of peace, as they were the greater taxes in time of war—

That one principal difficulty which has ever attended the trade of the colonies proceeds from the scarcity of money, which scarcity is caused by the balance of trade with Great-Britain, which has been continually against the colonies—

That the drawing sums of money from the colonies from time to time, must diminish the trade to that degree, that eventually Great Britain must lose more by the manufactures, than all the sums which it is possible for the colonies thus to pay can counterbalance—

That they humbly conceive, if the taxes which the inhabitants of this province are obliged annually to pay towards the support of the internal government, the restraint they are under in their trade, for the benefit of Great-Britain, and the consumption thereby occasioned of British manufactures be all considered, and have their due weight, it must appear, that the subjects in this province, are as fully burthened as their fellow subjects in Brit. in, and that they are whilst in America, more beneficial to the nation than they could be if they should be removed to Britain, and there held to a full proportion of the national taxes and duties of every kind.

Your petitioners therefore most humbly pray, that they may be relieved from the burdens, which they have humbly represented to have been brought upon them by the late act of parliament, as to the wisdom of the honourable house shall seem meet; that the privileges of the colonies, relative to their internal taxes, which they have so enjoyed, may still be continued to them, or that the consideration of such taxes upon the colonies may be referred until your petitioners, in conjunction with the other governments, can have opportunity to make a more full representation of the state and condition of the colonies, and the interest of Great-Britain with regard to them.

A. OLIVER, Secretary.

November 3, 1764.

Copy of an Address to the King, from the Council and House of Burgesses of the Province of Virginia.

To the King's Most Excellent Majesty.

Most Gracious Sovereign,

WE your Majesty's dutiful and loyal subjects, the Council and Burgesses of your ancient colony and dominion of Virginia, now met in General Assembly, beg leave to assure your Majesty of our firm and inviolable attachment to your sacred person and government: And as your faithful subjects here have at all times been zealous to demonstrate this truth, by a ready compliance with the royal requisitions during the late war, by which a heavy and oppressive debt of near half a million hath been incurred; so at this time they implore permission to approach the throne with humble confidence, and to entreat that your Majesty will be graciously pleased to protect your people of this Colony in the enjoyment of their ancient and inestimable right of being governed by such laws, respecting their internal polity and taxation, as are derived from their own consent, with the approbation of their sovereign or his substitute:—a right, which as men and the descendants of Britons, they have ever quietly possessed, since first by royal permission and encouragement they left the mother kingdom to extend its commerce and dominion.

to the most sacred and inviolable rights of Virginia most humbly and unanimously hope, that this invaluable birth-right, descended to them from their ancestors, and in which they have been protected by your royal predecessors, will not be suffered to receive injury under the reign of your Majesty, already so illustriously distinguished by your gracious attention to the liberties of the people.

That your Majesty may long live to make nations happy, is the ardent prayer of your faithful subjects the Council and Burgesses of Virginia.

To the Right Honourable the Lords Spiritual and Temporal, in Parliament Assembled.

*The Memorial of the Council and Burgesses of Virginia, now met in General Assem-

Humbly Represents,

THAT your Memorialists hope an application to your Lordships, the fixed and hereditary guardians of British liberty, will not be thought improper at this time, when measures are proposed subversive, as they conceive, of that freedom which all men, especially those who derive their constitution from Britain, have a right to enjoy: and they flatter themselves that your Lordships will not look upon them as objects so unworthy your attention, as to regard any impropriety in the form or manner of their application, for your Lordship's protection of their just and undoubted rights as Britons.

It cannot be presumption in your Memorialists, to call themselves by this distinguished name, since they are descended from Britons, who left their native country to extend its territory and dominion.

and who happily for Britain, and, as your Memorialists once thought for themselves too, effected this purpose. As our ancestors brought with them every right and privilege they could with justice claim, in their mother kingdom, their descendants may conclude they cannot be deprived of those rights without injustice.

Your Memorialists conceive it to be a fundamental principle of the British constitution, without which freedom can nowhere exist; that the people are not subject to any taxes, but such as are laid on them by their own consent, or by those who are legally appointed to represent them: Property must become too precarious for the genius of a free people, which can be taken from them at the will of others, who cannot know what taxes such people can bear, or the easiest mode of raising them; and who are not under that restraint, which is the greatest security against a burdensome taxation, when the representatives themselves must be affected by every tax imposed on the people.

Your Memorialists are therefore led into an humble confidence, that your Lordships will not think any reason sufficient to support such a power in the British Parliament, where the colonies cannot be constitutionally assumed, and which if they have a right to exercise on any occasion, must necessarily establish this melancholy truth, That the inhabitants of the colonies are the slaves of Britons, from whom they are descended, and from whom they might expect every indulgence, that the obligations of interest and affection can entitle them to.

Your Memorialists have been invested with the right of taxing their own people, from the first establishment of a regular government in the colony; and requisitions have been constantly made to them by their Sovereigns, on all occasions, when the assistance of the colony was thought necessary, to preserve the British interest in America, from whence they must conclude they cannot now be deprived of a right they have so long enjoyed, and which they have never forfeited.

The expences incurred during the last war, in compliance with the demands on this colony, by our late and present most gracious Sovereigns, have involved us in a debt of near half a million; a debt not likely to decrease under the continued expence we are at in providing for the security of the people against the incursions of our savage neighbours, at a time when the low state of our staple commodity, the total want of specie, and the late restrictions upon the trade of the colonies, render the circumstances of the people extremely distressful, and which, if taxes are accumulated upon them by the British Parliament, will make them truly deplorable.

Your Memorialists cannot suggest to themselves any reason why they should not still be trusted with the property of their people, with whose abilities, and with least burdensome mode of taxing, (with great deference to the superior wisdom of Parliament) they must be best acquainted.

Your Memorialists hope they shall not be suspected of being actuated on this occasion by any principles but those of the purest loyalty and affection, as they always endeavoured, by their conduct, to demonstrate that they consider their connections with Great Britain, the seat of Liberty, as their greatest happiness.

The duty they owe to themselves and their posterity, lays your Memorialists under the necessity of endeavouring to establish their constitution upon its proper foundation. And they do most humbly pray your Lordships to take this subject into your consideration, with the attention that is due to the well-being of the colonies, on which the prosperity of Great Britain does in a great measure depend.

assembled, that in a Committee of the whole House the 17th day of March last, it was resolved, That towards defending, protecting and securing the British colonies and plantations in America, it may be proper to charge certain stamp duties in the said colonies and plantations; and it being apprehended that the same subject which was then declined may be resumed and further pursued in succeeding session, the Council and Burgesses of Virginia, met in General Assembly, judge it their indispensable duty in respectful manner, but with decent firmness, to remonstrate against such a measure; that at least a cession of those rights which in their opinion must be infringed by that procedure, may not be inferred from their silence at so important a crisis.

They conceive it is essential to British Liberty that laws imposing taxes on the people ought not to be made without the consent of representatives chosen by themselves; who, at the same time that they are acquainted with the circumstances in their constituents, sustain a proportion of the burthen laid on them. This privilege inherent in the persons who discovered and settled these regions, could not be renounced, or forfeited by their removal hither, not as vagabonds and fugitives, but as citizens and encouraged by their Prince and animated with a laudable desire of enlarging the British dominion, and extending its commerce; on the contrary it was secured to them and their descendants, with all other rights and immunities of British subjects, by a royal charter, which hath been invariably recognized and confirmed by His Majesty and his predecessors.

sors in their commissions to the several Governors, granting a power, and prescribing a form of legislation: according to which, laws for the administration of justice, and for the welfare and good government of the colony, have been enacted by the Governor, Council and General Assembly; and to their requisitions and applications for supplies have been directed by the crown. As an instance of the opinion which former sovereigns entertained of these rights and privileges, we beg leave to refer to three acts of the General Assembly, passed in the thirty-second year of the reign of King Charles the Second (one of which is entitled, An Act for raising a public revenue for the better support of the government of His Majesty's Colony of Virginia, imposing several duties for that purpose) which being thought absolutely necessary, were prepared in England, and sent over by their then Governor, the Lord Culpepper, to be passed by the general Assembly, with a full power to give the royal assent thereto; and which were accordingly passed after several amendments were made to them here. Thus tender was His Majesty of the rights of his American subjects; and the remonstrants do not discern by what distinction they can be deprived of that sacred birth-right and most valuable inheritance, by their fellow-subjects; nor with what propriety they can be taxed or affected in their estates by the parliament, wherein they are not, and indeed cannot, constitutionally be represented.

And if it were proper for the parliament to impose taxes on the colonies at all, which the remonstrants take leave to think would be inconsistent with the fundamental principles of the constitution, the exercise of that power at this time would be ruinous to Virginia, who exerted herself in the late war it is feared beyond her strength; inasmuch that to redeem the money granted for that exigence, her people are taxed for several years to come: this, with the large expences incurred for defending the frontiers against the restless Indians, who have infested her as much since the peace as before, is so grievous that an increase of the burthen will be intolerable; especially as the people are very greatly distressed already from the scarcity of circulating cash amongst them, and from the little value of their staple at the British markets.

And it is presumed, that adding to that load which the colony now labours under, will not be more oppressive to her people than destructive of the interest of Great Britain: for the plantation trade, confined as it is to the mother country, hath been a principal means of multiplying and enriching her inhabitants; and if not too much discouraged, may prove an inexhaustible source of treasure to the nation. For satisfaction in this point, let the present state of the British fleet and trade be compared with what they were before the settlement of the colonies; and let it be considered, that whilst property in land may be acquired on very easy terms, in the vast uncultivated territory of North America, the colonists will be mostly, if not wholly employed in agriculture; whereby the exportation of their commodities to Great Britain, and the consumption of their manufactures supplied from thence, will be daily increasing. But this most desirable connection between Great Britain and her colonies, supported by such an happy intercourse of reciprocal benefits as is continually advancing the prosperity of both, must be interrupted, if the people of the latter, reduced to extreme poverty should be compelled to manufacture those articles they have been hitherto furnished with from the former.

From these considerations it is hoped that the Honourable House of Commons will not prosecute a measure, which those who may suffer it cannot but look upon as fitter for exiles driven from their native country after ignominiously forfeiting her favours and protection, than for the posterity of Britons, who have at all times been forward to demonstrate all due reverence to the mother kingdom, and are so instrumental in promoting her glory and felicity; and that British patriots will never consent to the exercise of anti-constitutional power; which even in this remote corner may be dangerous in its example to the interior parts of the British empire, and will certainly be detrimental to its commerce.

III. Passage of the Stamp Act.

Extract from the King's Speech, on opening the Session, January 10, 1765.

THE experience which I have had of your former conduct, makes me rely on your wisdom and firmness, in promoting that obedience to the laws, and respect to the legislative authority of this Kingdom, which is essentially necessary for the safety of the whole; and in establishing such regulations as may best connect and strengthen every part of my dominions, for their mutual benefit and support.

The affection which I bear to my people, excites my earnest wishes, that every session of parliament may be distinguished by some plans for the public advantage, and for their relief from those difficulties which an expensive war has brought upon them. My concurrence and encouragement shall never be wanting, where their welfare is concerned; and I trust that for the attainment of that great object, you will proceed with temper, unanimity and despatch.

Extract from the Lords' Address of Thanks.

Permit us, Sir, to offer to your Majesty our humble acknowledgments, for the gracious approbation which your Majesty is pleased to declare of our former conduct: and to give your Majesty the strongest assurances, that we will firmly persist in exerting our zealous endeavours to promote due obedience to the laws, and reverence to the legislative authority, of this Kingdom; and to establish such regulations as shall appear to be most conducive to the mutual benefit and support of all your Majesty's dominions.

With hearts full of duty and affection, we offer our unfeigned thanks to your Majesty, for your paternal care and tender concern for the difficulties which have been brought on your subjects by a long and burdensome war, and for your royal wishes that your parliament may take every occasion for their relief. Animated with these sentiments, we assure your Majesty that we will proceed with that temper, unanimity, and despatch which your Majesty is pleased to recommend to us in the pursuit of those great and important objects to which your Majesty has directed our attention.

Extract from the Commons' Address of Thanks.

Your Majesty may be assured that we will, with cheerfulness and despatch, raise such supplies as shall be found necessary for the current service of the year. And being thoroughly sensible of your Majesty's paternal concern for the relief and welfare of your people, in recommending to us the improvement of the public revenue, and the diminution of the national debt, on which the future safety of Great Britain must depend, we will apply ourselves with the utmost zeal and assiduity to carry into execution every proper measure which may contribute to these great and salutary purposes, and which the state of your Majesty's dominions, and the circumstances of the times, shall require.

We acknowledge with the liveliest gratitude, the gracious expressions of your Majesty's tender affection, and of your constant care, for the mutual benefit and support of all your Majesty's subjects. And we assure your Majesty, that, animated with these sentiments, we will endeavour to deserve the confidence which your Majesty is pleased to repose in us, by pursuing every plan which shall appear to us to be calculated for the public advantage; and will proceed therein with that temper and firmness, which will best conciliate and insure due submission to the laws, and reverence to the legislative authority of Great Britain.*

Proceedings of both Houses on the Stamp Act.

The next money bill was that which was on the 7th of February, ordered to be brought in upon the resolutions of the Committee of Ways and Means that day agreed to for imposing no less than fifty-three different sorts of Stamp and other duties upon our Colonies and Plantations in America; which was ordered to be prepared and brought in by the same gentlemen as before mentioned† except the Alderman who had been Chairman of the Committee, but had died on the preceding day, and therefore the report of these resolutions was made by Mr. Hunter, who was the Chairman when they were agreed to in the Committee. In pursuance of this order, Mr. Chancellor of the Exchequer, on the 13th presented a bill to the House, a bill for granting certain Stamp duties, and other duties in the British Colonies and Plantations in America; for applying the same towards further defraying the expenses of defending, protecting and securing such Colonies and Plantations. The bill was then read a first time, and ordered to be read a second time on the 15th: when, immediately after this order was read, there were offered to be presented to the House a petition of Edward Montague Agent for the Province of Virginia, praying to take their unhappy circumstances into consideration; and that their House of Burgesses might be continued in the possession of the rights and privileges they had so long and uninterruptedly enjoyed; and that the bill that might be intended to charge Stamp or any other duties on the Colony of Virginia.

Also a petition of the Governor and Company of the English Colony of Connecticut in New England, in North America, praying that the petitioners might be indulged in the exercise of the power of laying all interns

* Sir Robert Walpole is said to have had much clearer and juster notions concerning the means of making the British Colonies pay the mother country for their defence, and even contribute to her opulence, (than the Ministers in 1764-5.) A scheme for taxing them having been mentioned to him during the war with Spain, which broke out in the year 1739 he smiled and said, "I will leave that for some of my successors, who may have more courage than I have, and be less a friend to Commerce than I am. It has been a maxim with me, during my administration, to encourage the trade of the American Colonies in the utmost latitude, (nay it has been necessary to pass over some irregularities in their trade with Europe,) for by encouraging them to an extensive growing foreign commerce, if they gain L. 500,000, I am convinced that within two years afterwards full L. 250,000 of their gains will be in his Majesty's exchequer, by the labour and product of this Kingdom; a immense quantities of every kind of our manufactures go thither; and as they increase in their foreign American trade, more of our produce will be wanted. This is taxing them more agreeably both to their own constitution and to ours." Ann. Regis

† Mr. Alderman Marsh Dickerson, Mr. Jenkinson, Mr. Chancellor of the Exchequer, the Lord North, Sir John Turner, Mr. Hunter, Mr. Harris, of Christ Church, Mr. Attorney General, Mr. Solicitor General, and Mr. Whately.

Taxes on the said Colony; and that the resolution of that House, in the then last Session of Parliament, might not be carried into execution, by a bill for imposing a Stamp duty on the Colonies.

And also a petition of Wm. Middleton, Esq; Daniel Hughes, Esq; Joseph Nutt, Esq; in behalf of themselves, and the rest of the inhabitants and owners of property in his Majesty's Province of South Carolina, in America, praying that the House would not approve of any bill that might be offered, charging Stamp Duties in the Province of South Carolina.

Upon each of these respective petitions a motion was made, that the petition be brought up; but upon the question's being respectively put, it was upon a division carried in the negative by 245 to 49; and then the bill was read a second time, and committed to a Committee of the whole House, for the 18th, when the Committee went through the bill with amendments, and the House ordered the report to be received the next morning; which accordingly was, and several of the amendments being agreed to, the further consideration of the report was adjourned till the 21st; when the residue of the amendments being read a second time, one of them was disagreed to, and the rest were, with an amendment to one of them agreed to; and then several clauses were added, and several amendments made by the House; after which the bill with the amendment was ordered to be ingrossed.

On the 27th the bill which was now entitled, "a bill for granting and applying certain Stamp Duties and other Duties in the British Colonies and Plantations in America, towards further paying the expenses of defending, protecting, and securing the same; and for amending such parts of the several acts of Parliament, relating to the trade and revenues of the said Colonies and Plantations, as direct the manner of determining and recovering the penalties and forfeitures therein mentioned," was read a third time, and a clause was added by way of rider; and several amendments were made by the House to the Bill; after which it was resolved that the Bill do pass; and Mr. Pater-son was ordered to carry the Bill to the Lords, and desire their concurrence; which their Lordships granted without any amendment: and on the 22d of March, it received the royal assent by commission.

This Act, besides describing all the sorts of writings, and other things thereby made liable to a Stamp Duty, contains all the clauses almost that are inserted in any of our Stamp Duty laws, for regulating and enforcing the payment of our Stamp Duties; and towards the end of it, there are clauses for making the penalties and forfeitures incurred by this act, or by the American duty act, of the 4th of George III. or any other act relating to the trade or revenues of the said Colonies or Plantations, recoverable before any court of law or admiralty, in the Colony where the offence was committed, at the election of the informer or prosecutor; an abstract of this act would therefore be not only tedious but useless, as every man concerned in trade or business must have a copy of the act in his possession, that he may have recourse to it upon every occasion, in order to prevent his being guilty of a breach of it, and hereby subjecting himself to a penalty, and as a great number of new offences, new penalties and new officers, and officers, are by this act created we cannot wonder at its being extremely disgusting to our fellow subjects in America. History of Parliament.

I have seen with the most perfect approbation, that you have employed this season of tranquillity in promoting those objects which which I have recommended to your attention; and in framing such regulations as may best enforce the just authority of the legislature, and at the same time secure and extend the commerce, and unite the interests, of every part of my dominions.

The cheerfulness and prudence which you have shown, in providing for the necessary expenses of the present year, deserve my particular acknowledgments.

The many Bills which you have formed for the improvement and augmentation of the revenue in its several branches, and the early care which you have taken to discharge a part of the national debt, are the most effectual methods to establish the public credit upon the surest foundations, and to alleviate by degrees the burdens of my people.

It must be owned, to the honour of parliament, that, however smoothly the vote concerning the propriety of laying a stamp duty on the colonies might have passed the lower house in the preceding session, the final laying it on the present was attended with no small debates, both as to the British legislature's right to tax the colonies without their concurrence, and the expediency of exercising that right, if any, for the present purpose; though the petitions questioning the jurisdiction of parliament were not suffered to be read in the house, and the agents for the colonies refused to concur in another petition, which might have established a precedent, for their being heard in behalf of their respective colonies against the tax. Possibly, these gentlemen imagined that the petitioning for a suspension of the vote as a favour, might be deemed an acknowledgment, that their principals had no right to oppose the execution of it when passed into a law; or a surrender of that right, allowing they ever had any.

It was urged in favour of the colonies, that those who first planted them were not only driven out of the mother country by persecution, but had left it at their own risk and expense; that being thus forsaken, or rather worse treated, by her allies, except those common to mankind, were dissolved between them: they absolved from all duty of obedience to her, as she dispensed herself from all duty of protection to them; that if they accepted of any royal charters on the occasion, it was done through mere necessity; and that, as this necessity was not of their own making, these charters could not be binding upon them; that even allowing these charters to be binding, they were only bound thereby to that allegiance, which the supreme head of the realm might claim indiscriminately from all its subjects.

That it was extremely absurd, that they should be still thought to owe any submission to the legislative power of Great Britain which has not authority enough to shield them against the violences of the executive; and more absurd still that the people of Great Britain should pretend to exercise over them rights, which that very people affirm they might justly oppose, if claimed over themselves by others.

That it cannot be imagined, that, when the same people of Great Britain contended with the crown, it could be with a view of gaining these rights, which the crown might have usurped over others, and not merely recovering those, which the same crown arbitrarily claimed over themselves; that, therefore, allowing their original charters to be binding, as they had been deprived of them in an arbitrary and tyrannical manner, such as the people of Great Britain would not now by any means suffer, they should be considered as still entitled to the full benefit of them; that their being bound by these charters to make no laws, but such as, allowing for the difference of circumstances, should not clash with those of England, no more subjected them to the parliament of England, than their having been laid under the same restraint with regard to the laws of Scotland or any other country, would have subjected them to the parliament of Scotland, or the supreme authority of any other country; that, by these charters, they had a right to tax themselves for their own support and defence.

That it was their birth-right, even as the descendants of Englishmen, not to be taxed by any but their own representatives; that, so far from being actually represented in the parliament of Great Britain, they were not even virtually represented there, as the meanest inhabitants of Great Britain are, in consequence of their intimate connection with those who are actually represented; that, if laws made by the British parliament to bind all except its own members, or even all except such members and those actually represented by them, would be deemed, as most certainly they would, to the highest degree oppressive and unconstitutional, and resisted accordingly, by the rest of the inhabitants, though virtually represented; how much more oppressive and unconstitutional, must not such laws appear to those, who could not be said to be either actually or virtually represented?

That the people of Ireland were much more virtually represented in the parliament of Great Britain, than it was even pretended the people of the colonies could be, in consequence of the great number of Englishmen possessed of estates and places of trust and profit in Ireland, and their immediate descendants settled in that country, and of the great number of Irish noblemen and gentlemen in both houses of the British Parliament, and the greater number still constantly residing in Great Britain; and that, notwithstanding, the British parliament never claimed any right to tax the people of Ireland, in virtue of their being thus virtually represented amongst them.

That, whatever assistance the people of Great Britain might have given to the people of the colonies, it must have been given either from motives of humanity and fraternal affection, or with a view of being one day repaid for it, and not as the price of their liberty and independence; at least the colonies could never be presumed to have accepted it in that light; that, if given from motives of humanity and fraternal affection, as the people of the colonies had never given the mother country any room to complain of their want of gratitude, so they never should; if given with a view of being one day repaid for it, they were willing to come to a fair account, which, allowing for the assistance they themselves had often given the mother country, for what they must have lost, and the mother country must have got, by preventing their selling to others at higher prices than they could sell to her, and their buying from others at lower prices than they could buy from her, would, they apprehended, not turn out to her advantage so much as she imagined.

That their having heretofore submitted to laws made by the British parliament, for their internal government, could no more be brought as a precedent against them, than against the English themselves for their tameness under the dictates of an Henry, or the rod of a star chamber; the tyranny of many being as grievous to human nature as that of a few, and the tyranny of a few as grievous as that of a single person.

That, if liberty was the due of those who had sense enough to know the value of it, and courage enough to expose themselves to every danger and fatigue to acquire it, they were better entitled to it than even their brethren of Great Britain, since, besides facing, in the wilds of America, much more dreadful enemies, than the friends of liberty they left behind them could expect to meet in the fields of Great Britain, they had renounced not only their native soil, the love of which is so congenial with the human mind, and all those tender charities inseparable from it, but exposed themselves to all the risks and hardships unavoidable in a long voyage; and, after escaping the danger of being swallowed up by the waves, to the still more cruel danger of perishing ashore by a slow famine.

That, if in the first years of their existence one of them was guilty of some intemperate sallies, and all exposed to enemies which required the interposition and assistance of an English parliament, they were now most of them arrived at such a degree of maturity in point of policy and strength, as in a great measure took away the necessity of such interposition and assistance for the future.

At least that interposition and assistance would not be the less effectual for the colonies being represented in the British parliament, which was all the indulgence those colonies contended for.

That, allowing the British parliament's right to make laws for the colonies, and even tax them without their concurrence, there lay many objections against all the duties lately imposed on the colonies, and more still and weightier against that of the stamps now proposed to be laid upon them; that whereas those stamp-duties were laid gradually on the people of Great Britain, they were to be saddled all at once, with all their increased weight, on those of the colonies; that, if those duties were thought so grievous in England, on account of the great variety of occasions in which they were payable, and the great number of heavy penalties to which the best meaning persons were liable for not paying them, or not strictly conforming to all the numerous penal clauses in them, they must be to the last degree oppressive in the colonies, where the people in general could not be supposed so conversant in matters of this kind, and numbers did not understand even the language of these intricate laws, so much out of the course of what common sense alone might suggest to them as their duty, and common honesty engage them to practise, the almost only rule of action, and motive to it, compatible with that encouragement, which it is proper to give every new settler in every country, especially foreigners, in such a country as America.

Such were the principal arguments now urged in Great Britain, most of them within doors, against the justice of laying any tax at all, and the inconvenience of laying the stamp-tax in particular, upon the British colonies in America.

As to the fact of a strenuous opposition to the Stamp Act, I sat as a stranger in your gallery when the Act was under consideration. Far from any thing inflammatory, I never heard a more languid debate in this House. No more than two or three gentlemen, as I remember, spoke against the act, and that with great reserve and remarkable temper. There was but one division in the whole progress of this bill; and the minority did not reach to more than 39 or 40. In the House of Lords I do not recollect that there was any debate or division at all. I am sure there was no protest. In fact, the affair passed with so very, very little noise, that in town they scarcely knew the nature of what you were doing. The opposition to the bill in England never could have done this mischief, because there scarcely ever was less of opposition to a Bill of consequence.—Burke's Speech on American Taxation.

Extract of a Letter from J. Mauduit, Esq Agent in England, for the Province of Massachusetts, to the Secretary: London. Feb. 9, 1765.

"I have now to acquaint the great and general Court, that a stamp duty was proposed in the House of Commons, on the 6th instant. It was opened, by showing, that as the Colonies have a right to protection, so the Parliament has a right to tax them in aid thereof. Their several charters were referred to, and declared to be all under the control of Parliament. To this right of Parliament, every member who approved the measure, declared his assent; so that the only question was, whether a stamp duty should now be laid; and this was carried on a decision of fourteen. Petitions from Virginia and New York were offered by their agents to be presented, but no member would take them; and Mr. Jackson who had ours in his pocket, agreeably to what he and I settled, plainly saw it was, at that time fittest to remain there."

In a Letter from Mr. Mauduit, to the Committee of the House of Representatives, dated London, February 19, 1765; he says—

"Mr. Grenville opened the fitness of laying this (the Stamp) tax on the Colonies, and the incontestable right of Parliament to do it, without noticing the New-York address, or the Assembly's letter to me; both which papers were tacked together, and intended to be laid before the House, as a proof of an undutiful temper. Only one member, in the warmth of his speech, glanced at it; but in this he had no second. After about seven hours' debate, there was no other question, (nor indeed could be,) but whether a stamp duty should now be laid. The House divided upon it, and it was carried four to one."

Boston, April 4, 1765. We have seen the Resolves of the House of Commons respecting a Stamp Duty in the Colonies, fifty-five in number, a terrible string of them.

It is said that the following observation was made by a Member, on the Hardships of the above-mentioned Resolves, viz. "That where the Colonies stand on such high pretensions of Independence on the Supreme Legislative Authority of Great Britain, there is no moderating any thing."

We hear that at the Debate in the House of Commons, when the Resolves passed, not a Man spoke who did not declare his Opinion that America ought to be taxed; nor would any one introduce a Petition which would impeach the Parliament's Right, even the most interested, and those who are of the Opposition, all refused to present such a Petition.

Extract of a Letter from a gentleman in London, to his friend in Charleston, S. C. dated February 8, 1765.

After several meetings and consultations of the Agents for the colonies, as to the mode and measure of opposition to be given to the Stamp Bill, all of them having instructions to suggest the rights and privileges of the Colonies, and to dispute (as it were) the power of Parliament, it became necessary for those agents, who were not in Parliament to learn if Petitions disputing that power, would be received in the House. In the mean time if possible to ward off the intended blow, as most of the colonies had signified their inclination to assist the mother country upon proper requisitions from hence, though at present labouring under a heavy debt, it was agreed that it might have a good effect to have that inclination made known to the administration: For that purpose, Mr. Garth, Dr. Franklin, Mr. Jackson, and Mr. Mr. Ingersoll, were desired by the rest of the agents to attend the Chancellor of the Exchequer, who assured them of his readiness and desire to pursue such measures only as might give universal satisfaction; but that he was bound in honour to Parliament, to call for the Resolution of last year, and to propose to the House the carrying into execution a Stamp Duty in all America; adding, if the House should think on any other method of procuring assistance from America, more eligible, he should not object to it.

Accordingly on the 6th inst. he proposed to the Committee of Ways and Means, the measure the House by the resolution of last year, thought might be proper and necessary, that of charging Stamp Duties in America. The arguments urged, tended to prove, that the colonies were all virtually represented in Parliament, in the same manner as those of the subjects in Great Britain, who did not vote for representatives; sundry acts of Parliament were recited, that had from time to time been enacted, imposing duties on the American subjects; that there could not be a distinction between the powers of legislation and taxation; accounts were produced of the several sums raised by each colony on the continent, and in the West Indies, towards defraying their respective civil establishments, in the whole amounting to £75,000 per annum, or thereabouts there were likewise stated accounts of the several debts the Colonies stood charged with at present, amounting in the whole to about £900,000 Sterling, all of which would be paid off before the year 1769; that, therefore, it was but reasonable the colonies should contribute at least to take off that part of the burthen from the mother country which concerns the protection and defence of themselves: The power of Parliament was asserted, and so universally agreed to, that no petition disputing it will be received. The advocates for the Colonies therefore chose to take the sense of the House upon a question for adjourning; Mr. Alderman Beckford moved it, seconded by Sir William Meredith, they divided the committee about midnight, but it was carried against them by two hundred and forty-five to forty-nine.

[See letter of Mr. Charles, Agent of the Colony of New York, dated February 9, 1765, page 31.]

Extract of a Letter from a member of Parliament, to a friend in America, dated London, June 7, 1765.

As to the Stamp Act, I opposed it, as I declared it my intention to do all internal taxes; not because the People of America were unrepresented in Parliament, and therefore not constitutionally taxable; I well know that much the greater part of the Inhabitants of Great Britain have no votes in the Election of Members, and that a great part even of the land in this country, gives no share in the choice of the Legislature, yet all are taxable, and must be so necessarily; for the whole of our Statute Law would fall to the ground, if the consent of all bound by the Laws contained in it was necessary to the making it a Law.

But I have argued, that the Parliament may choose whether they will tax America or not; that they have a Right constitutionally to tax Ireland, yet do not exercise that Right; that I should think our Liberties endangered by their doing so; that I have the same objections, and some stronger, against their taxing America; that it is not necessary; that there are other ways of raising all the Money there, requisite for public service; that such ways have not yet failed, but the Colonies have in general showed the utmost alacrity to contribute to the common cause; that if two or three have not done their duty, it is hard all should suffer for the fault of two or three; that I think therefore there are the strongest reasons why, admitting that the Parliament is the universal unlimited Legislature of the British Dominions, as it undoubtedly is, it should yet voluntarily set bounds to the exercise of its power; and that if the majority of Parliament think they ought not to set these bounds, then they should give a share of the Election of the Legislature to the American Colonies; that they have done so formerly to much less considerable parts of the British Dominions; that without doing so, I shall think the Liberties of America in danger, and the Liberties of Great Britain too; that the former cannot be injured without danger to the latter; I do not say the liberty of America will be lost, merely in the having no share in the election of members, but I mean it will want the means it now has, and that every other part of the British Dominions has, to defend itself against the Oppressions of the Officers of the Crown, in case Assemblies should be rendered useless, or little necessary, which, however, I thank God, they are not yet.

Virginia Resolutions, May 29, 1765.

WHEREAS the honourable House of Commons in England, have of late drawn into question, how far the General Assembly of this colony hath power to enact laws for laying taxes and imposing duties, payable by the people of this, his Majesty's most ancient colony; for settling and ascertaining the same to all future times, the House of Burgesses of this present General Assembly have come to the several following resolutions:

Resolved, That the first adventurers and settlers of this, his Majesty's colony and dominion, brought with them and transmitted to their posterity, and all other his Majesty's subjects, since inhabiting in this, his Majesty's said colony, all the privileges, franchises, and immunities, that have at any time been held, enjoyed, and possessed by the people of Great Britain.

Resolved, That by two royal charters granted by King James the first, the colonists, aforesaid, are declared entitled to all the privileges, liberties, and immunities, of denizens and natural born subjects, to all intents and purposes, as if they had been abiding and born within the realm of England.

Resolved, That the taxation of the people by themselves, or by persons chosen by themselves to represent them, who can only know what taxes the people are able to bear, and the easiest mode of raising them, and are equally affected by such taxes themselves, is the distinguishing characteristic of British freedom, and without which the ancient constitution cannot subsist.

Resolved, That his Majesty's liege people of this most ancient colony, have uninterruptedly enjoyed the right of being thus governed by their own assembly in the article of their taxes and internal police, and that the same hath never been forfeited, or any other way given up, but hath been constantly recognized by the king and people of Great Britain.

Resolved, therefore, That the general assembly of this colony have the sole right and power to lay taxes and impositions upon the inhabitants of this colony; and that every attempt to vest such power in any person or persons whatsoever, other than the general assembly aforesaid, has a manifest tendency to destroy British as well as American freedom.

The foregoing Resolutions being laid before the Board of Trade, they on the 27th of August represented to the King in council,

That the resolutions, as they contain an absolute disavowal of the right of the Parliament of Great Britain to impose taxes upon several Houses of Representatives or Burher colonies, and a daring attack upon the constitution of this country, appear to us them of the resolution of this House thereon, to require an immediate and serious attention; and whatever further measures your or Burgesses to join this with their Majesty may, with the advice of your council, judge proper to be taken either for expressing your royal disapprobation of these proceedings, or for preventing the fatal consequences which they naturally tend to produce, we think it our duty to submit to your Majesty's consideration, whether, in the mean time, it may not be expedient to dispatch immediate instructions to your Majesty's servants in your Majesty's colony of Virginia, who may be concerned in enforcing the execution of the law for levying the duty upon stamps, that they do each in their several departments, in support of the authority of Parliament, vigorously exert themselves, and, with becoming resolution upon every occasion, exact a due obedience to all the laws of the land."

MASSACHUSETTS CIRCULAR.

Proceedings of the House of Representatives of Massachusetts Bay, June 6, 1765.

The House taking into consideration the many difficulties to which the Colonies are and must be reduced by the operation of some acts of Parliament; after some time spent,

On a motion made and seconded. Ordered that Mr. Speaker, Brigadier Ruggles, Col. Partridge, Col. Worthington, General Winslow, Mr. Otis, Mr. Cushing, Col. Saltonstall, and Capt. Sheafe, be a committee to consider what measures had best be taken, and make report.

The committee appointed for that purpose, reported as follows:

The committee appointed to consider what dutiful, loyal, and humble address may be proper to make to our Gracious Sovereign and his Parliament, in relation to the several acts passed for levying duties and taxes on the Colonies, have attended that service, and are humbly of opinion:—

That it is highly expedient there should be a meeting as soon as may be, of the committees from the Houses of Representatives and Burgesses in the several Colonies on this Continent, to consult together on the present circumstances of the Colonies, and the difficulties to which they are, and must be reduced by the operation of the late acts of Parliament for levying duties and taxes on the Colonies, and to consider of a general and humble address to his Majesty and the Parliament to implore relief.

And the committee are further of opinion that a meeting of such committees should be held at New-York, on the first Tuesday of October next, and that a committee of three persons be chosen by the House, on the part of this Province, to attend the same.

And that letters be forthwith prepared and transmitted to the respective Speakers of the several Houses of Representatives or Burher colonies in the Colonies aforesaid, advising them of the resolution of this House thereon, and inviting such Houses of Representatives or Burgesses to join this with their committees in the meeting, and for the purposes aforesaid.

And that a proper letter be prepared and forwarded to the Agent of the Province on these matters in the mean time.

Read and accepted, and ordered, that Mr. Speaker, Mr. Otis, and Mr. Lee, be a committee to prepare a draft of letters to be sent to the respective Speakers of the several Houses of Representatives in the Colonies, and make Report.

The committee appointed for that purpose, reported the following draft :

*Province of Massachusetts Bay, Boston,
June 8, 1765.*

Sir, The house of representatives of this province, in the present session of the general court, have unanimously agreed to propose a meeting, as soon as may be, of committees, from the houses of representatives or burgesses of the several British colonies on this continent, to consult together on the present circumstances of the colonies, and the difficulties to which they are, and must be reduced, by the operation of the acts of parliament for levying duties and taxes on the colonies; and to consider of a general, and united, dutiful, loyal and humble representation of their condition, to his Majesty and the Parliament, and to implore relief. The house of representatives of this province have also voted to propose, That such meeting be at the city of New-York, in the province of New-York, on the first Tuesday in October next; and have appointed a committee of three of their members to attend that service, with such as the other houses of representatives, or burgesses, in the several colonies, may think fit to appoint to meet them. And the committee of the house of representatives of this province, are directed to repair to said New-York, on said first Tuesday in October next, accordingly.

If, therefore, your honourable house should agree to this proposal, it would be acceptable, that as early notice of it as possible, might be transmitted to the speaker of the house of representatives of this province.

To the Speaker, &c.

Representation of the Lords Commissioners for Trade and Plantations, touching the Proceedings and Resolutions of the House of Representatives of Massachusetts Bay, with respect to the Act for levying a Duty upon Stamps in America, and to other Acts of Parliament of Great Britain.

To the King's Most Excellent Majesty.

May it please your Majesty,

THE house of representatives of your Majesty's province of Massachusetts Bay having last year, printed and published, in the journals of their proceedings, a letter from a committee of that house to their agent here; in which letter the acts and resolutions of the parliament of Great Britain were treated with the most indecent disrespect, and principles tending to a denial of the right of parliament to levy taxes upon your Majesty's subjects in the colonies, were openly avowed; our predecessors in office thought it their duty to transmit this transaction to your Majesty's consideration, to the end that such directions might be given, as the nature and importance of the matter should appear to require.

Since this, and since the passing the act of parliament for levying a stamp duty in America, the grounds of which act gave rise to the reflections contained in the above mentioned letter, the same spirit that dictated the sentiments it expresses, has appeared throughout the whole proceedings of the said house of representatives.

Upon the election of counsellors, who, by the constitution of this colony, are annually chosen by the house of representatives, the strongest endeavours were used to preclude your Majesty's secretary of state, who has always been a member of the council from his seat at that board; and this, as your Majesty's governor represents, merely on account of his having received an appointment (unsolicited) to be a distributor of the stamps; and the motion made in that house, to discontinue the annual salary allowed for the support of your Majesty's governor, upon which proceeding we have this day made separate representation to your Majesty seems to have arisen from the same motives.

These, however, being only attempts at individuals in the community, would not either have required or deserved your Majesty's attention, in the light in which we view them; but it further appears, from the journals of the house of representatives in their last session, that "this assembly, having thought fit to make the propriety and expediency of the stamp-act, and of other acts of parliament, a subject of open question and discussion," came to several resolutions and proceedings thereupon, which they kept secret till the last day of their session, when they published them in their printed journals—[Then follow the resolutions—Then the board of trade proceeds thus:] The object of the resolutions and proceedings of the house of representatives of Massachusetts Bay, is to recommend to, and induce, the rest of your Majesty's colonies in America, to join in a general congress of committees from the several assemblies, independent of the other branches of the legislature, and without any previous application to your Majesty to consider and deliberate upon the acts of the parliament of this kingdom. As this appears to us to be the first instance of a general congress, appointed by the assemblies of the colonies without the authority of the crown; a measure which we conceive of dangerous tendency in itself, and more especially so when taken for the purposes expressed in the above-mentioned resolution, and connected with the spirit that has appeared throughout the whole conduct of this particular assembly, we therefore think it our indispensable duty to submit this matter to your Majesty's consideration, for such directions as your Majesty, with the advice of your council may think proper and expedient to give thereupon.

All which is most humbly submitted, &c.

V. Some of the Proceedings in the Colonies, relative to the Acts of Parliament, and the Rights of Colonies.

Providence, R. I. 13 Aug. 1765. Instructions given by the Town of Providence, R. I. on the 13th of August, 1765, to their Deputies in the General Assembly.

A full and free enjoyment of British Liberty, and of our particular rights as colonists, long since precisely known and ascertained, by uninterrupted practice and usage, from the first settlement of this country down to this time, is of unspeakable value, and strenuously to be contended for by the dutiful subjects of the best frame of government in the world, any attempts to deprive them thereof must be very alarming, and ought to be opposed, although in a decent manner, yet with the utmost firmness.

We conceive that some late resolutions of the Parliament of Great Britain, for taxing us without our own consent, have a tendency to divest us of our most valuable privileges as Englishmen; and that the measures adopted by the Ministry and the Parliament, in this behalf, if carried into execution, will be a manifest infraction of our inherent rights, as members of the British Government, and unspeakably injurious in the present distressed and involved state of the Colony.

The Ministry, in justification of this encroachment upon the incontestable rights of his Majesty's liege subjects in these parts of the world, have pretended that these Colonies are represented in Parliament by the British Members: the contrary is so evident, that the bare denial of the position is sufficient to refute it.

The refusal of Parliament to hear the humble petitions of the Colonies against the Stamp Act, the enlargement of the Admiralty Jurisdiction, and the Burthening Trade, we look upon as a great grievance, and directly against our rights as subjects.

With the utmost concern and dread we consider the extension of the powers of the Court of Admiralty; and must freely declare to the whole world, that we look upon our natural rights to be diminished in the same proportion as the powers of that court are extended; and in this particular we are unhappily distinguished from our fellow subjects in Britain.

We then think it needful in this critical conjuncture, to give unto you, who are our deputies, some instructions to be by you observed in your representation of us in the General Assembly.

In the first place we recommend it to you, in the most express manner to use your utmost endeavours, that commissioners be appointed by the assembly, to meet the commissioners from the other Colonies on the Continent, at New-York, on the first day of October next, agreeable to the proposal and request of the Province of Massachusetts Bay, signified to this Colony, in order to unite in a petition to the King, for relief from the Stamp Act, and other grievances.

In the choice of these commissioners, we are assured from our knowledge of your virtue, that you will pay more attention to merit, skill in public business, and a zeal for the welfare of the Colonies, than to any other consideration.

We likewise request you to do all in your power, consistent with our relations to Great Britain, towards postponing the introduction of the Stamp Act, into this Colony until the Colonies may have an opportunity to be heard in defence of such just rights, as they will be deprived of by an execution of it: And to this end, that you endeavour to procure our essential rights and privileges to be asserted in General Assembly, by votes or resolves, to the following effect, viz.

1. That the first adventurers, settlers, of this his Majesty's Colony and Dominion of Rhode Island, and Providence Plantations, brought with them, and transmitted to their posterity, and all other his Majesty's subjects since inhabited in this his Majesty's Colony, all the privileges and immunities, that have at any time been held, enjoyed, and possessed by the people of Great Britain.

2. That by a charter granted by King Charles II in the 15th year of his reign, it is declared and granted unto the governor and company of this Colony, and their successors, that all and every the subjects of his said Majesty, his heirs and successors, which were then planted within the said Colony, or which should thereafter go to inhabit within the said Colony, and all and every of their children which had been born there, or which should afterwards be born there, or on the sea going thither, or returning from thence, should have and enjoy all the liberties and immunities of free and natural subjects within any of the dominions of his said Majesty, his heirs or successors, to all intents, constructions, and purposes whatsoever as if they, and every of them, were born within the realm of England.

3. That his Majesty's liege people of this Colony, have enjoyed the right of being governed by their own Assembly, in the article of taxes and internal police; and that the same hath never been forfeited, or any other way yielded up, but hath been constantly recognized by the King and people of Britain.

4. That therefore his Majesty, or his substitutes; together with the General Assembly of this Colony, have in their representative capacity, the only exclusive right to lay taxes and imposts upon the inhabitants of this Colony; and that every attempt to vest such power in any person or persons whatever, other than the General Assembly aforesaid, is unconstitutional, and hath a manifest tendency to destroy British as well as American liberty.

5. That his Majesty's liege people, the inhabitants of this Colony, are not bound to yield obedience to any law or ordinance designed to impose any internal taxation whatsoever upon them, other than the laws and ordinances of the General Assembly aforesaid.

And inasmuch as it hath lately been drawn into question, how far the people of this his Majesty's dominion of Rhode Island have the right of being tried by juries, we earnestly recommend it to you to procure an act to be passed, if it may be done, declaring that the courts of common law only, and not any court of admiralty, have, and ought to have, jurisdiction in all causes growing and arising in this Colony, on account of levying or collecting any internal taxes, or of any matters relating thereto: and that such process and way of trial shall hereafter be had and used in such matters, as have been usual and accustomed time out of mind. And further that no decree or court of admiralty, respecting these matters shall be executed in this Colony.

We think that an address of thanks ought to be voted, by the General Assembly, to those gentlemen who distinguished themselves at the last session of Parliament, in the defence of liberty and the colonies; in particular to Gen. Conway, and Col. Isaac Barre.

As to the other matters not of such general concernment as the foregoing, we leave their management to your prudence and judgment in which we put the greatest confidence.

JAMES ANGEL, Town Clerk.

At a Town Meeting of the Town of Little Compton, in the Colony of Rhode Island, on the 27th day of August, 1765.

It is unanimously Voted and Resolved, that the following Instructions be given to the gentlemen who represent this Town in the General Assembly:—

AS the present Crisis of affairs in America, is truly alarming, our Liberty, as free-born Englishmen being greatly encroached upon by the Parliament of Great Britain, in burdening us with internal taxes without our knowledge or consent, or without so much as allowing us the least shadow of Representation in that August Assembly, or ever suffering our Petitions for redress of Grievances to be read before them:—The extension of the power of the Admiralty courts in America, by which that darling and dear-bought privilege of being tried by juries, in cases affecting our property, is in a great measure abridged:—We cannot reflect upon these unconstitutional measures, without dreading their consequences, or without asserting our Liberty as free-born Englishmen, in the most public manner we can.

We therefore earnestly recommend to you, Gentl. men, who are the Deputies to represent us in General Assembly, to use your utmost endeavours, that, in a particular manner, the following essential things, at this critical conjuncture may take place.

That whereas the neighbouring governments have thought proper to appoint Commissioners to meet at New-York, on the first day of October next, in order to unite in a petition to the King, for relief from the Stamp-Act, and other Grievances; you are requested by us to use your utmost endeavours, that such Commissioners from this Colony be appointed to join them as you can confide in, as friends to British Liberty and especially to the Liberties and Privileges which this Colony has received by Charter.

You are requested likewise to use the utmost of your endeavours, that our essential rights and liberties be asserted in General Assembly by Votes or Resolves, particularly—

1. That the Inhabitants of this Colony have as clear and full a Right to all the Liberties and Privileges of Englishmen, as if they had been born and abiding in the Realm of England, and consequently

2. That levying Internal Taxes on the Inhabitants of this his Majesty's Colony of Rhode Island, and Providence Plantations, by the Parliament of Great Britain, without the consent of the Legislature of the Colony, or an actual Representation of the Colony in the supreme legislature of the Nation, is in the highest degree unconstitutional: and

3. That all causes, growing and arising in this Colony, on account of levying internal taxes, cannot constitutionally, or consistent with the Liberties of the Colonies, be tried by any other court, excepting the courts of common law.

And we put the greatest confidence in you, that in all other matters of less general concernment, you will act conformably to the happy Constitution of your country: That you will be steady assertors of American Liberty, particularly of that of your own Colony: And to sum up the whole, that you will act like Englishmen.

JEPHTHAH PEARCE, Town Clerk.

Newport, R. I. September 3, 1765.

The Freemen of the town of Newport, at a Meeting held on the 3d inst. unanimously voted. That the following Instructions should be given to the gentlemen who represent them in the General Assembly, viz: To the Deputies of the town of Newport. Gentlemen.

THE Confidence we have in your integrity and ability, hath induced us repeatedly to make choice of you to represent us in the General Assembly; and it is with pleasure we reflect that your conduct hath justly merited our approbation.

The trust reposed in you, at all times requires your attention to the public interest: But at this critical conjuncture, when the liberties of his Majesty's Subjects in America are in the greatest danger of being subverted, the utmost wisdom, and the most unshaken fortitude are necessary to extricate us from our perplexed and embarrassed situation:

With hearts filled with loyalty and affection to his Majesty, and inviolably attached to Great Britain, the inhabitants of this Colony cheerfully complied with every requisition made by the Crown during the late long and bloody war; and exerted themselves in it with a spirit far exceeding their ability. They were happy in receiving the approbation of his Majesty and the Parliament; and with great reason flattered themselves, that the same favours and indulgence, which had been always shown them by their mother country, would have been continued to them: That their ruined commerce would revive: That, being freed from the heavy expenses of the War, they should find means in time to discharge the enormous debt accumulated by it: and that, together with the blessings of peace, they should enjoy inviolate the inestimable liberties and privileges which they received from their ancestors, and wished to transmit to their latest posterity.

Instead of these parental favours, by some of the late acts of the British Parliament, the channels of our commerce are obstructed—our property subjected to the arbitrary decisions of the courts of admiralty—and an internal tax levied upon us without our consent.

Trials by juries, and the being taxed by none but their own representatives, are the inherent rights of the inhabitants of this Colony: They have been confirmed by a Royal Charter: They were never contested, but have always been recognised by the King and Parliament of Great Britain.

Who then can see those glorious bulwarks of liberty, Trials by Juries, and the Right of Taxation, shocked to their foundation, and not feel for his country? Who is there, that can feel, and suppress his concern?

The inhabitants of the other Colonies affected with their present distresses, and animated with their noble spirit of liberty, have proposed a meeting of Commissioners from all the Colonies, to be held at New-York, to consult upon, and join in, such measures as shall be thought necessary for the removal of these grievances.

Inspired with the same sentiments, we expect that you will give your utmost attention to those important objects, the Courts of Admiralty, and the Act for levying Stamp Duties: that while you express the greatest affection and loyalty to our Sovereign, and all proper regard to that August Assembly, the British Parliament, you assert our Rights with a becoming Firmness.

That you will use your utmost endeavours, that the General Assembly of this Colony appoint Commissioners to meet those who are or shall be appointed by the other Colonies, upon this most interesting occasion; and, in general, to join and co-operate with them in every reasonable and probable measure for the preservation of our Liberties.

It is for Liberty—That Liberty, for which our Fathers bled!—That Liberty, which is dearer to a generous mind than life itself, that we now contend!—The cause is vast and important; and if, the efforts of his Majesty's loyal subjects in North America be but equal to its importance, we have the highest reason to think that notwithstanding the disregard shown to the separate remonstrances of the Colonies, their united endeavours will be crowned with success.

WM. CODDINGTON, Town Clerk.

Rhode-Island Resolutions, Sept. 16, 1765.

THIS Assembly taking into their most serious Consideration, an act passed by the Parliament of Great Britain, at their last Sessions for levying Stamp duties, and other internal duties in North America, do Resolve,

1. That the first Adventurers, Settlers of this his Majesty's Colony and Dominion of Rhode Island and Providence Plantations, brought with them and transmitted to their posterity, and all other his Majesty's subjects, since inhabiting in this his Majesty's Colony, all the privileges and immunities that have at any time been held, enjoyed, and possessed by the people of Great Britain.

2. That by a Charter granted by King Charles the Second, in the 15th year of his reign, the Colony aforesaid is declared entitled to all the Privileges and Immunities of natural born subjects, to all intents and purposes, as if they had been abiding and born within the realm of England.

3. That his Majesty's liege people of this Colony have enjoyed the right of being governed by their own Assembly in the article of Taxes and Internal police; and that the same have never been forfeited, or any other way, yielded up, but have been constantly recognised by the King and people of Britain.

4. That, therefore, the General Assembly of this Colony have, in their representative capacity, the only exclusive right to lay taxes, and impose upon the inhabitants of this Colony: And that every attempt to vest such power in any Person or Persons whatever, other than the General Assembly aforesaid, is unconstitutional and hath a manifest tendency to destroy the Liberties of the people of this Colony.

5. That his Majesty's liege people the inhabitants of this Colony, are not bound to yield obedience to any law or ordinance designed to impose any internal taxation whatsoever upon them, other than the laws or ordinances of the General Assembly aforesaid.

6. That all the Officers in this Colony, appointed by the authority thereof, be, and they are hereby directed to proceed in the execution of their respective offices, in the same manner as usual: And that this Assembly will indemnify and save harmless all the said officers, on account of their conduct agreeable to this Resolution.

THE house taking into consideration, that an act of parliament has lately passed in England, for imposing certain Stamp-duties and other duties on his Majesty's subjects in America, whereby they conceive some of their most essential and valuable rights, as British subjects, to be deeply affected, think it a duty they owe to themselves and their posterity, to come to the following resolutions.

1. That the assembly of this province have from time to time, whenever requisitions have been made by his Majesty, for carrying on military operations for the defence of America, most cheerfully and liberally contributed their full proportion of men and money for those services.

2. That whenever his Majesty's service shall for the future require the aids of the inhabitants of this province, and they shall be called upon for that purpose in a constitutional way, it will be their indispensable duty most cheerfully and liberally to grant to his Majesty their proportion of men and money, for the defence, security and other public services of the British American Colonies.

3. That the inhabitants of this province, are entitled to all the liberties, rights and privileges of his Majesty's subjects in Great-Britain or elsewhere, and that the constitution of government in this province is founded on the natural rights of mankind, and the noble principles of English liberty, and therefore is ought to be perfectly free.

4. That it is the inherent birth-right, and indubitable privilege of every British subject, to be taxed only by his own consent, or that of his legal representatives, in conjunction with his Majesty or his substitutes.

5. That the only legal representatives of the inhabitants of this province, are the persons they annually elect to serve as members of Assembly.

6. That the taxation of the people of this province by any other persons whatsoever, than such their representatives in assembly, is unconstitutional, and subversive of their most valuable rights.

7. That the laying taxes upon the inhabitants of this province in any other manner, being manifestly subversive of public liberty, must of necessary consequence be utterly destructive of public happiness.

8. That the vesting an authority in the courts of admiralty, to decide in suits relating to the stamp-duties and other matters foreign to their proper jurisdiction, is highly dangerous to the liberties of his Majesty's American subjects, contrary to Magna Charta, the great charter and fountain of English liberty, and destructive of one of their most darling and acknowledged rights, that of trials by juries.

9. That it is the opinion of this house, that the restraints imposed by several late acts of parliament on the trade of this province, at a time when the people labour under an enormous load of debt, must of necessity be attended with the most fatal consequences, not only to this province, but to the trade of our mother country.

10. That this house think it their duty, thus firmly to assert, with modesty and decency, their inherent rights, that their posterity may learn and know, that it was not with their consent and acquiescence, that any taxes should be levied on them by any persons but their own representatives, and are desirous that these their resolves should remain on their minutes, as a testimony of the zeal and ardent desire of the present house of assembly, to preserve their inestimable rights, which as Englishmen they have possessed ever since this province was settled, and to transmit them to their latest posterity.

Maryland Resolutions, September 28, 1765.

By the Lower House of Assembly,
RESOLVED unanimously, That the first adventurers and settlers of this province of Maryland brought with them, and transmitted to their posterity, and all other his Majesty's subjects since inhabiting in this province, all the liberties, privileges, franchises, and immunities, that at any time have been held, enjoyed and possessed, by the people of Great Britain.

2. That it was granted by Magna Charta and other the good laws and statutes of England, and confirmed by the petition and Bill of Rights, that the subjects should not be compelled to contribute to any tax, tallage, aid or other like charge, not set by common consent of parliament.

3. That by a royal charter, granted by his Majesty, King Charles I. in the eighth year of his reign, and in the year of our Lord, 1633, to Cecilius, then, Lord Baltimore, it was, for the encouragement of people to transport themselves and families into this province amongst other things covenanted and granted by his said Majesty, for himself, his heirs and successors, as followeth:

"And we will also, and of our more special grace, for us, our heirs, and successors, we do strictly enjoin, constitute, ordain, and command, That the said Province shall be of our allegiance, and that all and singular the subjects and liege people of us, our heirs, and successors, transported, or to be transported into the said Province, and the children of them and of such as shall descend from them, there already born, or hereafter to be born, be, and shall be denizens and lieges of us, our heirs, and successors, of our Kingdoms of England and Ireland, and be in all things held, reputed, and esteemed, as the liege faithful people of us, our heirs and successors, born within our kingdom of England, and likewise any lands, tenements, revenues, services and other hereditaments whatsoever, within our kingdom of England, and other our dominions, may inherit, or otherwise purchase, receive, take, have, hold, buy and possess, and them may occupy and enjoy, give, sell, alien, and bequeath, as likewise all liberties, franchises and privileges, of this our kingdom of England, freely, quietly, and peaceably have and possess, occupy and enjoy as our liege people, born, or to be born, within our said kingdom of England, without let, molestation, vexation, trouble or grievance, of us, our heirs, and successors; any statute, act, ordinance, or provision, to the contrary thereof notwithstanding.

"And further our pleasure is, and by these presents for us, our heirs and successors. We do covenant and grant to and with the said now lord Baltimore, his heirs and assigns, that we, our heirs and successors, shall at no time hereafter, set or make, or cause to be set, any imposition, custom, or other taxation, rate or contribution whatsoever, in or upon the dwellers and inhabitants of the aforesaid Province, for their lands, tenements, goods or chattels, within the said Province, or in or upon any goods or merchandises, within the said Province, or to be laden or unladen within any the ports or harbours of the said Province: And our pleasure is, and for us, our heirs, and successors, we charge and command, that this our declaration, shall be henceforward, from time to time, received and a lowed in all our courts, and before all the judges of us, our heirs and successors, for a sufficient and lawful discharge, payment and acquittance: Commanding all and singular our officers and ministers of us, our heirs and successors, and enjoining them, upon pain of our high displeasure, that they do not presume, at any time, to attempt any thing to the contrary of the premises, or that they do, in any sort withstand the same; but they be at all times aiding and assisting, as is fitting, unto the said now lord Baltimore, and his heirs, and to the inhabitants and merchants of Maryland, and, aforesaid, their servants, ministers, factors, and assigns, in the full use and fruition of the benefit of this our charter."

4. That it is the unanimous opinion of this house, that the said charter is declaratory of the constitutional rights and privileges of the freemen of this province.

5. That trials by juries is the grand bulwark of liberty, the undoubted birth-right of every Englishman, and consequently of every British subject in America: And that the erecting other jurisdictions for the trial of matters of fact, is unconstitutional, and renders the subject insecure in his liberty and property.

6. That it is the unanimous opinion of this house, That it cannot with any truth or propriety be said, That the freemen of this province of Maryland are represented in the British parliament.

7. That his Majesty's liege people of this ancient province, have always enjoyed the right of being governed by laws, to which they themselves have consented in the article of taxes, and internal polity; and that the same hath never been forfeited, or any other way yielded up; but hath been constantly recognised by the king and people of Great Britain.

8. That it is the unanimous opinion of this house, that the representatives of the freemen of this province, in their legislative capacity, together with the other part of the legislature, hath the sole right to lay taxes and impositions on the inhabitants of this province, or their property and effects: And that the laying, imposing, levying or collecting, any tax on or from the inhabitants of Maryland, under colour of any other authority, is unconstitutional, and a direct violation of the rights of the freemen of this province.

PLYMOUTH, MASS., 21 Oct. 1776.

At a Legal Meeting of the Freeholders and other Inhabitants of the town of Plymouth, this 21st day of October, 1765, James Warren, Esq. chosen Moderator—Unanimously agreed on the following Instructions, viz:

To THOMAS FOSTER, Esq.

AS we have the highest esteem of the British Constitution, which we think founded on the true principles of Liberty, and to deserve, on many accounts, the preference to any other now on Earth, we can but reflect with pleasure on our own happiness, in being sharers in that Liberty, those rights, and that security, which results from them to every subject, in the wide extended dominions of our most gracious Sovereign, who has not forfeited his right to them by disloyalty to the King, want of attachment and a reasonable submission to the British Government, and love to his fellow subjects there; these are so foreign to the true character of the people of this country, that certainly itself has never been able to fix it upon them. We have evinced our loyalty to our King, our affection to the British Government and our Mother Country, on all occasions, by an uncommon readiness to assist in any measures with our Blood and Treasure, to extend their conquests and to enlarge those dominions, from which they reap so many and great advantages. At the same time that we reflect on our happiness in having a natural and constitutional right to all the privileges of our fellow subjects in Great Britain, we behold with pain and horror, any attempts to deprive us of them, and cannot but look on such attempts as instances of the greatest unkindness and injustice.

This is the subject of our present complaint, which not without reason echo from every mouth in every corner of this distressed and injured country. Our youth, the flower of this country, are many of them slain, our treasure exhausted in the service of our Mother country, our trade, and all the numerous branches of business dependent on it, reduced, and almost ruined, by severe acts of Parliament, and now we are threatened by a late act of Parliament with being loaded with internal taxes, without our own consent, or the voice of a single Representative in Parliament, and with being deprived of that darling privilege of an Englishman, trial by his peers, the consequence of the unconstitutional extension of the power of Courts of Admiralty in America; these two are the main pillars of the British Constitution, and the glory of every Freeman there, so that the depriving us of them, create such a distinction between us and them our fellow subjects, as cannot be accounted for from any principles of justice and impartiality; and we certainly have never given occasion for.

We shall say nothing on this occasion of our inability to pay the many and great taxes laid upon us by the Stamp Act; of the many new crimes opened by it, which cannot but be committed by many People, however desirous they may be to avoid them; of the ridiculous penalties annexed to them; or of the great hardship in subjecting the trial of them to the judgment of such a Court, and such a manner of conviction, or of the many disadvantages which must arise from these measures to Great Britain herself. These are obvious facts, and have already been heard of in such a mastery and convincing manner, by some of the friends of both this and the Mother Country, and of the British Constitution, (for they cannot be separated,) as to render it unnecessary to enlarge on them.

You, Sir, represent a people who are not only descended from the first settlers of this country, but inhabit the very spot they first possessed. Here was first laid the foundation of the British Empire, in this part of America, which from a very small beginning, has increased and spread in a manner very surprising, and almost incredible; especially when we consider that all this has been effeeted without the aid or assistance of any power on earth, that we have Defended, Protected, and Secured, ourselves against the invasions and cruelty of savages, and the subtlety and inhumanity of our inveterate and natural enemies the French; and all this, without the approbation of any tax by Stamps, or Stamp Acts laid upon our fellow subjects in any part of the King's Dominions, for defraying the expenses thereof.

This place, Sir, was at first the Asylum of Liberty, and we hope will ever be preserved sacred to it; though it was then no more than a forlorn wilderness, inhabited only by savage men and beasts. To this place our Fathers, (whose memories be revered,) possessed of the principles of Liberty in their purity, disdaining slavery, fled to enjoy those civil rights which they had an undoubted right to, but were deprived of by the hands of violence and oppression in their native country.

We, Sir, their posterity, the Frecholders and other inhabitants of this Town, legally assembled for that purpose, possessed of the same sentiments and retaining the same ardour for Liberty, think it our indispensable duty on this occasion, to express to you, these our sentiments of the Stamp Act, and its fatal consequences to this country, and to entjoin upon you, as you regard not only the welfare, but the very being of this people, that you (consistent with our allegiance to the King, and relation to the Government of Great Britain,) disregarding all proposals for that purpose, exert all your power and influence to oppose the execution of the Stamp Act, at least until we hear the success of our Petitions for relief.

We, likewise, to avoid disgracing the memories of our Ancestors, as well as the reproaches of our own consciences, and the curses of posterity, recommend it to you to obtain, if possible, in the Honourable House of Representatives of this Province, a full and explicit assertion of our Rights, and to have the same entered on their public Records, that all generations yet to come may be convinced that we have not only a just sense of our Rights and Liberties, but that we never (with submission to Divine Providence) will be slaves to any power on earth; and as we have at all times an abhorrence of tumults and disorders, we think ourselves happy, in being at present under no apprehensions of any, and in having good and wholesome laws sufficient to preserve the peace of the Province in all future times, unless provoked by some imprudent measures: So we think it by no means advisable for you to interest yourself in the Protection of Stamp Papers or Stamp Officers.

The only thing we have further to recommend to you at this time, is, to observe on all occasions a suitable frugality and economy in the public expenses; and that you consent to no unnecessary or unusual grant at this time of distress, when the people are groaning under the burthens of heavy taxes: And that you use your endeavours to inquire into, and bear testimony against any past, and to prevent any future unconstitutional draughts on the Public Treasury.

Massachusetts Resolutions, 29 Oct. 1765.

In the House of Representatives.

According to the order of the day, there being a very full House, the following draft which had been laid upon the Table, was particularly considered, and thereupon voted:—

WHEREAS the just rights of his Majesty's subjects of this province, derived from them from the British Constitution, as well as the royal charter, have been lately drawn into question: In order to ascertain the same this house do unanimously come into the following resolves.

1. That there are certain essential rights of the British constitution of government which are founded in the Law of God and Nature, and are the common rights of mankind;—therefore,

2. That the inhabitants of this province are unalienably entitled to those essential rights in common with all men: and that no law of society can, consistent with the law of God and Nature, divest them of these rights.

3. That no man can justly take the property of another without his consent: and that upon this original principle the right of representation in the same body, which exercises the power of making laws for levying taxes which is one of the main pillars of the British Constitution, is evidently founded.

4. That this inherent right, together with all other essential rights, liberties, privileges and immunities of the people of Great Britain have been fully confirmed to them by Magna Charta, and by former and later acts of Parliament.

5. That his Majesty's subjects in America are, in reason and common sense, intitled to the same extent of liberty, with his Majesty's subjects in Britain.

6. That by the declaration of the royal charter of this province, the inhabitants are entitled to all the rights, liberties and immunities of free and natural subjects of Great Britain, to all intents, purposes and constructions whatever.

7. That the inhabitants of this Province appear to be entitled to all the rights aforementioned, by an act of Parliament, 13th of Geo. II.

8. That those rights do belong to the inhabitants of this Province, upon principles of common justice; their ancestors having settled this country at their sole expense; and their posterity having constantly approved themselves most loyal and faithful subjects of Great Britain.

9. That every individual in the Colonies is as advantageous to Great Britain, as if he were in Great Britain, and held to pay his full proportion of taxes there; and as the inhabitants of this Province pay their full proportion of taxes, for the support of his Majesty's government here, it is unreasonable for them to be called upon to pay any part of the charges of the government there.

10. That the inhabitants of this Province are not, and never have been, represented in the Parliament of Great Britain: and that such a representation there, as the subjects in Britain do actually and rightfully enjoy, is impracticable for the subjects in America:—and further, that, in the opinion of this house, the several subordinate powers of legislation in America, were constituted upon the apprehensions of this impracticability.

11. That the only method, whereby the Constitutional rights of the subjects of this Province can be secure, consistent with a subordination to the supreme power of Great Britain, is by the continued exercise of such powers of government as are granted in the royal charter, and a firm adherence to the privileges of the same.

12. As a just conclusion from some of the foregoing resolves, That all acts made by any power whatever, other than the General Assembly of this Province, imposing taxes on the inhabitants, are infringements of our inherent and unalienable rights, as men and British subjects, and render void the most valuable declarations of our charter.

13. That the extension of the powers of the Court of Admiralty within this Province, is a most violent infraction of the right of trials by juries.—A right, which this house, upon the principles of their British ancestors, hold most dear and sacred; it being the only security of the lives, liberties and properties of his Majesty's subjects here.

14. That this House owe the strictest allegiance to his most Sacred Majesty, King George the Third: that they have the greatest veneration for the Parliament; and that they will, after the example of all their predecessors, from the settlement of this country, exert themselves to their utmost, in supporting his Majesty's authority in the province,—in promoting the true happiness of his subjects; and in enlarging the extent of his dominion:—

Ordered. That all the foregoing resolves be kept in the records of this House; that a just sense of liberty, and the firm sentiments of loyalty, may be transmitted to posterity.

Connecticut Resolutions, October, 1765.

THE House of Representatives of his Majesty's Colony of Connecticut, in New England, in General Court Assembled, taking into their serious consideration, that an act of the Parliament of Great Britain, has been lately passed, for granting and applying certain Stamp Duties, &c. in the British Colonies and Plantations in America, find ourselves distressed with the most alarming apprehensions, when we observe that Grand Legislature to entertain sentiments so different from ours, respecting what we ever reckoned amongst our most important and essential rights as Englishmen.

The Constitution of the British Government we esteem the happiest in the world: founded on maxims of consummate wisdom, and in the best manner calculated to secure the prerogatives of the Crown, while it maintains the just rights and liberties of the subject.—By virtue of which Constitution, and the Royal Grant and Charter of his Majesty King Charles the Second, the inhabitants of this Colony have enjoyed great and inestimable Liberties and privileges of a civil and religious nature, for more than a century past; and more especially under the government of the illustrious house of Hanover.—That Royal House have ever held sacred and inviolable those rights and privileges of their loyal subjects in this Colony, derived to them as aforesaid; in return for which the Princes of that exalted line have ever had, from this People, their ardent desires of all happiness to their persons and glory to their Empire.

Inspired with the warmest sentiments of affectionate loyalty and duty, the Colonists ever have been ready to sacrifice their lives and fortunes to the service of their King and Country; and believing that his Majesty's interest in this Colony, cannot be more firmly established, and perfectly secured, nor the happiness of the British nation more effectually promoted by us, than in our full possession and continued enjoyment of the rights and privileges of the British Constitution, which we have not forfeited, but ought to hold as Englishmen; and which are, if possible, rendered more sacred and indefeasible by the royal Grant and Charter aforesaid, which we conceive to stand upon the same basis with the Grand Charters and fountains of English Liberty: And as the aforesaid act tends, as we conceive, to deprive us of the most interesting, important, and essential of those rights which we hold most dear, and cannot, on any possible consideration, be induced willingly to part with; we are therefore filled with the most sensible grief and concern, and think it a duty we owe to his Majesty, to the nation, to ourselves, and to posterity, to express and declare the sense we have respecting the rights and privileges which we may justly claim, and humbly hope to enjoy under his Majesty's gracious protection and Government; and do, therefore, declare and make it known in the following Declarations and Resolves:—

1. In the first place, we do most expressly declare, recognize and acknowledge his Majesty, King George the Third, to be lawful and rightful King of Great Britain, and all other the dominions and countries thereto belonging; and that it is the indispensable duty of the people of this Colony, (as being part of his Majesty's dominions,) always to bear faithful and true allegiance to his Majesty; and him to defend to the utmost of their power, against all attempts against his person, crown and dignity.

2. That this Colony or the greatest part thereof was purchased and obtained for great and valuable considerations, and some other part thereof gained by conquest, with much difficulty, and at the only endeavours, expenses, and charges of our forefathers; and that thereby considerable addition was made to his Majesty's dominions and interests. And that in consideration of such purchase, &c. as aforesaid, his Majesty, King Charles II, in the 14th year of his reign, did for himself, his heirs and successors ordain, declare and grant unto the Governor and Company of this Colony, and their successors, that all and every of the subjects of him, his heirs or successors, which should go to inhabit within the said Colony, and every of their children which should be born there, or on the sea, in going thither, or returning from thence, should have and enjoy all liberties and immunities of free and natural subjects within any of the dominions of the said King, his heirs or successors, to all intents, constructions, and purposes whatsoever, as if they, and every of them, were born within the realm of England.

3. That the free natural subjects of Great Britain, born within the realm of England, have a property in their own estates, and are to be taxed only by their own consent, given in person, or by their representatives; and are not to be disseized of their liberties or free customs, sentenced or condemned, but by lawful judgment of their peers. And that the said rights and immunities were granted to and conferred on the inhabitants of this Colony by the Royal Grant and Charter aforesaid; and therefore are their rights, to all intents and constructions and purposes whatever.

4. That the consent of the inhabitants of this Colony was not given to the said act of Parliament personally, or by representation, actual or virtual, in any sense or degree that at all comports with the true intentment, spirit, or equitable construction of the British Constitution.

5. That his Majesty's liege subjects of this Colony have enjoyed the right and privilege of being governed by their General Assembly, in the article of taxing and Internal Police, agreeable to the powers and privileges granted and continued in the Royal Charter aforesaid, for more than a century past; and that the same have never been forfeited, or any way yielded up, but have been constantly recognized by the King and Parliament of Great Britain.

6. That in the opinion of this House, an act for raising money by duties or taxes, differs from other acts of legislation, in that it is always considered as a free gift of the People, made by their legal and elected representatives.—And that we cannot conceive that the people of Great Britain, or their representatives, have the right to dispose of our property.

7. That the only legal representatives of the inhabitants of this Colony, are the persons they elect to serve as members of the General Assembly thereof.

8. That the vesting an authority in the Courts of Admiralty, (as in the said act is provided,) to judge and determine in suits relating to duties and forfeitures contained in said act, and other matters foreign to their accustomed and established jurisdiction, is, in the opinion of this House, highly dangerous to the liberties of his Majesty's American subjects, contrary to the great charter of English Liberty, and destructive of one of their most darling rights—that of trial by juries; which is justly esteemed one chief excellence of the British Constitution, and principal bulwark of English liberty.

9. That it is the opinion of this House that the said act for granting and applying certain Stamp Duties, &c. as aforesaid, is unprecedented and unconstitutional.

10. That whenever his Majesty's service shall require the aid of the inhabitants of this Colony, the same fixed principles of loyalty, as well as self preservation, (which have hitherto induced us fully to comply with his Majesty's requisitions,) will, together with the deep sense we have of its being our indispensable duty, (in the opinion of this House,) ever hold us under the strongest obligations which can be given or desired, most cheerfully grant his Majesty (from time to time) our further proportion of men and money, for the defence, security, and other services of the British American dominions.

11. That we look upon the well-being and greatest security of this Colony to depend (under God) on our connexion with Great Britain, which we ardently wish may continue to the latest posterity. And that it is the humble opinion of this House, that the Constitution of this Colony, being understood and practised upon, as it has been ever since it existed, is the surest band of union, confidence, and mutual prosperity, of our Mother Country and us; and the best foundation on which to build the good of the whole, whether considered in a civil, military, or mercantile light. And of the truth of this opinion we are the more confident, as it is not founded on speculation only, but has been verified in fact; and by long experience found to produce (according to our extent and other circumstances) as many loyal, virtuous, industrious, and well-governed subjects, as any part of his Majesty's dominions; and as truly zealous, and as warmly engaged to promote the best good, and real glory, of the Grand Whole, which constitutes the British Empire.

New Jersey Resolutions, November 30, 1765

WHEREAS, the late act of Parliament, called the Stamp Act, is found to be utterly subversive of privileges inherent in, and originally secured by grants and confirmations from the Crown of Great Britain to the settlers of this Colony: In duty, therefore, to ourselves, our constituents, and posterity, this House think it absolutely necessary to leave the following Resolves on our minutes:—

1. That his Majesty's subjects inhabiting this province are, from the strongest motives of duty, fidelity, and gratitude, inviolably attached to his royal person and government, and have ever shown, and we doubt not ever will, their utmost readiness and alacrity in, according to the constitutional requisitions of the Crown, as they have been from time to time made to this Colony.

2. That his Majesty's liege subjects in this Colony, are entitled to all the inherent rights and liberties of his natural born subjects within the kingdom of Great Britain.

3. That it is inseparably essential to the Freedom of a free people, and the undoubted rights of Englishmen, that no taxes be imposed on them but with their own consent, given personally, or by their representatives.

4. That the people of this Colony are not, and from their remote situation cannot be, represented in the Parliament of Great Britain. And if the principle of taxing the Colonies without their consent should be adopted, the people here would be subjected to the taxation of two legislatures, a grievance unprecedented, and not to be thought of without the greatest anxiety.

5. That the only representatives of the people of this Colony are persons chosen by themselves, and that no taxes ever have been, or can be imposed on them, agreeable to the Constitution of this Province, granted and confirmed by his Majesty's most gracious predecessors, but by their own legislature.

6. That all supplies being free gifts, for the People of Great Britain to grant to his Majesty, the property of the People of this Colony, without their consent, and being represented would be unreasonable, and render useless legislation in this Colony, in the most essential point.

7. That the profits of trade arising from this Colony, entering in Great Britain, eventually contributes to the supplies granted there to the Crown.

8. That the giving unlimited powers to any subject or subjects, to impose what taxes they please in the Colonies, under the mode of regulating the prices of Stamped vellum, parchment and paper, appears to us unconstitutional, contrary to the rights of the subject, and apparently dangerous in its consequences.

9. That any incumbrance which in effect, restrains the liberty of the press in America, is an infringement upon the subject's liberty.

10. That the extension of the powers of the court of admiralty within this province, beyond its ancient limits, is a violent innovation, of the right of trials by jury; a right which this House, upon the principles of their British ancestors, hold most dear and invaluable.

11. That as the tranquillity of this Colony hath been interrupted, through fear of the dreadful consequences of the Stamp Act, that therefore the officers of the government, who go on in their offices for the good and peace of the Province, in the accustomed manner, while things are in their present unsettled situation, will, in the opinion of this House, be entitled to the countenance of the Legislature. And it is recommended to our constituents, to use what endeavours lie in their power, to preserve the peace, quiet, harmony, and good order of the government; that no heats, disorders, or animosities, may in the least obstruct the united endeavours that are now strongly engaged, for the repealing the act above mentioned, and other acts affecting the trade of the Colonies.

South Carolina Resolutions, November 29, 1765.

In the Commons House of Assembly, the 29th day of November 1765.

THIS House, sincerely devoted, with the warmest sentiments of affection and duty to his Majesty's person and government; inviolably attached to the present happy establishment of the Protestant Succession; and with minds deeply impressed by a sense of the present and impending misfortunes on the People of this Province; esteem it their indispensable duty to their constituents, to themselves, and to posterity, to come to the following Resolutions, respecting their most essential rights and liberties, and the grievances under which they labour, by reason of several late acts of Parliament:—

1. That his Majesty's subjects in this Province, owe the same allegiance to the Crown of Great Britain, that is due from his subjects born there.

2. That his Majesty's liege subjects in this Province, are entitled to all the inherent rights and liberties of his natural born subjects within the kingdom of Great Britain.

3. That the inhabitants of this Province appear also to be confirmed in all the rights aforementioned, and not only by their charter, but by an act of Parliament of the 13th George II.

4. That it is inseparably essential to the freedom of a People, and the undoubted right of Englishmen, that no taxes be imposed on them, but with their own consent, given personally, or by their representatives.

5. That the People of this Province are not, and from their local circumstances cannot be, represented in the House of Commons of Great Britain. And further, that, in the opinion of this house, the several powers of legislation in America, were constituted, in some measure, upon the apprehension of this impracticability.

6. That the only representatives of the People of this Province are, persons chosen therein by themselves; and that no taxes ever have been, or can be, constitutionally imposed on them, but by the legislature of this Province.

7. That all supplies to the Crown, being free gifts of the People, it is unreasonable, and inconsistent with the principles and spirit of the British Constitution, for the People of Great Britain to grant to his Majesty the property of the People of this Province.

8. That trial by jury, is the inherent and invaluable right of every British subject in this Province.

9. That the late act of Parliament, intituled "An act for granting and applying certain Stamp duties, and other duties, on the British Colonies and Plantations in America," &c. by imposing taxes on the inhabitants of this Province; and the said act, and several other acts, by extending the jurisdiction of the court of admiralty beyond its ancient limits; have a manifest tendency to subvert the rights and liberties of the People of this Province.

10. That the duties imposed by several late acts of Parliament, on the People of this Province will be extremely burthenous, and grievous, and from the scarcity of gold and silver, the payment of them absolutely impracticable.

11. That as the profits of the trade of the People of this Province ultimately center in Great Britain, to pay for the manufactures which they are obliged to take from thence, they eventually contribute very largely to all the supplies granted there to the Crown: And, besides, as every individual in this Province is as advantageous at least to Great Britain, as if he were in Great Britain; and as they pay their full proportion of taxes for the support of his Majesty's government here, (which taxes are equal, or more, in proportion to our estates, from those paid by our fellow subjects in Great Britain upon theirs,) it is unreasonable for them to be called upon, to pay any further part of the charges of the government there.

12. That the Assemblies of this province have, from time to time, whenever requisitions have been made by his Majesty, for carrying on Military operations, either for the defence of themselves, or that of America in general, most cheerfully and liberally contributed their full proportion of men and money, for these services.

13. That though the representatives of the People of this Province had equal assurances and reasons, with those of the other Provinces, to expect a proportional reimbursement, of those immense charges they had been at for his Majesty's service, in the late war, out of the several Parliamentary grants for the use of America; yet they have obtained only their proportion of the first of those grants; and the small sum of two hundred and eighty-five pounds sterling received since.

14. That, notwithstanding, whenever his Majesty's service shall, for the future, require the aids of the inhabitants of this Province, and they shall be called upon in a constitutional way, it shall be their indispensable duty, most cheerfully and liberally, to grant to his Majesty their proportion, according to their ability, of men and money, for the defence, security, and other public services, of the British American Colonies.

15. That the restrictions on the trade of the People of this Province, together with the late duties and taxes, imposed on them by acts of Parliament, must necessarily greatly lessen the consumption of British Manufactures amongst them.

16. That the increase, prosperity, and happiness of the People of this province, depend on the full and free enjoyment of their rights and liberties; and on an affectionate intercourse with Great Britain.

17. That the readiness of the Colonists to comply with his Majesty's requisitions, as well as their inability to bear any additional taxes, beyond what is laid on them by their respective legislatures, is apparent, from the several grants of Parliament, to reimburse them part of the heavy expenses they were at in the late war in America.

18. That it is the right of the British subjects of this Province, to petition the King, or either House of Parliament.

Ordered, That these Votes and Resolutions be printed and made public, that a just sense of liberty, and the firm sentiments of the loyalty of the representatives of the People of this Province may be known to their constituents, and transmitted to posterity.

By order of the House,
PETER MANIGAULT, Speaker.
THOMAS FARR, Jun. Clerk.

New York Resolutions, December 18, 1765.

General Assembly of New York, 18th December, 1765.

THE general assembly of the colony of New-York, taking into their most serious consideration several acts of parliament lately passed, granting stamp and other duties to his majesty, and restricting the trade of this colony, apprehending an abolition of that constitution under which they have so long and happily enjoyed the rights and liberties of Englishmen, and being clearly of opinion, that it is the interest of Great Britain, a dependence on which they esteem their felicity, to confirm them in the enjoyment of those rights; think it their indispensable duty to make a declaration of their faith and allegiance to his majesty king George the Third, of their submission to the supreme legislative power; and at the same time to shew, that the rights claimed by them are in no manner inconsistent with either; for which purpose they are come to the following resolutions, that is to say:

1. That the people of this colony owe the same faith and allegiance to his majesty king George the Third, that are due to him from his subjects in Great Britain.

2. That they owe obedience to all acts of parliament, not inconsistent with the essential rights and liberties of Englishmen, and are intitled to the same rights and liberties, which his majesty's English subjects, both within and without the realm, have ever enjoyed.

3. That his majesty's subjects in England are secured in the superior advantages they enjoy, principally by the privilege of an exemption from taxes not of their own grant, and their right to trials by their peers.—The first secures the people collectively from unreasonable impositions; and, without the second, individuals are at the arbitrary disposition of the executive powers.

4. That the colonists did not forfeit these essential rights by their emigration; because this was by the permission and encouragement of the crown; and that they rather merit favour, that a deprivation of those rights, by giving an almost boundless extent to the British empire, expanding its trade, increasing its wealth, and augmenting that power which renders it so formidable to all Europe.

5. That the acts of trade giving a right of jurisdiction to the admiralty courts, in prosecutions for penalties and forfeitures, manifestly infringes the right of trials by jury; and that the late act for granting stamp duties, not only exposes the American subjects to an intolerable inconvenience and expense, by compelling them to a defence at a great distance from home; but, by imposing a tax, utterly deprives them of the essential right of being the sole disposers of their own property.

6. That all aids to the crown, in Great Britain, are gifts of the people by their representatives in parliament, as appears from the preamble of every money-bill, in which the Commons are said to give and grant to his majesty.

7. That it involves the greatest inconsistency, with the known principles of the English constitution, to suppose, that the honourable house of Commons of Great Britain, can, without divesting the inhabitants of this colony of their most essential rights, grant to the crown their, or any part of their, estates for any purpose whatsoever.

8. That from the first settlement of the colonies, it has been the sense of the government at home, that such grants could not be constitutionally made; and therefore applications for the support of government, and other public exigencies, have always been made to the representatives of the people of this colony; and frequently during the late war by immediate orders from the crown, upon which they exerted themselves with so much liberality, that the parliament thought proper to contribute to their reimbursement.*

9. That if the people of this colony should be deprived of the sole right of taxing themselves, or presenting such sums as the public exigencies require, they would be laid under the greatest disadvantages, as the united interest of the electors, or elected, which constitute the security of his majesty's subjects in Great Britain, will operate strongly against them.

10. That the impracticability of inducing the colonies to grant aids in an equal manner, proportioned to their several abilities, does by no means induce a necessity of divesting the colonies of their essential rights.

11. That it is the duty of every friend to Great Britain and this colony, to cultivate a hearty union between them.

12. That if the honourable house of Commons insist on their power of taxing this colony, and by that means deprive its inhabitants of what they have always looked upon as an undoubted right, though this power should be exerted in the mildest manner, it will teach them to consider the people of Great Britain as vested with absolute power to dispose of all their property, and tend to weaken that affection for the mother-country, which this colony ever had, and is extremely desirous of retaining.

13. That in order to keep the colonies in due subjection to, and dependence upon Great Britain, is not necessary to deprive them of the right they have long enjoyed of taxing themselves; since the same right has been enjoyed by the clergy within the realm, and by all the subjects of Great Britain without the realm, until the late innovation.

14. That the duties lately imposed by act of parliament on the trade of this colony are very grievous and burthensome. and, in the apprehension of this house, impossible to be paid; have already greatly diminished the advantageous traffick heretofore carried on with the foreign islands in the West Indies; and in consequence, must render us unable to purchase the manufactures of Great Britain.

NON-IMPORTATION ACTS.

New York Non-Importation Resolutions, 31 October, 1765.

At a general meeting of the Merchants of New York, trading to Great Britain, they came to the following resolutions:

1. That in all the orders they send on to Great Britain, for goods and merchandise of any nature, kind, or quality whatsoever, they will direct their correspondents not to ship them, unless the Stamp Act be repealed.

2. It is further unanimously agreed, That all orders already sent shall be countermanded by the first conveyance. unless upon the condition mentioned in the foregoing resolution. [The orders countermanded in consequence of this Resolution, are said to amount to 700,000 pounds sterling.†]

3. It is further unanimously agreed, That no merchant will vend any goods or merchandise, sent upon Commission from Great Britain, that shall be shipped from thence after the first day of January next, unless upon the condition mentioned in the first resolution.

4. It is further unanimously agreed, That the foregoing resolutions shall be binding, un-

* The following is a true copy of the Message which his Majesty sent down to the House of Commons every year, from 1759, till the conclusion of the war:

GEORGE REX,

26 Die Aprilis, 1759.

"His Majesty being sensible of the zeal and vigour with which his faithful subjects in North America have exerted themselves in defence of his Majesty's just rights and possessions, recommends it to this House to take the same into consideration, and to enable his Majesty to give them a proper compensation, for the expenses incurred by the respective provinces, in the levying, clothing, and pay of the troops raised by the same, according as the active vigour and strenuous efforts of the respective provinces shall appear to merit.

G. R.

Upon which the House Resolved, April 30, "That a sum not exceeding two hundred thousand pounds be granted to his Majesty upon account, to enable his Majesty to give a proper compensation, to the respective Provinces in North America, for the expenses incurred by them, in the levying, clothing and pay of the troops raised by the same, according as the active vigour and strenuous efforts of the respective Provinces shall be thought by his Majesty to merit."

Similar resolutions followed yearly, every Message. And though this compensation did not exceed one fourth part of what they expended, they were satisfied with these most honourable of all testimonies, that they had not been backward in contributing their share towards the general defence of the empire. Dr. Franklin's "True State, &c."

† New York, Nov. 25, 1765.—Not one of the vessels that arrived here last week from London or Bristol, were more than half loaded; and by several letters brought by them, we learn that the workmen at the different factories in England are more than half discharged, begin to be very troublesome, and say, that unless the restraints are taken off the trade of America, they will be inevitably ruined; and that petitions were til the same are abrogated at a general meeting, hereafter to be held for that purpose.

In consequence of the foregoing resolutions, the Retailers of Goods in the City of New York, subscribed a paper to the following purport:

We, the underwritten, Retailers of Goods, do hereby promise and oblige ourselves, not to buy any goods, wares, or merchandises, of any person or persons whatsoever, that shall be shipped from Great Britain after the first day of January next, unless the Stamp Act shall be repealed.

As witness our hands, &c. Oct. 31, 1765.

Agreements and resolutions entered into, by the Merchants and Traders of Philadelphia, Nov. 7, 1765.

The merchants and traders of the City of Philadelphia, taking into their consideration the melancholy state of the North American commerce in general, and the distressed situation of the Province of Pennsylvania in particular, do unanimously agree,

That the many difficulties they now labour under as a trading people, are owing to the restrictions, prohibitions, and ill advised regulations, made in the several acts of the Parliament of Great Britain, lately passed, to regulate the Colonies which have limited the exportation of some part of our country produce, increased the cost and expense of many articles of our importation, and cut off from us all means of supplying ourselves with specie enough even to pay the duties imposed on us, much less to serve as a medium of our trade.

That this Province is heavily in debt to Great Britain for the manufactures, and other importations, from thence, which the produce of our lands has been found unequal to pay for, when a free exportation of it to the best markets was allowed of, and such trades open as supplied us with cash, and other articles of immediate remittance to Great Britain.

That the late unconstitutional law, the Stamp Act, if carried into execution in this Province, will further tend to prevent our making those remittances to Great Britain, for payment of old debts, or purchase of more goods, which the faith subsisting between the individual's trading with each other requires; and therefore in justice to ourselves, to the traders of Great Britain, who usually give us credit, and to the consumers of British manufactures in this Province, the subscribers hereto, have voluntarily and unanimously preparing in many different counties, to be laid before Parliament as soon as it meets; what follows being the copy of one drawn up by the Merchants of Manchester for that purpose.

To the Right Honourable the Lords Commissioners of the Treasury.

The Memorial of the several Merchants and Manufacturers of Manchester; Most Humbly Sheweth,

THAT very great and extensive Manufactures have been established in the town and neighbourhood of Manchester; that the home consumption thereof is very small, in comparison of the export trade which is carried on betwixt Great Britain and the West India Islands, and the Continent of North America.

That your Memorialists believe the demand of our Colonies does not exceed one moiety of the goods usually exported from Great Britain to them, but their surest and best market consists in the supply of foreigners, who have been accustomed to resort to Jamaica, and the other Plantations, in order to exchange their buillon for English Manufactures.

It is with the utmost concern that your Memorialists find themselves obliged to represent to your lordships, that the trade of the said town and neighbourhood of Manchester, hath lately suffered a great and sudden diminution, and in return for their Manufactures exported last year, very scanty remittances have been made, most of the goods lying still on hand in North America and the Islands; and the extreme want of current cash having disabled their correspondents, though of the greatest property, and highest credit, to make their payments for the few goods that have been disposed of.

In consequence of repeated advices from those correspondents, your Memorialists are reduced to the unhappy necessity of contracting their trade, and have been already obliged to discharge great numbers of their working people.

Your Memorialists beg leave to suggest their belief and opinion, that the stagnation of trade is owing to the orders and commissions that they are informed are given to the commanders of his Majesty's ships now stationed in the West Indies. [See p. 16. Note.]

In behalf therefore of themselves, and many thousands of poor people, whom they have the melancholy apprehension of seeing reduced to the utmost penury, and distress, they beg leave to lay before your lordships their present unhappy situation, humbly imploring such relief as to your lordships' wisdom and goodness may seem proper.

Philadelphia, Nov. 28, 1765.—The Merchants and Traders of this City have prepared and signed a Memorial, addressed to the Merchants and Manufacturers of Great Britain, requesting their interest with the Parliament, for the repeal of that most unconstitutional law, (the Stamp Act,) and for removing the restrictions laid on the trade of the Colonies; in which is very clearly and strongly represented the great loss it must be to the people of England, as well as to the Colonists, in case the grievances complained of are not speedily redressed.

come into the following resolutions and agreements, in hopes that their example will stimulate the good people of this Province to be frugal in their use and consumption of all manufactures, excepting those of America, and lawful goods coming directly from Ireland, manufactured there, whilst the necessities of our country are such as to require it; and in hopes that their brethren, the merchants and manufacturers of Great Britain, will find their own interest so intimately connected with ours, that they will be spurred on to befriend us from that motive, if no other should take place.

1. It is unanimously resolved and agreed, that in all orders any of the subscribers to this paper may send to Great Britain for Goods, they shall and will direct their correspondents not to ship them until the Stamp Act is repealed.

2. That all those among the subscribers that have already sent orders to Great Britain for goods, shall and will immediately countermand the same, until the stamp act is repealed: except such merchants as are owners of vessels already gone, or now cleared out for Great Britain, who are at liberty to bring back in them, on their own account, coals, casks of earthenware, grind-stones, pipes, iron pots, empty bottles, and such other bulky articles as owners usually fill up their ships with, but no dry goods of any kind; except such kinds of dye-stuffs and utensils necessary for carrying on manufactures, that may be ordered by any person.

3. That none of the subscribers hereto shall or will vend any goods or merchandizes whatever that shall be shipped them on commission from Great Britain, after the first of January next, unless the Stamp Act be repealed.

4. That these resolves and agreements shall be binding on all and each of us the subscribers, who do hereby, each and every person for himself, upon his word of honor agree, that he will strictly and firmly adhere to and abide by every article, from this time until the first day of May next, when a meeting of the subscribers shall be called, to consider whether a further continuance of this obligation be then necessary.

5. It is agreed, that if goods of any kind do arrive from Great Britain, at such time, or under such circumstances, as to render any signer of these agreements suspected of having broken his promise, the Committee now appointed shall enquire into the premises, and if such suspected person refuses, or cannot give them satisfaction, the subscribers hereto will unanimously take all prudent measures to discountenance and prevent the sale of such goods, until they are released from this agreement by mutual and general consent.

Lastly, As it may be necessary that a Committee of the Subscribers be appointed to wait on the traders of this City, to get this present agreement generally subscribed, the following gentlemen are appointed for that purpose, viz: Thomas Willing and Samuel Mifflin, Esq's, Thomas Montgomery, Samuel Howell, Samuel Wharton, John Rhea,

Agreement of the Retailers of the City of Philadelphia, Nov. 14. 1765

We, the Retailers of the City of Philadelphia, at a general meeting, taking into consideration the melancholy state of the North American Commerce in general, and the distressed situation of the Province of Pennsylvania in particular, occasioned by the late unconstitutional law, (the Stamp Act,) if carried into execution, do hereby voluntarily and unanimously promise and oblige all and each of us, upon our word of honour, not to buy any goods, wares, or merchandises, of any Vendue-Master, or other person or persons whatsoever, that shall be shipped from Great Britain, after the first day of January next, unless that unconstitutional law, (the Stamp Act,) shall be repealed; excepting such goods and merchandises as shall be approved and allowed of by the Committee of Merchants nominated and appointed for that purpose; and all lawful goods coming directly from Ireland, manufactured there.

The above to be binding on us till the first day of May next, at which time we purpose another general meeting to consider whether the further continuance of this obligation be necessary. As witness our hands, &c.

“SONS OF LIBERTY.”

Certain reciprocal and mutual agreements, concessions, and associations made, concluded and agreed upon, by and between the Sons of Liberty of the Colony of New York, of the one part and the Sons of Liberty of the Colony of Connecticut, on the other part, this 25th day of December, in the sixth year of the reign of our sovereign lord, George III, by the grace of God, of Great Britain, France, and Ireland, king, defender of the faith, in the year of our Lord, 1765.

THE aforesaid parties taking into their most serious consideration the melancholy and distressed state of Great Britain and her North American Colonies, proceeding, as they are fully persuaded, from a design in her most insidious and inveterate enemies, to alienate the affections of his Majesty's most loyal and faithful subjects of North America from his person and government—Therefore to prevent as much as in us lies, the dissolution of so inestimable an union, they do, in the presence of Almighty God, declare, that they bear the most unshaken faith and true allegiance to his Majesty King George the Third—that they are most affectionately and zealously attached to his royal person and family, and are fully determined, to the utmost of their power, to maintain and support his crown and dignity, and the succession as by law established; and with the greatest cheerfulness they submit to his government according to the known and just principles of the British Constitution, which they conceive to be founded on the eternal and immutable principles of justice and equity, and that every attempt to violate or wrest it, or any part of it, from them, under whatever pretence, colour, or authority, is an heinous sin against God, and the most daring contempt of the people, from whom (under God) all just government springs.

From a sacred regard to all which, and a just sense of the impending evils that might befall them in consequence of such a dreadful dissolution, they do hereby voluntarily, and of their own free will, as well for the support of his Majesty's just prerogative and the British Constitution, as their own mutual security and preservation, agree and concede to associate, advise, protect and defend each other in the peaceable, full, and just enjoyment of their inherent and accustomed rights as British subjects of their respective Colonies, not in the least desiring any alteration or innovation in the grand bulwark of their liberties and the wisdom of ages, but only to preserve it inviolate from the corrupt hands of its implacable enemies.

And whereas a certain pamphlet has appeared in America, in the form of an act of Parliament, called and known by the name of the Stamp Act, but has never been legally published or introduced, neither can it, as it would immediately deprive them of the most invaluable part of the British Constitution, viz. the trial by jury, and the most just mode of taxation in the world, that is, of taxing themselves; rights that every British subject becomes heir to as soon as born. For the preservation of which, and every part of the British Constitution, they do reciprocally resolve and determine to march with the utmost dispatch, at their own proper costs and expence, on the first proper notice (which must be signified to them by at least six of the Sons of Liberty) with their whole force, if required, and it can be spared, to the relief of those that shall, are, or may be in danger from the Stamp Act, or its promoters and abettors, or any thing relative to it, on account of any thing that may have been done in opposition to its obtaining—and they do mutually and most fervently recommend it to each other to be vigilant in watching all those who, from the nature of their offices, vocations or dispositions, may be the most likely to introduce the use of stamped papers, to the total subversion of the British Constitution and American liberty; and the same, when discovered, immediately to advise each other of, let them be of what rank or condition soever, and they do agree that they will mutually, and to the utmost of their power, by all just ways and means, endeavour to bring all such betrayers of their country to the most condign punishment—and further, they do mutually resolve to defend the liberty of the press in their respective Colonies from all unlawful violations and impediments whatever, on account of the said act, as the only means (under divine Providence) of preserving their lives, liberties and fortunes, and the same in regard to the judges, clerks, attornies, &c. that shall proceed without any regard to the Stamp Act, from all pains, fines, mulcts, penalties, or any molestation whatever—and finally, that they will, to the utmost of their power, endeavour to bring about, accomplish and perfect the like association with all the Colonies on the continent, for the like salutary purposes, and no other.

At a Meeting of a considerable number of inhabitants of the town and county of Norfolk, and others, Sons of Liberty, at the Court House of said County, in the Colony of Virginia, on Monday, the 31st of March, 1766.

HAVING taken into consideration the evil tendency of that oppressive and unconstitutional act, commonly called the Stamp Act, and being desirous that our sentiments should be known to posterity, and recollecting that we are a part of that Colony who first, in General Assembly, openly expressed their detestation to the said act, which is so pregnant with ruin, and productive of the most pernicious consequences; and unwilling to rivet the shackles of slavery and oppression on our lives and millions yet unborn, have unanimously come to the following Resolutions:

1. That we acknowledge his present Majesty, King George III. to be our rightful and lawful King, and that we will at all times, to the utmost of our power and ability support and defend his most sacred person, crown, and dignity; and will be always ready, when constitutionally called upon, to assist his Majesty with our lives and fortunes, and defend all his just rights and prerogatives.

2. That we will by all lawful ways and means, which Divine Providence hath put into our hands, defend ourselves in the full enjoyment of, and preserve inviolate to posterity, those inestimable privileges of all free-born British subjects, of being taxed by none but representatives of their own choosing, and of being tried only by a jury of their own peers; for if we quietly submit to the execution of the said Stamp Act, all our claims to civil liberty will be lost, and we and our posterity become absolute slaves.

3. That we will, on any future occasion, sacrifice our lives and fortunes, in concurrence with the other Sons of Liberty in the American Provinces, to defend and preserve those invaluable blessings transmitted us by our ancestors.

4. That whoever is concerned, directly or indirectly, in using, or causing to be used, in any way or manner whatever, within this Colony, unless authorized by the General Assembly thereof, those detestable papers called the Stamps, shall be deemed, to all intents and purposes, an enemy to his country, and by the Sons of Liberty treated accordingly.

5. That a Committee be appointed to present the thanks of the Sons of Liberty to Col. Richard Bland, for his Treatise, entitled "An Inquiry into the Rights of the British Colonists."

6. That a Committee be appointed, who shall make public the above Resolutions, and correspond, as they shall see occasion, with the associated Sons and Friends of Liberty, in the other British Colonies in America.

[Similar Associations of the Sons of Liberty were formed in almost all the Colonies.]

DAUGHTERS OF LIBERTY.

Providence, R. I. March 12, 1765.—On the 4th inst. Eighteen Daughters of Liberty, young ladies of good reputation, met at the House of Doctor Ephraim Bowen, in this town, in consequence of an invitation of that gentleman, who hath discovered a laudable zeal for introducing home manufactures. There they exhibited a fine example of industry, by spinning from sunrise until dark, and displaying a spirit for saving their sinking country rarely to be found among persons of more age and experience. The Doctor provided an elegantly plain dinner, and other refreshments for the fair company; but they expended but very little time, and cheerfully agreed to omit Tea, to render their conduct consistent.

Besides this instance of their patriotism, before they separated, they unanimously Resolved that the Stamp Act was unconstitutional—That they would purchase no more British Manufactures unless it be repealed—And that they would not even admit the addresses of any gentleman, should they have opportunity, without they were determined to oppose its execution, to the last extremity, if occasion required.

VI. Proceedings of the First American Congress, held at New York, in October, 1765.

In consequence of the Circular of the House of Representatives of Massachusetts Bay, (See page 42.) the following gentlemen met at New-York, in the Province of New-York, on Monday the seventh day of October, 1765.

From the Province of Massachusetts Bay, James Otis, Oliver Partridge, Timothy Ruggles, Esqrs.

From the colony of Rhode-Island, and Providence plantations, Metcalfe Bowler, Henry Ward, Esqrs.

From the colony of Connecticut, Eliphalet Dyer, David Rowland, Wm. Samuel Johnson, Esqrs.

From the colony of New-York, Robert R. Livingston, John Cruger, Philip Livingston, William Bayard, Leonard Lisenard, Esqrs.

From the colony of New-Jersey, Robert Ogden, Hendrick Fisher, Joseph Borden, Esqrs.

From the Province of Pennsylvania, John Dickinson, John Morton, George Bryan, Esqrs.

From the government of the counties of Newcastle, Kent, and Sussex, on Delaware, Caesar Rodney, Thomas McKean, Esqrs.

From the Province of Maryland, William Murdock, Edward Tighman, Thomas Ringgold, Esqrs.

From the Province of South-Carolina, Thomas Lynch, Christopher Gadsden, John Rutledge, Esqrs.

Then the said committees proceeded to choose a Chairman by ballot; and Timothy Ruggles, Esq. on sorting and counting the votes, appeared to have a majority—and thereupon was placed in the Chair.

Resolved, nem. con. That Mr. John Cotton, be Clerk to this Congress during the continuance thereof.

The Congress then took into consideration the appointments of the Committees from New-York, New-Jersey, and the government of the lower counties on the Delaware—and

Resolved, nem. con. That the same are sufficient to qualify the gentlemen therein named, to sit in this Congress.

Resolved, also, That the committee of each colony, shall have one voice only, in determining any questions that shall arise in the Congress.

The Congress then adjourned until to-morrow morning at nine o'clock

Tuesday, Oct. 8, 1765, A. M. The Congress met according to adjournment.

Upon motion, voted that Mr. Justice Livingston, Mr. McKean, and Mr. Rutledge be a committee to inspect the proceedings and minutes and correct the same.

Then the Congress took into consideration the Rights and Privileges of the British American Colonies, with the several inconveniences and hardships to which they are and must be subjected by the operation of the several late acts of Parliament, particularly the act called the Stamp Act; and after some time spent therein, the same was postponed for further consideration.

Then the Congress adjourned until to-morrow morning, at nine o'clock.

[The Congress adjourned from day to day, from the 8th to the 19th having each day, the same subjects under consideration.]

Saturday, Oct. 19, 1765, A. M. The Congress met according to adjournment, and resumed, &c. as yesterday; and upon mature deliberation,* agreed to the following Declaration of the rights and grievances of the Colonists in America, which were ordered to be inserted.

THE members of this Congress, sincerely devoted, with the warmest sentiments of affection and duty to his Majesty's person and government, inviolably attached to the present happy establishment of the Protestant succession, and with minds deeply impressed by a sense of the present and impending misfortunes of the British colonies on this continent; having considered as maturely as time will permit, the circumstances of the said colonies, esteem it our indispensable duty to make the following declarations of our humble opinion, respecting the most essential rights and liberties of the colonists, and of the grievances under which they labour, by reason of several late acts of parliament.

1. That his Majesty's subjects in these colonies, owe the same allegiance to the crown of Great Britain, that is owing from his subjects born within the realm, and all due subordination to that August body the parliament of Great-Britain.

2. That his Majesty's liege subjects in these colonies, are entitled to all the inherent rights and liberties of his natural born subjects, within the Kingdom of Great-Britain.

3. That it is inseparably essential to the freedom of a people, and the undoubted right of Englishmen, that no taxes be imposed on them but with their own consent, given personally, or by their representatives.

4. That the people of these colonies are not and, from their local circumstances, cannot be, represented in the House of Commons in Great-Britain.

5. That the only representatives of the people of these colonies are persons chosen therein by themselves, and that no taxes ever have been, or can be constitutionally imposed on them, but by their respective legislatures.

6. That all supplies to the crown being free gifts of the people, it is unreasonable and inconsistent with the principles and spirit of the British constitution, for the people of Great-Britain to grant to his Majesty the property of the colonists.

7. That trial by jury, is the inherent and invaluable right of every British subject in these colonies.

8. That the late act of parliament, entitled, An act for granting and applying certain stamp duties, and other duties, in the British colonies and plantations in America, &c. by imposing taxes on the inhabitants of these colonies, and the said acts, and several other acts, by extending the jurisdiction of the courts of admiralty beyond its ancient limits have a manifest tendency to subvert the rights and liberties of the colonists.

9. That the duties imposed by several late acts of parliament, from the peculiar circumstances of these colonies, will be extremely burthensome and grievous; and from the scarcity of specie, the payment of them absolutely impracticable.

10. That as the profits of the trade of these colonies ultimately center in Great-Britain, to pay for the manufactures which they are obliged to take from thence, they eventually contribute very largely to all supplies granted there to the crown.

11. That the restrictions imposed by several late acts of parliament on the trade of these colonies will render them unable to purchase the manufactures of Great-Britain.

12. That the increase, prosperity and happiness of these colonies depend on the full and free enjoyments of their rights and liberties, and an intercourse with Great-Britain mutually affectionate and advantageous.

13. That it is the right of the British subjects in these colonies to petition the King, or either house of parliament.

Lastly, That it is the indispensable duty of these colonies, to the best of sovereigns, to the mother country, and to themselves, to endeavour by a loyal and dutiful address to his Majesty, and humble applications to both houses of parliament, to procure the repeal of the act for granting and applying certain stamp duties, of all clauses of any other acts of parliament, whereby the jurisdiction of the admiralty is extended as aforesaid, and of the other late acts for the restriction of American commerce.

Upon motion, voted, That Robert R. Livingston, William Samuel Johnson, and William Murdock, Esqrs. be a committee to prepare an address to his Majesty, and lay the same before the congress on Monday next.

Also voted, That John Rutledge, Edward

* Extract of a letter from Cæsar Rodney, to his brother Thomas Rodney, dated New-York, Oct. 20, 1765. "When I wrote to you last, I expected that Congress would have ended in eight or ten days from that time; but, contrary to expectation, we have not yet finished. You and many others are surprised, perhaps, to think we should sit so long, when the business of our meeting seemed only to be the petitioning the King, and remonstrating to both Houses of Parliament; but, when you consider that we are petitioning and addressing that august body, the great legislature of the empire, for redress of grievances—that in order to point out those grievances, it was likewise necessary to set forth the liberty we have and ought to enjoy (as freeborn Englishmen) according to the British constitution. This we are about to do by way of Declaration, in the nature of resolves, as a foundation to the Petition and Address; and was one of the most difficult tasks I ever yet saw undertaken, as we had carefully to avoid any infringement of the prerogative of the crown and the power of Parliament—and yet in duty bound fully to assert the rights and privileges of the Colonists. However, after arguing and debating two weeks, on liberty, privileges, prerogative, &c. in an assembly of great abilities, we happily finished them and now have the Petition and Addresses before us, and expect to finish, in three or four days."

Tilghman, and Philip Livingston, Esqrs. be a committee to prepare a memorial and petition to the lords in parliament, and lay the same before the Congress on Monday next.

Voted also That Thomas Lynch, James Otis, and Thomas M'Kean, Esqrs. be a committee to prepare a petition to the house of commons of Great-Britain, and lay the same before the Congress on Monday next.

Then the congress adjourned to Monday next at twelve o'clock.

Monday Oct. 21, 1765, A. M. The congress met according to adjournment.

The committee appointed to prepare and bring in an Address to his Majesty did report that they had essayed a draught for that purpose, which they laid on the table, and humbly submitted to the correction of the Congress.

The said Address was read, and after sundry amendments, the same was approved of by the congress, and ordered to be ingrossed.

The Address to his Majesty being ingrossed was read and compared, and is as follows, viz. To the Kings most excellent Majesty.

The Petition of the freeholders and other inhabitants of the Massachusetts-bay, Rhode Island, and Providence plantations, New-Jersey, Pennsylvania, the government of the counties of Newcastle, Kent, and Sussex, upon Delaware, province of Maryland.

Most humbly sheweth,

THAT the inhabitants of these colonies, unanimously devoted with the warmest sentiments of duty and affection to your Majesty's sacred person and government, inviolably attached to the present happy establishment of the protestant succession in your illustrious house, and deeply sensible of your royal attention to their prosperity and happiness, humbly beg leave to approach the throne, by representing to your Majesty, that these colonies were originally planted by subjects of the British crown, who, animated with the spirit of liberty, encouraged by your Majesty's royal predecessors, and confiding in the public faith, for the enjoyment of all the rights and liberties essential to freedom, emigrated from their native country to this continent, and by their successful perseverance in the midst of innumerable dangers and difficulties, together with a profusion of their blood and treasure, have happily added these vast and valuable dominions to the empire of Great-Britain. That for the enjoyment of these rights and liberties, several governments were early formed in the said colonies, with full power of legislation, agreeable to the principles of the English constitution.

That under those governments, these liberties thus vested in their ancestors, and transmitted to their posterity, have been exercised and enjoyed, and by the inestimable blessings thereof (under the favour of Almighty God) the inhospitable deserts of America have been converted into flourishing countries; science, humanity, and the knowledge of divine truths diffused through remote regions of ignorance, infidelity and barbarism; the number of British subjects wonderfully increased, and the wealth and power of Great-Britain proportionably augmented.

That by means of these settlements, and the unparalleled success of your Majesty's arms, a foundation is now laid for rendering the British empire the most extensive and powerful of any recorded in history. Our connexion with this empire, we esteem our greatest happiness and security, and humbly conceive it may now be so established by your royal wisdom, as to endure to the latest period of time; this, with most humble submission to your Majesty, we apprehend will be most effectually accomplished, by fixing the pillars thereof on liberty and justice, and securing the inherent rights and liberties of your subjects here, upon the principles of the English constitution. To this constitution these two principles are essential, the right of your faithful subjects, freely to grant to your Majesty, such aids as are required for the support of your government over them and other public exigencies, and trials by their peers: by the one they are secured from unreasonable impositions; and by the other from arbitrary decisions of the executive power.

The continuation of these liberties to the inhabitants of America, we ardently implore, as absolutely necessary, to unite the several parts of your wide extended dominions, in that harmony so essential to the preservation and happiness of the whole. Protected in these liberties, the emoluments Great Britain receives from us, however great at present, are inconsiderable, compared with those she has the fairest prospect of acquiring. By this protection, she will forever secure to herself the advantage of conveying to all Europe, the merchandizes which America furnishes, and of supplying through the same channel, whatsoever is wanted from thence. Here opens a boundless source of wealth and naval strength. Yet these immense advantages, by the abridgement of those invaluable rights and liberties, by which our growth has been nourished, are in danger of being forever lost, and our subordinate legislatures in effect rendered useless by the late acts of parliament imposing duties and taxes on these colonies, and extending the jurisdiction of the courts of admiralty here, beyond its ancient limits; statutes, by which your majesty's commons in Britain undertake absolutely to dispose of the property of their fellow subjects in America without their consent, and for the enforcing whereof, they are subjected to the determination of a single judge, in a court unrestrained by the wise rules of the common law, the birthright of Englishmen, and the safeguard of their persons and properties.

The invaluable rights of taxing ourselves and trial by our peers, of which we implore your majesty's protection, are not, we most humbly conceive, unconstitutional, but confirmed by the great charter of English liberties. On the first of these rights the honourable the house of commons found their practice of originating money bills; a right enjoyed by the kingdom of Ireland, by the clergy of England, until relinquished by themselves; a right, in fine, which all other your majesty's English subjects, both within and without the realm, have hitherto enjoyed.

With hearts, therefore, impressed with the most indelible characters of gratitude to your majesty, and to the memory of the kings of your illustrious house, whose reigns have been signally distinguished by their auspicious influence on the prosperity of the British dominions, and convinced by the most affecting proofs of your majesty's paternal love to all your people, however distant, and your unceasing and benevolent desires to promote their happiness, we most humbly beseech your majesty that you will be graciously pleased to take into your royal consideration the distresses of your faithful subjects on this continent, and to lay the same before your majesty's parliament, and to afford them such relief, as in your royal wisdom their unhappy circumstances shall be judged to require. And your petitioners will pray, &c.

James Otis, Oliver Partridge, Committee from the House of Representatives of Massachusetts Bay.

Metcalf Bowler, Henry Ward, Committee from the General Assembly of Rhode-Island and Providence Plantations.

Hendrick Fisher, Joseph Borden, Committee from the Province of New-Jersey.

Thomas McKean, Caesar Rodney, Committee from the government of the Counties of New Castle, Kent and Sussex, upon Delaware.

William Murdock, Edward Tilghman, Thomas Ringgold, Committee from the House of Representatives of the Province of Maryland.

The memorial to the lords in parliament being engrossed, was read and compared, and is as follows, viz:

To the right honourable the lords spiritual and temporal of Great Britain, in parliament, Assembled.

The memorial of the freeholders and other inhabitants of the Massachusetts Bay, Rhode-Island, and Providence Plantations,

New Jersey, Pennsylvania, the government of the counties of New Castle, Kent and Sussex, upon Delaware, province of Maryland,

Most humbly sheweth,

THAT his majesty's liege subjects in his American colonies, though they acknowledge a due subordination to that august body, the British parliament, are entitled, in the opinion of your memorialists, to all the inherent rights and liberties of the natives of Great Britain, and have, ever since the settlement of the colonies, exercised those rights and liberties, as far as their local circumstances would permit.

That your Memorialists humbly conceive one of the most essential rights of these colonists, which they have ever till lately uninterruptedly enjoyed, to be trial by jury.

That your memorialists also humbly conceive another of these essential rights, to be the exemption from all taxes, but such as are imposed on the people by the several legislatures in these colonies, which rights they have also, till of late enjoyed. But your memorialists humbly beg leave to represent to your lordships, that the act for granting certain stamp duties in the British colonies in America, &c. fills his Majesty's American subjects with the deepest concern, as it tends to deprive them of the two fundamenta and invaluable rights and liberties above-mentioned; and that several other late acts of parliament, which extend the jurisdiction and power of courts of admiralty in the plantations beyond their limits in Great Britain, thereby make an unnecessary and unhappy distinction, as to the modes of trial between us and our fellow subjects there, by whom we have never been excelled in duty and loyalty to our sovereign.

* Boston, April 14, 1765. The Commissioners from Connecticut, Eliphalet Dyer, David Rowland, and William Samuel Johnson, Esqrs; From New-York, Robert R. Livingston, John Cruger, Philip Livingston, William Bayard, and Leonard Lispenard, Esqrs; From South Carolina, Thomas Lynch, Christopher Cadsden, and John Rutledge, Esqrs; were not empowered to sign at the Congress, and therefore reported to their respective Assemblies, who have since, each nearly by an unanimous vote, approved of the Proceedings, and seasonably transmitted their Petitions in the same words, under the hands of their several Speakers. Some of the other Provinces, particularly New-Hampshire, have done the same. Robert Ogden, Esq. from New-Jersey, and the honourable Timothy Ruggles, Esq. from Massachusetts, for reasons best known to themselves, if they had any, refused to sign, and abruptly left the Congress before the business was completed. John Dickinson, Esq. from Pennsylvania, was necessarily called home a few days before the congress finished, but there was no doubt in the minds of any, but he was a sincere friend to his country. His Province have the highest opinion of him, as all who knew him, must. [Jacob Kollock, appointed one of the Delegates from Delaware, did not attend.] To avoid all disputes about precedence, and to promote harmony, it was agreed in voting, and in the Proceedings, to begin at one end of the Continent, and go through; only as Massachusetts first proposed the Measure, the compliment was paid to them by the gentlemen of the other Colonies, of placing them first; but it was merely a compliment: and it is to be hoped, that on all future occasions, as on this, the Colonies will consider themselves as on the same footing, without the least claim of pre-eminence, one over the other.

That from the natural connection between Great Britain and America, the perpetual continuance of which your memorialists most ardently desire, they conceive that nothing can conduce more to the interest of both, than the colonists' free enjoyment of their rights and liberties, and an affectionate intercourse between Great Britain and them. But your memorialists (not waving their claim to these rights, of which, with the most becoming veneration and deference to the wisdom and justice of your lordships, they apprehend, they cannot reasonably be deprived) humbly represent, That from the peculiar circumstances of these colonies, the duties imposed by the aforesaid act, and several other late acts of parliament, are extremely grievous and burthensome; and the payment of the said duties will very soon, for want of specie, become absolutely impracticable; and that the restrictions on trade by the said acts, will not only distress the colonies, but must be extremely detrimental to the trade and true interest of Great Britain.

Your memorialists, therefore, impressed with a just sense of the unfortunate circumstances of the colonies, and the impending destructive consequences which must necessarily ensue from the execution of those acts, animated with the warmest sentiments of filial affection for their mother country, most earnestly and humbly entreat that your lordships will be pleased to hear their counsel in support of this memorial, and take the premises into your most serious consideration, and that your lordships will also be thereupon pleased to pursue such measures for restoring the just rights and liberties of the colonies, and preserving them forever inviolate, for redressing their present, and preventing future grievances, thereby promoting the united interest of Great Britain and America, as to your lordships, in your great wisdom, shall seem most conducive and effectual to that important end. And your memorialists as in duty bound, will pray, &c.

Then the congress adjourned till to-morrow morning, 9 o'clock.

Wednesday, October 23d, 1765, A. M.—The congress met according to adjournment.

The petition to the house of commons, being engrossed, was read and compared, and is as follows, viz:

To the honourable the knights, citizens and burgesses of Great Britain, in parliament assembled,

The petition of his majesty's dutiful and loyal subjects, the freeholders and other inhabitants of the colonies of the Massachusetts Bay, Rhode Island Providence Plantations, New Jersey, Pennsylvania, the government of the counties of New Castle, Kent and Sussex upon Delaware, province of Maryland,

Most humbly sheweth,

THAT the several late acts of parliament, imposing divers duties and taxes on the colonies, and laying the trade and commerce thereof, under very burthensome restrictions, but, above all, the act for granting and applying certain stamp duties &c. in America, have filled them with the deepest concern and surprise, and they humbly conceive the execution of them will be attended with consequences very injurious to the commercial interest of Great Britain and her colonies, and must terminate in the eventual ruin of the latter.

Your petitioners, therefore, most ardently implore the attention of the honourable house to the united and dutiful representation of their circumstances, and to their earnest supplications for relief from those regulations, that have already involved this continent in anxiety, confusion and distress.

We most sincerely recognize our allegiance to the crown, and acknowledge all due subordination to the parliament of Great Britain, and shall always retain the most grateful sense of their assistance and protection; it is from and under the English constitution we derive all our civil and religious rights and liberties; we glory in being subjects of the best of kings, and having been born under the most perfect form of government. But it is with the most ineffable and humiliating sorrow that we find ourselves of late, deprived of the right of granting our own property for his majesty's service, to which our lives and fortunes are entirely devoted, and to which, on his royal requisitions, we have ever been ready to contribute to the utmost of our abilities.

We have also the misfortune to find, that all the penalties and forfeitures mentioned in the stamp act, and in divers late acts of trade extending to the plantations, are at the election of the informer, recoverable in any court of admiralty in America. This, as the newly erected court of admiralty has a general jurisdiction over all British America, renders his majesty's subjects in these colonies, liable to be carried at an immense expense from one end of the continent to the other.

It gives us also great pain to see a manifest distinction made therein between the subjects of our mother country and those in the colonies, in that the like penalties and forfeitures recoverable there only in his majesty's courts of record, are made cognizable here by a court of admiralty. By these means we seem to be, in effect, unhappily deprived of two privileges essential to freedom and which all Englishmen have ever considered as their best birth-rights, that of being free from all taxes but such as they have consented to in person, or by their representatives, and of trial by their peers.

Your petitioners further shew, that the remote situation, and other circumstances of the colonies, render it impracticable that they should be represented, but in their respective subordinate legislatures; and they humbly conceive, that the parliament, adhering strictly to the principles of the constitution, have never hitherto taxed any but those who were actually therein represented; for this reason, we humbly apprehend, they never have taxed Ireland, or any other of the subjects without the realm.

But were it ever so clear, that the colonies might in law be reasonably deemed to be represented in the honourable house of commons, yet we conceive, that very good reasons, from inconvenience, from the principles of true policy, and from the spirit of the British constitution, may be adduced to shew, that it would be for the real interest of Great-Britain as well as the colonies, that the late regulations should be rescinded, and the several acts of parliament imposing duties and taxes on the colonies, and extending the jurisdiction of the courts of admiralty here, beyond their ancient limits, should be repealed.

We shall not attempt a minute detail of all the reasons which the wisdom of the honourable house may suggest, on this occasion, but would humbly submit the following particulars to their consideration:

That money is already become very scarce in these colonies, and is still decreasing by the necessary exportation of specie from the continent for the discharge of our debts to British merchants—

That an immensely heavy debt is yet due from the colonies for British manufactures, and that they are still heavily burthened with taxes to discharge the arrearages due for aids granted by them in the late war—

That the balance of trade will ever be much against the colonies, and in favour of Great Britain, whilst we consume her manufactures, the demand for which must ever increase in proportion to the number of inhabitants settled here, with the means of purchasing them. We therefore humbly conceive it to be the interest of Great-Britain, to increase, rather than diminish, those means, as the profits of all the trade of the colonies ultimately center there to pay for her manufactures, as we are not allowed to purchase elsewhere; and by the consumption of which, at the advanced prices the British taxes oblige the makers and vendors to set on them, we eventually contribute very largely to the revenue of the crown—

That from the nature of American business, the multiplicity of suits and papers used in matters of small value, in a country where free-holds are so minutely divided, and property frequently transferred, a stamp duty must ever be very burthensome and unequal—

That it is extremely improbable that the honourable house of commons should, at all times, be thoroughly acquainted with our condition, and all facts requisite to a just and equal taxation of the colonies.

It is also humbly submitted, Whether there be not a material distinction in reason and sound policy, at least, between the necessary exercise of parliamentary jurisdiction in general acts, for the amendment of the common law, and the regulation of trade and commerce through the whole empire, and the exercise of that jurisdiction, by imposing taxes on the colonies.

That the several subordinate provincial legislatures have been moulded into forms, as nearly resembling that of their mother-country, as by his Majesty's royal predecessors was thought convenient; and their legislatures seem to have been wisely and graciously established, that the subjects in the colonies might, under the due administration thereof, enjoy the happy fruits of the British government, which in their present circumstances they cannot be so fully and clearly apprized of, any other way under these forms of government we and our ancestors have been born or settled, and have had our lives, liberties and properties protected, the people here as every where else, retain a great fondness for their old customs and usages, and we trust that his Majesty's service, and the interest of the nation, so far from being obstructed, have been vastly promoted by the provincial legislatures.

That we esteem our connections with, and dependence on Great-Britain, as one of our greatest blessings, and apprehend the latter will appear to be sufficiently secure, when it is considered that the inhabitants in the colonies have the most unbounded affection for his Majesty's person, family and government, as well as for the mother-country, and that their subordination to the parliament is universally acknowledged.

We, therefore, most humbly entreat, That the honourable house would be pleased to hear our counsel in support of this petition, and take our distressed and deplorable case into their serious consideration, and that the acts and clauses of acts, so grievously restraining our trade and commerce, imposing duties and taxes on our property, and extending the jurisdiction of the court of admiralty beyond its ancient limits, may be repealed; or that the honourable house would otherwise relieve your petitioners, as in your great wisdom and goodness shall seem meet.

And your petitioners as in duty bound shall ever pray.

[Signed as before.]

Then the congress adjourned till to-morrow morning, ten o'clock.

Thursday, October 24, 1765. The congress met according to adjournment.

The congress took into consideration the manner in which their several petitions should be preferred and solicited in Great-Britain, and came to the following determination. viz.

It is recommended by the congress, to the several colonies, to appoint special agents for soliciting relief from their great grievances, and unite their utmost interest and endeavours for that purpose.

Voted unanimously, That the clerk of this congress sign the minutes of their proceedings, and deliver a copy for the use of each colony and province.

By order of the congress,

JOHN COTTON, Clerk.

Adjourned to to-morrow morning nine o'clock.

Friday, October 25, 1765. The congress met according to adjournment.

Time not permitting the clerk to make copies at large, of the proceedings of the congress, for all the colonies, they think it proper, should be furnished therewith:

Resolved, That the gentleman from Massachusetts-bay be requested to send a copy thereof to the colony of New-Hampshire; the gentlemen of Maryland to Virginia; and the gentlemen of South Carolina to Georgia and North Carolina.

The congress then adjourned.

Signed per order,

A. CLARKSON, Clerk,

A copy of a letter received from Georgia, during the sitting of the congress:

Savannah, in Georgia, September 6th, 1765.

Sir—Your letter date in June last, acquainting me that the house of representatives of your province, had unanimously agreed to propose a meeting at the city of New-York, of committees, from the houses of representatives of the several British colonies on this continent, on the first Tuesday in October next, to consult together on the present circumstances of the colonies, and the difficulties to which they are, and must be reduced, by the operation of the acts of parliament for laying duties and taxes on the colonies, and to consider of an humble representation of their condition to his Majesty and the parliament, and to implore relief, came to hand at an unlucky season, it being in the recess of the general assembly of this province; nevertheless, immediately upon the receipt of your letter, I dispatched expresses to the several representatives of this province, acquainting them with the purport thereof, and requesting them to meet at this place without delay.

And accordingly they met here on Monday last, to the number of sixteen, being a large majority of the representatives of this province, the whole consisting of twenty-five persons; but his excellency our governor being applied to, did not think it expedient to call them together on the occasion, which is the reason of their not sending a committee, as proposed by your house, for you may be assured, Sir, that no representatives on this continent can more sincerely concur in the measure's proposal, than do the representatives of this province now met together, neither can any people, as individuals, more warmly espouse the common cause of the colonies, than do the people of this province.

The gentlemen now present, request it as a favour you'll be pleased to send me a copy of such representation as may be agreed upon by the several committees at New-York, and to acquaint me how, and in what manner, the same is to be laid before the king and parliament, whether by any person particularly authorised for that purpose, or by the colony agents? The general assembly of this province stands prorogued to the 22d day of October next, which is the time it generally meets for the dispatch of the ordinary business of the province; and I doubt not the representatives of this province will then, in their legislative capacity, take under consideration the grievances so justly complained of, and transmit their sense of the same to Great-Britain, in such way as may seem best calculated to obtain redress, and so as to convince the sister colonies of their inviolable attachment to the common cause.

I am, Sir, your most obedient, and most humble servant,

ALEXANDER WILLY.

To Samuel White, Esqr. speaker of the house of representatives of Massachusetts-Bay.

The two foregoing letters are true copies from the original.

SIR,
WE had the honour to be appointed by the house of representatives of the province of Maryland, a committee, to meet committees of the members of assembly of the other colonies on this continent, at New York, the first of this instant, to join in a general, and united, dutiful, loyal, and humble representation of the condition of these colonies, to his Majesty and the parliament, and to implore relief from the grievous burthens lately laid upon our trade, and the taxes and duties lately imposed on us, especially by the Stamp act.

Accordingly members from nine colonies met, to wit, from the Massachusetts bay, Connecticut, Rhode Island and Providence plantations, New York, New Jersey, Pennsylvania, the government of the counties of New Castle, Kent and Sussex, upon Delaware, Maryland, and South Carolina, but as you'll find the address, &c. signed only by members from six of those colonies, it may be proper to acquaint you with the reasons why they did not all sign, though they all concurred with the proceedings.

The lieutenant governor of New York procured their assembly from time to time, so that their house had not an opportunity of appointing members with full powers to join, and sign the address, &c. Yet the assembly of New York having, at their last meeting, appointed five of their members as a committee, not only to correspond with their agent at home, but also during the recess of the house, to write to and correspond with the several assemblies, or committees of assemblies on this continent, on the subject matter of the several late acts of parliament, so grievous and dangerous to their colonies, it was thought proper to admit this committee to join in the conferences, and they agreed to what was done, and promised to use their endeavours with their assembly to concur also whenever they should be permitted to meet.

The South Carolina assembly, not rightly viewing the proposal (which originally came from the assembly of the government of the Massachusetts bay) as it was intended that the several committees, when met, should frame and sign an address to his Majesty, and memorial and petition to the parliament, to be immediately dispatched by the congress, instructed their members, (Messrs. Lynch, Rutledge and Gadsden) to return their proceedings to them for approbation. The Connecticut assembly made the same restrictions in their instructions. The assembly also of New Hampshire wrote, that they had resolved, That notwithstanding they were sensible such a representation ought to be made, and approved of the proposed method for obtaining thereof, yet the present situation of their governmental affairs would not permit them to appoint a committee to attend such meeting, but should be ready to join in any address to his Majesty and the parliament they might be honoured with the knowledge of, probable to answer the proposed end: and the Speaker of the Assembly of Georgia wrote, that a majority of their members had applied to the governor to call their assembly, and he did not think it expedient, which was the reason they did not send a committee as proposed, but requested us to transmit a copy of our proceedings to them (which will be done) and that their assembly would meet about this time, and he did not doubt but they should act so as to convince the sister colonies of their inviolable attachment to the common cause: we also understood the North-Carolina, and we know the Virginia assembly was procured, whereby they could not have the opportunity of joining us; so that we doubt not but the colonies who have not signed, will very speedily transmit similar addresses, &c. if their assemblies should not be hindered from meeting: and to this purpose, we hope you'll soon hear from the assembly of South-Carolina.

By the gentlemen of that colony we were favoured with a sight of your late letters and informed of your careful and spirited conduct with regard to the interests of that colony, and that, together with your declaration which we find in those letters, that you enjoy an independent seat in the British parliament, induced us (as we have no established agent at present, for this province, nor have yet been able to obtain a law to tax ourselves for that purpose) to trouble you with our request, that you will present the inclosed address to his Majesty, and memorial and petition to the houses of parliament, and exert your utmost interest and abilities in behalf of this poor distressed country, and of this province in particular.

We hope, as there is a change in the ministry, and as the gentlemen in the house of commons may, at their next meeting, take a more enlarged view of the true interest of Great-Britain and her colonies, they will find it to be in supporting the rights and encouraging the trade of the latter, and that the happiness of the mother-country and her colonies must be inseparable, and that we shall obtain relief.

The several committees agreed to recommend it to their respective colonies, to appoint special agents on this occasion, and to instruct them to unite their utmost interest and endeavours for that purpose. One address, &c. was transmitted by the gentlemen of the Massachusetts government, immediately to their agent (Mr. Jackson we understood) and we expect the other colonies will have duplicates sent to the agents, and we hope will unite in expence and instructions, to be able to counsel before both the lords and commons, as our petitions pray.

We were intrusted with the disposition of some money upon this occasion, and inclose you a bill of exchange on Messrs. Capel and Osgood Hanbury, for one hundred and fifty pounds sterling, as a compensation for your trouble and expence in this affair. We doubt not our assembly will approve of what we do in this matter; and as they are to meet the last of this month, we shall lay our proceedings before them, and it is probable they will write you more fully, and furnish you with such further instructions and arguments as may appear to them to be proper to be given and urged on this occasion, in behalf of the colonies. We are, your most obedient servants.

WILLIAM MURDOCK, EDWARD TILGHMAN,
THOMAS RINGGOLD.

Mr. Ruggles, of Massachusetts, was one of the two members of the Congress who refused to sign the petitions. This caused the following proceedings in the House of Representatives of Massachusetts:

Feb. 6, 1766. The House, according to the order of the day, entered into the conduct and services of the Committee in the late Congress at New York. And after debate, the question was put, whether the reasons offered by Brigadier Ruggles for his not signing the petitions prepared by the late Congress at New York, be satisfactory to this House? It passed in the negative.

Then the question was put, whether the reasons offered by Brigadier Ruggles for leaving the late Congress at New York, before they had completed their Business, be satisfactory to this House. It passed in the negative.

Resolved unanimously, That the account given by James Otis and Oliver Partridge, Esqrs. of their conduct at the late Congress at New York, is satisfactory to the House.

Feb. 12, 1766. The House again entered into the consideration of the conduct of Brigadier Ruggles, at the Congress at New York, and after a long debate, the question was put, Whether the House will proceed any further with respect to the conduct of Brigadier Ruggles at the Congress at New York. It passed in the affirmative.

Thereupon Resolved, That Brigadier Ruggles, with respect to his conduct at the Congress at New York, has been guilty of neglect of duty, and that he be reprimanded therefor by the Speaker.

Feb. 13, 1766. Brigadier Ruggles appearing in the House, Mr. Speaker said to him as follows, viz :

“Brigadier Ruggles, The House last evening voted that with respect to your conduct at the late Congress at New York, you were guilty of neglect of duty, and thereupon ordered that you shall receive a Reprimand from the Speaker of this house, therefor.

“Sir, in discharge of my duty as Speaker of this House, and in pursuance of their order, I do reprimand you accordingly. Sir, it gives me very sensible pain, that a gentleman who has heretofore been in such high estimation in this House should fall under their public censure. I hope, sir, that by your future conduct you will not only regain the good opinion this House have heretofore entertained of you; but also the good opinions of all those whose displeasure you may have fallen under on this occasion.”

Brigadier Ruggles’ Reasons for his Dissent from the Resolutions of the Congress at New York, as given into the House, February 19, 1766.

THE Honorable House having, on my motion, been graciously pleased to indulge me with adjoining the Reasons in justification of my conduct to a publication of the Proceedings of said Congress, ordered by the House to be inserted at the end of the Journals of the present sessions, first laying them before the House—I beg leave to offer the following.

And as to the charge of not signing the addresses—

First. My instructions from this honorable House, conceived in the following words, viz. “It is the expectation of the House that a most loyal and dutiful address to his Majesty and his Parliament, will be prepared by the Congress, praying as well for the removal of the grievances the colonies labor under at present, as for the preventing others for the future; which petitions, if drawn up, as far as you shall be able to judge, agreeable to the mind of this House, you are empowered to sign and forward.”

The petition agreed upon by Congress to be presented to his Majesty not being conceived in terms clearly enough expressive of that duty and loyalty which are due to the best of sovereigns, and consequently not agreeable to my above instructions from this House, left as a mere matter of judgment and discretion if I had signed it, I must have acted in direct opposition to those instructions, and thereby have exposed myself not only to the censures of this House, but to the reproaches of my own conscience, a tribunal more awful to me than this (however great) by which I have been condemned.

Secondly. That it is more regular, constitutional, and conformable to the constant practice of the colonies, to have their Petitions and Remonstrances to the King and Parliament of Great Britain, signed by the Speakers of their Houses.

Thirdly. That the signing of the said Addresses by the Committees of the several Colonies, which attended the Congress, and who were empowered to sign the same, could by no construction come up to a general Address from the Colonies, as the Committees from the Colonies of South Carolina, Connecticut, and New York, were not empowered, and therefore could not sign; and the Colonies of Nova Scotia, New Hampshire, Virginia, North Carolina, and Georgia did not send Committees to the Congress, and some had no regular appointment; so that in this respect it was but a very partial signing; and therefore it was more agreeable to the instructions of this House to their committee, after having, conformable, not only to the spirit, but the very words of their instructions, “to unite in sentiment, and agree upon such representations as may tend to preserve our rights and privileges,” to return the same to the House for their approbation, especially as we knew the House was then sitting, and as I then apprehended, and in fact would have been the case, little or no time would have been lost.

Fourthly. A matter of so great importance to the Colonies, and of so delicate a nature as the open and avowed claim of an exclusive right of taxation, (however true,) to be asserted in addresses to the King and Parliament, was a measure I could not bring myself to adopt, as my appointment to this service, upon motion made, I could not obtain an explanation on that point, nor did I think it was then the sense of the House, I therefore thought it my duty, and most respectable to the House, to report the draughts agreed upon for their acceptance.

Fifthly. In my apprehension those Addresses would have had greater weight, and would have been more favorably received by the King and Parliament, had they been authenticated by the suffrages of the various Houses of Representatives and Burgesses throughout the Continent, and signed by their respective Speakers.

As to the charge of leaving the Congress before the business was completed, and the Petition to his Majesty was laid before me, such difficulties arose in my mind, as that in its present form I could not bring myself to sign; and the reasons for reporting the draughts to the several Assemblies operating strongly on my mind, I made some exceptions to the gentlemen of the Congress on the address to his Majesty, and offered some general reasons for the expediency of reporting the draughts to our respective Assemblies, in which I was seconded by divers members, and which occasioned a long and warm debate; upon which it was determined by a vote, that the Address to his Majesty, which was at that time in a fair draught, together with those to the Lords and Commons, should be laid on the table the next morning, in the form they had before passed the Congress, and been entered upon the Journal, to be signed by such of the members as thought proper. I then acquainted the Congress that I purposed to go out of town early next morning. And after the Congress was adjourned till the next morning, I took my leave of the members, which was on Thursday evening, the 24th of October, when I concluded all the business of the Congress was entirely finished except the bare signing, which, for the reasons given, I had refused.

Mr. Speaker, This Honorable House have adjudged my Reasons insufficient to support my conduct, and I feel the weight of their indignation. I have, sir, more than once trembled under a sense of my own insufficiency to support the dignity of the high trust with which my Country, unasked, has honoured me, and to answer their just expectations in the discharge of them. Their candour has heretofore estimated my services rather by the integrity of my heart than the clearness of my head; this uprightness they have not only been pleased to accept, but bountifully to reward. When this House honored me with this appointment, in undertaking it, I promised myself the same indulgence. I have exercised the same freedom of judgment I have attended the duty with the same love to my country and its liberties. I have acted with the same singleness and uprightness of intention, and with the same ardent desire to serve the public weal which I have ever made the rule of my conduct. But alas! I meet with a very different reward.

VII. Repeal of the Stamp Act.

The King's Speech on opening the 5th Session of the 12th Parliament of Great Britain, Dec. 17, 1765.

My Lords and Gentlemen:

The present general state of tranquillity in Europe, gave me hopes that it would not have been necessary to convene my Parliament sooner than is usual in times of peace.

But as matters of great importance have lately occurred in some of my colonies in America, which will demand the most serious attention of Parliament; and as further informations are daily expected from different parts of that country, of which I shall order the fullest accounts to be prepared for your consideration; I have thought fit to call you now together, in order that opportunity may thereby be given to issue the necessary writs on the many vacancies that have happened in the House of Commons since the last session,* so that the parliament may be full to proceed immediately after the usual recess, in the consideration of such weighty matters as will then come before you.

Extract from the Lords' Address of Thanks.

"We should be wanting in our duty, not to assure your Majesty, that when your Majesty shall have been pleased to communicate to your Parliament those informations and advices which have been or shall be received from America, we will proceed to the consideration of those weighty matters with an attention equal to the importance of the subject, and with a resolution to do every thing which the exigency of the case may require."

[The following paragraph, proposed as an amendment to follow the above, was rejected after a long debate:]

mults and insurrections which have been raised and fomented in his Majesty's dominions of North America, in opposition to the execution of the laws, and in open defiance of the parliamentary right of Great Britain; and that we embrace with pleasure the earliest opportunity in our power to assure his Majesty, that, fully sensible of the indispensable necessity of vindicating and establishing the just power of the legislature of Great Britain, we will cheerfully concur in every measure which may strengthen the hands of Government, and enforce the legal obedience of the Colonies, and their constitutional dependence on the sovereign authority of this Kingdom."

Extract from the Commons' Address of Thanks.

"We, your Majesty's most dutiful and loyal subjects, the Commons of Great Britain in Parliament assembled, beg leave to return to your Majesty, the thanks of this House, for your most gracious speech from the Throne, and to assure your Majesty that we will not fail, when this House shall be supplied with its members, to apply ourselves with the utmost diligence and attention to those important occurrences in America, which your Majesty recommends to our consideration, and to exert our most zealous endeavors for the honor of your Majesty's government, and the true interest of your people in all parts of your extended empire."

[A paragraph to the following effect, was proposed to be added to the above as an amendment, but was withdrawn by leave of the House:]

"To express our just resentment and indignation at the outrages, tumults, and insurrections which have been excited and carried

For this reason the next ses- sion was by proclamation summoned to meet on the 17th of December, for the despatch of business, though they could have but four or five days for that purpose, before the usual time of adjourning for the Christmas holidays; and accordingly his Majesty gave them the reasons for his summoning them to meet before Christmas, in his speech from the throne.—*Hist. The King's Speech after the Christmas Recess, Jan. 14, 1766.†

My Lords and Gentlemen:

When I met you last, I acquainted you that matters of importance had happened in America, which would demand the most serious attention of Parliament.

I had no information which could serve to direct your deliberations in so interesting a concern might be wanting, I have ordered all the papers that give any light into the origin, the progress, or the tendency, of the disturbances which have of late prevailed in some of the northern colonies, to be immediately laid before you.

No time has been lost, on the first advice of these disturbances, to issue orders to the governors of my provinces and to the commanders of my forces in America, for the exertion of all the powers of government in the suppression of riots and tumults, and in the effectual support of lawful authority.

Whatever remains to be done on this occasion, I submit to your wisdom; not doubting but your zeal for the honor of my Crown, your attention to the just rights and authority of the British legislature, and your affection and concern for the welfare and prosperity of all my people, will guide you to such sound and prudent resolutions as may tend at once to preserve those constitutional rights over the Colonies, and to restore to them that harmony and tranquillity which have lately been interrupted by riots and disorders of a most dangerous nature.

If any alterations should be wanting in the commercial economy of the plantations, which may tend to enlarge and secure the mutual and beneficial intercourse of my kingdoms and colonies, they will deserve your most serious consideration. In effectuating purposes so worthy of your wisdom and public spirit, you may depend upon my most hearty concurrence and support. The present happy tranquillity now subsisting in Europe, will enable you to pursue such objects of our interior policy with a more uninterrupted attention.

Gentlemen of the House of Commons:

I have ordered the proper estimates for the current service of the year to be laid before you. Such supplies as you may grant shall be duly applied with the utmost fidelity, and shall be dispensed with the strictest economy.

My Lords and Gentlemen:

I earnestly recommend to you to proceed in your deliberations with temper and unanimity. The time requires, and I doubt not your own inclination will lead you to, those salutary dispositions. I have nothing at heart but the assertion of legal authority, the preservation of the liberties of all my subjects, the equity and good order of my government, and the concord and prosperity of all parts of my dominions.

Extract from Lord's Address of Thanks.

“We cannot avoid expressing our satisfaction in your Majesty's parental care and vigilance, in losing no time to issue the necessary

* Dec. 27, 1765. You have, to be sure, had from the office an account of what the parliament did, or rather did not do, the day of their meeting. I mean the affair of our American Colonies relatively to the late imposed Stamp Duty, which our Colonies absolutely refuse to pay. The administration are for some indulgence and forbearance to those froward children of the mother country: the opposition are for taking vigorous, as they call them, but I call them violent measures: not less than les dragonades; and to have the tax collected by the troops we have there. For my part, I never saw a froward child mended by whipping; and I would not have the mother country become a step-mother. Our trade to America brings in, communibus annis, two millions a year, and the stamp duty is but estimated at 100,000*l* a year, which I would by no means bring into the stock of the exchequer at the loss or even risk of a million a year to the national stock.—Lord Chesterfield.

† The Parliament did not assemble till the 17th of December, and separated for the Christmas recess, without transacting any business, except issuing writs to fill up vacancies. In this interval a meeting was held at the house of the Marquis of Rockingham, for the purpose of arranging measures against the opening of the session, and particularly with respect to the late transactions in America. Among the persons present were the Marquis of Rockingham and Lord Egmont, Gen. Conway, Mr. Dowdeswell, the Earl of Dartmouth, and Mr. Yorke. The most effective and dignified advice was, to declare by an Act of Parliament, the legislative power of Great Britain over America, and inflict penalties of high treason on those who should impeach that authority, either by speaking or writing. The supremacy of the parent country being thus ascertained, it was recommended to bring in a bill, to explain, alter, and amend the Stamp Act, in such a manner as would render the operation easy, and its provisions unexceptionable. The principal alterations were, that duties should be paid in currency, instead of sterling money; offences against the act tried in Courts of Record, instead of the Court of Vice Admiralty; and the merchants relieved, by taking off, or greatly reducing, the stamps on coquets and clearances. But this firm and manly advice did not prevail; the opinions previously delivered by some members of administration were incompatible with such measures; and although Mr. Dowdeswell, Chancellor of the Exchequer, produced letters from New York, imputing that the money collected from the duty on molasses, had been detained in the colony by the threats and orders of the mob—yet no vigorous measure was resolved on. In fact, nothing was decided, except the terms in which the King's speech should be comprised, and the Ministry formed no regular or consistent plan of operation and mutual support.—Adolphus.

models for exerting the several powers of government in the suppression of riots and tumults, and the support of order and legal authority. Concurring heartily with your Majesty's salutary intentions, we will exert our utmost endeavours to assert and support your Majesty's dignity and honour, and the legislative authority of this kingdom over its colonies; and will take into consideration the most proper methods to provide for the restoration of the tranquillity of those colonies, which has been disturbed by such violent and dangerous commotions."

"It is with the highest sense of your Majesty's goodness we acknowledge that care for the welfare of your people, and that confidence in the loyalty and affection of your faithful commons, which your Majesty shows in the early communication your Majesty has been pleased to order of the necessary informations relative to the disturbances in America. Your reliance on the wisdom and duty of your Parliament in a matter of so great importance, and the attention shown by your Majesty, in reserving to our deliberation and advice the joint concern of your Majesty's royal authority, the rights of your Parliament and the happiness of your subjects, are at once objects of our highest admiration and gratitude.

"It is as it shall be our care, to maintain that temper and equanimity which appears in your Majesty's conduct, by mixing with our zeal for the honour of your Majesty's government, and with our just regard for the dignity and authority of Parliament; the most attention to the important objects of the trade and navigation of these kingdoms, and the tenderest concern for the united interest of all your Majesty's people."

Proceedings of Parliament on the Repeal.

As from both his Majesty's Speeches as well as from the addresses of both houses upon other occasions, it appears that the act of the preceding Session for imposing a Stamp Duty upon our American colonies, with the contests and disturbances thereby occasioned, was to be the chief affair brought before this Session, I shall begin with an account of the proceedings upon that important affair, and conclude that subject, before I proceed to any thing else.

As his Majesty in both his Speeches from the throne, had been so gracious as to tell his Parliament, that he would order all the advices and papers relative to the matters of importance that had happened in his colonies in America to be laid before them, accordingly on the 14th of January, as soon as the house of commons had appointed a Committee to draw up the Address to his Majesty which they had then resolved on, Mr. Secretary Conway stood up, and, by his Majesty's command presented to the house copies or extracts of a great many letters from or to his Majesty's governors in America, and from or to his ministers here. And also a great many other papers relative to the Stamp Duty Act which had been passed the preceding Session, all which letters and papers were ordered to be referred to a committee of the whole house, and it was resolved, that the house would, on the 28th resolve itself into a committee of the whole house for that purpose; and that the house might on that day be as full as possible it was ordered that the house should on that day be called over, as also that Mr. Speaker should write circular letters to the sheriffs and stewards of the several counties in Great Britain, requiring the attendance of the members of that house, upon the said 28th of January.

On the 17th of January, there was presented to the house and read the following petition of the merchants of London trading to North America.

To the Honourable the House of Commons of Great Britain, in Parliament Assembled. The Petition of the Merchants of London, trading in North America, humbly sheweth:

THAT your Petitioners have long been concerned in carrying on the trade between this country and the British colonies on the continent of North America.

That they have annually exported very large quantities of British manufactures, consisting of Woollen Goods of all kinds, Cottons, Linens, Hard-Ware, Shoes, Household Furniture, and almost without exception, every species of goods manufactured in these kingdoms, besides other articles imported from abroad, chiefly purchased with our Manufactures, and with the produce of our Colonies; by all which many thousands of Manufacturers, Seamen, and Labourers, have been employed, to the very great and increasing benefit of this nation.

That, in return of these exports, your Petitioners have received the following articles, viz. Indigo, Tobacco, Naval Stores, Oil, whale Finis, Furs, and lately Pot-Ash, with other commodities, besides remittances by Bills of Exchange and Bullion, obtained by the Colonists in payment for articles of their produce not required for the British Market, and therefore exported to other places.

That from the nature of this trade, consisting of British Manufactures exported, and of the import of raw materials from America, many of them used in our Manufactures, and all of them tending to lessen our dependence on neighbouring States, it must be deemed of the highest importance in the Commercial System of this nation.

That this commerce so beneficial to the State, and so necessary for the support of multitudes, now lies under such difficulties and discouragement that nothing less than its utter ruin is apprehended, without immediate interposition of Parliament.

That in consequence of the trade between the Colonies and the mother country, as established, and as permitted for many years, and of the experience which your Petitioners have had of the readiness of the Americans to make their just remittances, to the utmost of their real ability, they have been induced to make and venture such large exportations of British Manufactures, as to leave the Colonies indebted to the Merchants of Great Britain in the sum of several millions sterling.

That at this time, the Colonists when pressed for payment, appeal to past experience in proof of their willingness, but declare it is not in their power at present to make good their engagements; alleging that the Taxes and Restrictions upon them, and the extension of the Jurisdiction of Vice-Admiralty Courts, established by some late acts of Parliament, particularly by an act passed in the 14th year of his Majesty's reign, intitled, "An act for granting certain duties in the British Colonies and Plantations in America;" and by an act passed in the fifth year of his present Majesty's reign, entitled, "An act for granting and applying certain Stamp Duties and other Duties, in the British Colonies and Plantations in America;" with several regulations and restraints, which if founded on acts of Parliament for defined purposes, are represented to have been extended in such a manner as to disturb legal commerce, and harass the fair trader, has so far interrupted the usual and former most fruitful branches of their commerce, restrained the sale of their Produce, thrown the state of the several provinces into confusion, and brought on so great a number of actual bankruptcies, that the former opportunities and means of remittance and payments are utterly lost and taken from them.

That your Petitioners are by these unhappy events reduced to the necessity of applying to this Honourable house, in order to secure themselves and their families from impending ruin—to prevent a multitude of Manufacturers from becoming a burden to the community, or else seeking their bread in other countries, to the irretrievable loss of the kingdom—to preserve the strength of this nation entire—its commerce flourishing—its Revenue increasing—our navigation, the bulwark of the kingdom, in a state of growth and extension, and the Colonies, from inclination, duty and interest, firmly attached to the Mother Country.*

Your Petitioners therefore humbly pray the consideration of the premises, intrusting such relief as to the wisdom of this Honourable house shall seem expedient.

And your Petitioners shall for ever pray, &c.

New-York, October 17, 1765. We hear that the design of establishing in this City a Market to commence on Wednesday, 23d inst. for all kinds of Home Manufactures meets with universal approbation: as many were at a loss to know how to come at what they wanted in these articles. And it is expected it will be equally convenient to those who have such goods on hand, and that quick sale and ready money, will induce them and many others, to increase their diligence, and bring their goods to Market.

New-York, October 24, 1765. Yesterday was opened the Market for Home Manufactures. The design was not sufficiently known in the country, and, from the shortness of the notice, there were neither the plenty nor variety expected; though such number of buyers appeared of all ranks, that it was not doubted but they would have bought for large sums. There was plenty of shoes of different makes which had a quick sale, and Hose's make was totally discredited by all the judicious. Brown bleached Linen and Diaper, Cambric, Thread Stockings, and Caps, and Woolen Yarn Stockings, were quickly sold—And great demand was made for more of those articles, and also for Woollen Cloth and Stuff. ~~And great demand was made for more of those articles, and also for Woollen Cloth and Stuff.~~ And it is hoped the next market day, being Wednesday, the 6th of November, the country makers will supply the great demand.

Nov. 7, 1765. Yesterday was held the Market for Home Manufactures, below the Exchange, when a great variety of articles were exposed to sale; but the demand was so great that every thing was immediately bought up, as all ranks of people take a laudable pride in meaning what is made among ourselves. The Market will again be held on the same day fortnight, and from these beginnings, we hope soon to convince the most incredulous, that we are not so destitute of either Ingenuity, Materials, or Public Spirit as has been alleged.

Extract of a letter to New York, dated, London, Dec. 14, 1765. "We are very sorry to receive no new orders from you, and to understand that it proceeds from the general distress and unhappy interruption your trade labors under at present, which gives equal alarm here, and we believe will be the first matter taken into consideration when the Parliament meets, and we hope will be accommodated to general satisfaction, and that trade will return to its accustomed channel; which we heartily wish to see for mutual benefit."

London, Dec. 14, 1765. We hear that the merchants upon exchange, on Wednesday last, received upwards of an hundred letters from New York, countermanding their orders for goods.

It is computed that merchants here have not less than 150,000*l* due to them from the inhabitants of New York, and that the latter have signified that it cannot be expected that they can make any remittances in their present unsettled situation.

Thursday, a number of merchants waited on the Secretaries of State, in order to lay before them a vast number of letters received by them, forbidding the sending any goods to America.

Yesterday a deputation from the merchants of this city, trading to North America, waited on the Ministry, to request their countenance and support, in the intended application to Parliament, for remedy of the distresses under which that branch of British commerce now labors.

London, Dec. 16, 1765. The counter orders for goods commissioned from the British settlements, in America, on account of the Stamp Duty, are said to amount to the value upwards of 700,000*l* sterling.

This petition was referred to the Committee of this nation,] as follows: "and to the raising of the Whole House, to whom it was referred of the rents of a — the land estates in this red to consider of the several papers presented to that surprising height they are ed to the House, on the 14th, by Mr. Secretary now arrived at, and at which they could not, Conway, by his Majesty's command; and without the American trade, be supported for have given of it at full length, because it was any number of years." extremely well drawn up, because most of the As soon as this petition was referred as facts mentioned in it are notoriously true, and aforesaid, there were severally presented to because from these facts it appears how necessary it is for this nation to protect and encourage our colonies and plantations in America; for the petitioners might have added, and I wonder they did not add, in this petition, after the words, (increasing benefit the city of Bristol, under their common seal;

Leeds, Dec. 31, 1765. We have this day prepared a petition to Parliament, in behalf of the American colonies, which we expect to get signed by upwards of a thousand clothiers, and we hope this session of Parliament will relieve the Americans.

Boston, Feb. 20, 1766. Private letters from England state that in the parishes of Leeds, Wakefield, Bradford, Keighly, Halifax, Huddersfield, Rochdale, and a few of the nearest country towns, there are about five hundred thousand men, women and children, all engaged in one branch or other of the woollen manufactory, a prevention of the export of which must prove greatly detrimental to them, should the colonies persist in the manufacture of their own cloths;—and therefore doubt not that it will be repealed.

Norfolk, Va. March 14, 1766. By our last advices from home, affairs begin to look a little better. The whole trading interest of Great Britain seems to be united in our favour. The city of Glasgow have appointed three of their members to reside in London, during the session of Parliament, who have carried up with them an Address in favour of America.

London, Jan. 9, 1766. The Manufacturers in England begin already to feel the effects of the American Resolutions not to import any goods from England. several shipwrights, bankers, and every other branch in the shipping, down the river, not having employment even for their apprentices. And we are told that one considerable stocking Manufacturer near the city has discharged no less than forty workmen within these few days.

London, Feb. 4. Several merchantmen in the river, outward bound, for North America, and had their ships companies, excepting officers and servants, discharged for near a month past, in order to save expenses, until it is known what shall be determined relative to the Stamp Act.

On Saturday, several parties of poor fellows, with weavers aprons on, went about the courts and other private places of this city, begging, with a petition in their hands, setting forth, that above twenty thousand of their brethren were now out of employment.

London, Feb. 8. We hear that the decrease of duty on American goods imported from our Colonies, and the duties paid on the exportation of European Merchandize to those parts, is computed at upwards of 120,000*l*.

London, Feb. 12. We hear that the exports to North America, on the articles of cordage, sundries, and iron pots only, which used to be in great demand from the Colonies, are now decreased to the amount of a very considerable sum, the above articles being manufactured for the homeconsumption at Boston, Philadelphia, and most of the other provinces.

We are confidently assured, that a very considerable quantity of black cloth is returned from North America, the Colonies having no occasion for it, as they are determined not to ear any mourning; and it is asserted, by the best authority, that near 50,000*l*. of the manufactures of this kingdom, will very soon be returned from thence.

Bristol, Feb. 14, 1766. By letters yesterday and to-day from London, there is the greatest probability of the Stamp Act being repealed; nay it seems beyond doubt. This day there was to be a grand decision, and I believe the last; and I hope to-morrow to have the pleasure of hearing by an express, the confirmation of its being repealed, and every thing put in its proper channel again, and trade once more flourish: For of late there has been a total stagnation of all business; thousands of poor manufactures at Birmingham, Sheffield, Yorkshire, &c. &c. have been turned off, and are now starving for want of employ: and what the consequences will be, unless the Stamp act be repealed, God only knows, as all orders for goods to be sent to North America are conditional, and not to be sent unless the act is repealed. The merchants in England have done all that men could do, towards retracting the act repealed, and we hope their endeavours will be crowned with success.

Extract of a letter, dated Bristol, Feb. 15, 1766. Various are the hopes and fears of popular discontent, but much more so with our unmonied merchants. One grand point the Parliament have determined, That they have a right to tax the Colonists with, or without their consent. However it is not owing to your sufferings that the Stamp Act is to be repealed, but to the distress it has given to the largest trading towns in the kingdom.

London, Feb. 17, 1766. The agreement of your merchants not to send for any goods from hence, until a Repeal, was a clincher. One Manufacturer who attended Parliament declared, unless that act was soon repealed, he should dismiss eleven hundred workmen; and it was hinted that one hundred thousand manufactures would soon be in London.

London, Feb. 18. We are informed that one manufacturer in the shoe way, in this city,

Of the merchants, traders, and manufacturers of the same city;

Of the merchants of Liverpool, trading to and from America and the coast of Africa;

Of the merchants, tradesmen, and manufacturers of the town and parish of Halifax;

Of the merchants and inhabitants of the borough of Leeds, trading to the several colonies of North America, and the manufacturers of broad woollen cloth, and sundry other assortments of woollen goods, manufactured for supplying the North American markets;

Of the merchants of Lancaster, trading to and from North America;

Of the merchants, manufactures, and owners of the town of Manchester, and neighborhood thereof;

Of the manufacturers of the town and county of Liechester;

And of the clothiers and manufacturers of superfine broad-cloth, in the town of Braford in Wiltshire;—

All complaining of a great decay in the trade of the North American colonies, owing to the late obstructions and embarrassments laid thereon, and praying relief

And afterwards, before the 28th. there was presented to the House, and read and rel since the resolution of the Americans to wear their own manufactures, has been obliged to reduce the number of his workmen, from about three hundred and fifty, to less than fifty. And that another in the Stocking trade, has been obliged to discharge as large a proportion of his workmen on the same account.

London, Feb. 22, 1766. It is said one Merchant has declared, that he has sent to value of fifty thousand pounds sterling, in the single article of nails to America, and that by countervailing this article, he has at present three hundred men out of business.

Last night the House of Commons voted for the repeal of the Stamp Act. They did break up until three this morning. The bells of Bow-church rang merrily on this occasion the majority of the people being for it. Above three hundred merchants of the great property went to the house on this occasion. The majority for the repeal was one hundred and eight.

London, Feb. 25. Extract of a letter from Amsterdam, dated Feb. 22. "We are here in the greatest uneasiness for fear your Parliament should repeal the Stamp Act, as we know well, nothing can tend more to the promotion of our Trade, than a disunion between Great Britain, and her Colonies."

London, Feb. 27. We are told from Colchester, in Essex, that on receiving the news concerning the Stamp Act, there was the greatest rejoicing ever known at that place, and orders given for baize, (the manufacture of that town,) to the value of 11,000*l.*

London, March 1. (Extract of a letter to Boston.) After various difficulties, violent struggles, and wonderful changes, it is at present highly probable that a total repeal of the Stamp Act will take place, for which a majority of 168 hath appeared in the House of Commons, after the utmost efforts made by the contending parties, the greater part, if not the whole, being influenced by European rather than American reasons.

London, March 1, 1766. Letters from Birmingham say that as soon as the news relating to the Stamp Act arrived there on Saturday, the bells were directly set a ringing, and demonstrations of joy shown in different parts of the town, and some hundreds of journeymen artificers, who had been long unemployed, were immediately engaged again for different manufactures carried on at that place.

London, March 6, 1766. Yesterday a body of two hundred Members of the House of Commons, carried up the Bill to the House of Peers, for repealing the Stamp Act. Assistance of such a number going up with a single Bill, has not been known in the memory of man.

London, March 19. Yesterday morning, about eleven o'clock, a great number of North American Merchants, went in their coaches from the King's Arms Tavern, in Cornhill to the House of Peers, to pay their duty to his Majesty, and to express their satisfaction at signing the bill for the repeal of the American Stamp Act. There were upwards of 50 coaches in the procession. And last night the said gentlemen despatched an express to Falmouth, with several copies of the act for repealing the Stamp Act, to be forwarded immediately to New York. At the same time all the vessels in the river, concerned in the Plantation trade, hoisted their colours, and were adorned with streamers by order of the Merchants.

Yesterday messengers were despatched to Birmingham, Sheffield and Manchester, and all the great manufacturing towns in England, to inform them of the signing of the above act.

Orders are given for several merchantmen, in the river, to proceed to sea immediately on their respective voyages to North America; some of which have been entered out since the 1st of November last.

The repeal of the Stamp Act begins already to produce a very favourable effect on the funds.

London, March 25. It is said that two eminent houses in this city last week shipped off goods and merchandise for the West Indies and North America, to the amount of 90,000*l.* sterling.

London, March 27. Upwards of three hundred Shipwrights, Carpenters, Riggers, have been taken into full employment since the repeal of the Stamp Act, many of whom had long been out of bread.

sent to the same committee, the following petitions, viz:

Of the principal inhabitants of the town of Frome;

Of the merchants, factors, and manufacturers of Birmingham;

Of the mayor, bailiffs, and commonalty of the city of Coventry, and the principal tradesmen and manufacturers of silk, ribband and worsted goods, in and near the said city;

Of the merchants and dealers in the silk, mohair, and button manufactures, residing in the town of Macclesfield;

Of the merchants, traders, and manufacturers of Wolverhampton;

Of the merchants, traders, and manufacturers of Stratbridge;

Of the merchants and manufacturers of Dudley;

Of the tradesmen, manufacturers, &c. of the borough of Minehead;

Of the mayor, aldermen and burgesses, principal inhabitants, and traders in the woolen manufactory in Taunton;

Of the master, wardens, and commonalty of blanket-weavers in Witney;

Of the mayor, recorder, aldermen, sheriff, and commonalty of the town and county of Newcastle upon Tyne;

Of the merchants of Glasgow, trading to North America;

Of the bailiff and burgesses of Chippenham; and

Of the principal tradesmen, manufacturers, and inhabitants of the town of Nottingham;

All containing much the same complaint as in the former petitions, and concluding with the same prayer.

In giving this list of petitions I have been the more particular, as it not only shows how much the people even of this kingdom are interested in this affair, but it also shows how diligent the merchants and factors of London had been in procuring petitions upon this occasion, from all parts of the kingdom.

Likewise, before the said 28th of January, there were several more letters and papers, relative to this affair laid before the House, by his Majesty's command, and a great many accounts relating to our trade in general, as well as to our American trade in particular, had been called for and presented; consequently the House, on that day, according to order, resolved itself into the said committee, as it again did on the 29th and 31st of January, and on the 3d, 5th, 7th, 10th, 11th, 12th, 13th, 17th, 18th, and 21st of February, on some of which days the committee continued sitting till after one o'clock the next morning; and we cannot wonder at their having spent so much time in that committee, if we consider what they had to do; for in this interval a great number of other letters and papers had been laid before the House, by his Majesty's command, a great number more of accounts presented, and a considerable number of gentlemen, forty-five examined, who had been ordered to attend for that purpose. [For examination of Dr. Franklin see p. 77.]

And moreover, a petition of the clothiers of Melksham, in Wiltshire, had been presented and referred, and beside all these petitions from the manufacturing cities and towns in this island, there had been presented and read on the 11th of February, a petition of Stephen Fuller, Esq. Agent of the Island of Jamaica, setting forth that in the year 1760 there broke out two rebellions in the said Island which threatened not only the destruction of the inhabitants, but the loss of that valuable colony to Great Britain; and that after the said rebellions, the assembly of the said island thought proper, in order to defray the expense then increased on account thereof, to lay a tax by way of stamps, which tax was laid in the year 1760, and continued till the year 1763, when that law was suffered to expire on account, as the petitioner is informed and believes, of its being unequal and burthensome, as it certainly was in a high degree; and that the petitioners most humbly conceiving that the act for imposing certain stamp duties, in the British colonies and plantations in America, will be attended with the same inconveniences, if not greater, (on account that the forfeitures and penalties incurred may be sued for and recovered in any court of record, or in any court of admiralty or vice admiralty in the island, at the election of the informer or prosecutor,) pray- ed for such relief in the premises as to the house should seem meet.

There had, also, on the 21st of January, been presented a petition of Edward Montagu, Agent for the colony of Virginia, and a petition of William Knox, Agent for the province of Georgia, representing the inability of these provinces to pay the stamp duty; which three petitions were the only petitions presented this session in the name of any of our American colonies; for the petitions, by their orders in the preceding session, against the stamp duty bill, whilst passing, had met with such a cold reception that I suppose most of them neglected to send orders to their agents to petition upon this oc-

* The colonies petitioned this year, not separately, as at the preceding session, but collectively, by means of the Congress. The petition of the Congress, (see p. 59) of which the writer of this history takes no notice, was presented to the House of Commons on the 27th of January, 1766, but, instead of being referred, as the other petitions were, was disposed of in the following manner:

"And the question being proposed that the said petition be brought up;
"The House was moved that the resolution of the House, of the 14th day of November, 1689, might be read.

"And the same was read accordingly, and is as followeth; viz:

"Resolved, That all Petitions presented to the House, ought to be signed by the petitioners, with their own hands, by their names or marks."

"Ordered, That the other Orders of the Day be now read."

easion, as they despaired of obtaining relief from Parliament, and, as with a ways happen whilst the people have any spirit left, this method of making them think of having recourse to other methods for obtaining it.

We cannot therefore wonder, as I have said, at the committee having spent so much time in considering and examining into this important affair; however, having, at last, on the 21st of February, finished in part their inquiry, as soon as Mr. Speaker had, on that day, resumed the Chair, Mr. Fuller reported from the committee, that they had come to several resolutions, which they had directed him to report, and that he was also directed by the committee to make several motions, when the House would please to receive the same; whereupon it was ordered that the report should be received on the 24th; and then Mr. Fuller, by direction from the Committee, moved that they might have leave to sit again, which it was resolved they should do, on the 4th of March, then next.

On the said 24th of February, before the said report was made, there was presented to the House and read, a petition of the Mayor, Aldermen, Citizens, Merchants, Tradesmen, and Manufacturers of the city of Worcester, whose names were thereunto subscribed; setting forth that the then present stagnation of trade to the British Colonies in America, occasioned, as they apprehended, by the late Stamp Act, and other restrictions affecting their trade, was severely felt by many of the petitioners, and filled them with the most alarming apprehensions, foreseeing in a great measure their own, and the inevitable ruin of numbers of their fellow subjects, if some effectual means were not immediately applied, to recover and preserve so inestimable a branch of Commerce in these kingdoms, and therefore, &c.

This petition was of course referred to the same committee; but doubtless had an influence upon the House, when they came to consider the report from that Committee, which was that day received, and consisted of the following resolutions, viz:

That it is the opinion of this Committee—

1st. That the king's majesty, by and with the advice and consent of the lords spiritual and temporal, and commons of Great Britain, in parliament assembled, had, hath, and of right ought to have, full power and authority to make laws and statutes, of sufficient force and validity to bind the Colonies and People of America, subjects of the crown of Great Britain, in all cases whatsoever.

2nd. That tumults and insurrections of the most dangerous nature have been raised and carried on in several of the North American Colonies, in open defiance of the powers and dignity of his Majesty's government, and in manifest violation of the laws and legislative authority of this kingdom.

3d. That the said tumults and insurrections have been greatly countenanced and inflamed by votes and resolutions, passed in several of the assemblies of the said provinces, highly injurious to the honour of his Majesty's government, and tending to destroy the legal and constitutional dependency of the said colonies on the imperial crown and parliament of Great Britain.

4th. That such persons, who, on account of the desire which they have manifested to comply with, or to assist in carrying into execution, any acts of the legislature of Great Britain, relating to the British Colonies in North America, have suffered any injury or damage, ought to have full and ample compensation made to them for the same, by the respective colonies in which such injuries or damages were sustained.

5th. That the house be moved, to resolve and declare, that all his Majesty's subjects, residing in the said Colonies, who have manifested their desire to comply with, or to assist in carrying into execution, any acts of the legislature of Great Britain, relating to the British Colonies in North America, have acted as dutiful and loyal subjects, and are therefore entitled to, and will assuredly have, the protection of the House of Commons of Great Britain.

6th. That all persons, who, by reason of the tumults and outrages in North America, have not been able to procure stamped paper, since the passing of the act for laying certain duties of Stamps in the Colonies, ought to be indemnified from all penalties and forfeitures, which they may have incurred, by writing, engrossing, or printing, on paper, vellum, or parchment, not duly stamped, as required by the said act, under proper restrictions.

7th. That the house be moved, that leave be given to bring in a bill to repeal an act passed in the last session of Parliament, intituled, "An act for granting and applying certain Stamp Duties, and other duties, in the British Colonies and Plantations in America, towards further defraying the expenses of defending, protecting, and securing the same; and for amending such parts of the several acts of Parliament, relating to the trade and revenues of the said Colonies and Plantations as direct the manner of determining and recovering the penalties and forfeitures therein mentioned."

The first of these resolutions being read a second time, a motion was made for its being postponed, but after a debate, the question being put, it was carried in the negative, after which the resolution was agreed to; as were the 2d, 3d and 4th, after being read a second time, without any opposition; and after the 5th was read a second time, a motion being made accordingly, the house did resolve and declare as thereby proposed; after which the 6th was read a second time and agreed to. Then the 7th and last, which had occasioned a long debate in the committee, but was there agreed to, by 275 to 167; and now upon the report as soon as it was read a second time, a motion was made for its being recommitted, whereupon some part of the act of the 5th of Queen Anne, chap. 8. for an union of the two kingdoms of England and Scotland, particularly, I suppose, the 18th article of that famous treaty, was, upon motion, read, and a long debate ensued; but upon the questions being put, it was carried in the negative, [yeas 133, nays 240.] consequently a motion was in course made, pursuant to said resolution, and it was ordered that leave be given to bring in a bill to repeal the act passed in the last session, for granting and applying certain Stamp Duties, and other, &c. [the Stamp Act;] and that Mr. Fuller, Mr. Secretary Conway, Mr. Pitt, Mr. Townshend, Mr. Chancellor of the Exchequer, Sir George Saville, Sir John Cavendish, Mr. Thomas Townshend, Jun. Mr. Onslow, Mr. Attorney General, Mr. Solicitor General, Mr. Cooper, Mr. Alderman Beckford, Mr. Hussey, Mr. Prowse, Sir William Baker, Mr. Cooke, Sir William Meredith, Colonel Barre, and Mr. Burke, do prepare and bring in the same.

A motion was then made for an instruction to the said gentlemen, that they do make effectual provision in the said bill, for preserving the just rights and authority of the British legislature, by directing all votes and resolutions of the Assemblies of any of the American Colonies, repugnant to the said rights and authority, to be erased and expunged, before the said repeal shall take place in such respective Colonies. This brought on a new debate, but upon the question being put, it was carried in the negative by 240 to 133, chiefly I suppose, on account of the next motion, then intended to be made, for it was presently moved and ordered, that a bill or bills be brought in upon the first and sixth of the aforesaid resolutions, and that Mr. Fuller, Mr. Secretary Conway, Mr. Chancellor of the Exchequer, Lord John Cavendish, Mr. Thomas Townshend, Jun. Mr. Onslow, Mr. Attorney General, Mr. Solicitor General, and Mr. Cooper, bring in the same.

Then it was ordered, that 2d, 3d, 4th and 5th of the aforesaid resolutions, be humbly laid before his Majesty; and it was resolved to address his Majesty, humbly to desire that he would be graciously pleased to give directions that the said resolutions, be transmitted to the governors of his Majesty's Colonies and Plantations in America, to be by them communicated to the Assemblies of their respective governments.

The house having now continued sitting till after one o'clock in the morning, of the 25th, they adjourned till the next morning the 26th, on which day Mr. Fuller presented to the house according to order, a bill "for the better securing the dependency of his Majesty's dominions in America, upon the crown and parliament of Great-Britain," which bill was then read a first time, and ordered to be read a second time the next morning: and presently afterwards Mr. Secretary Conway presented to the house, according to order, a bill to repeal an act made in the last session of Parliament, entitled, An act for granting and applying certain Stamp Duties, and other, &c. which bill was then read a first time, and ordered to be read a second time also the next morning.

But next day, before either of these bills was read a second time, there was presented to the house, and read, a petition of the Merchants, traders, and Manufacturers of cutlery and other hard ware, of the town of Sheffield complaining of a great decay in their trade to North America, and praying relief; which petition was referred to the same committee that all the former had been referred to, and without doubt had some effect upon the house with regard to the said two bills then depending before them, both which were read that day a second time, and committed to a committee of the whole house; and both passed through the house of commons in the common course, and with such dispatch, that they were both sent to the Lords on the 4th of March.

But in the house of Lords both these bills were vigorously contested, for it must be confessed that if the words, (to make laws and statutes of, &c. be taken in the most extensive sense, they do seem to be a little inconsistent: However, the first of these two bills was opposed only by a few of their lordships; but the last by a great number, and so vigorously, that it not only occasioned two long debates, but also two spirited protests. [See p. 86.] And as the words (to make laws and statutes of, &c.) may be taken in such a confined sense as to exclude those statutes made for raising the particular and incidental grants of money, made by the commons of Great-Britain, accepted of by the King, and consented to, though not advised, by the Lords, therefore those Lords who had opposed the first of these two bills did not, it seems think it necessary to have any protest entered on the journals of that house, consequently to the history of these two bills, I have only to add, that the first was on the 13th returned to the House of Commons, with only one amendment, to which their lordships desired the concurrence of that house, which was taken into consideration and agreed to as soon as the messengers had withdrawn; and Mr. Fuller was ordered to carry the bill to the Lords and acquaint them that the house had agreed to the amendment made by their lordships; and that on the 18th their lordships acquainted the house of commons by message, that they had agreed to the second without any amendment; and so ready was his Majesty to give satisfaction to his Colonies in America, though he was thereby required to give up all the money intended to be raised by the act, which was thus to be repealed, that he came the very same day to the House of Lords, and gave his assent to these two bills,* among others that were then ready for the royal assent.

* An act to repeal an act made in the last session of Parliament, intituled, An act for granting and applying certain stamp duties, and other duties, in the British colonies and plantations in America, towards further defraying the expenses of defending, protecting, and securing the same; and for amending such parts of the several acts of parliament relating to the trade and revenues of the said colonies and plantations as direct the manner of determining and recovering the penalties and forfeitures therein mentioned.

WHEREAS an act was passed in the last Session of parliament, intituled, An act for granting and applying certain stamp duties and other duties, in the British

From these acts the reader must perceive that there is no provision made in either of them, in pursuance of the aforesaid 6th resolution, and indeed no bill, though ordered, had as yet been presented, therefore, on the said 18th of March, after these two acts had received the royal assent, an instruction was ordered to the gentlemen who had been ordered to prepare and bring in a bill, pursuant to the said 6th resolution, that they do make provision in the said bill, for making valid in law, all the writings, engrossings and printings, wrote, engrossed, or printed, in America, upon paper, vellum, or parchment, not stamped according to law, under proper restrictions. Mr. Fuller presented the bill the next day to the House, being then entitled "a bill to indemnify persons who have incurred, or may incur, penalties and forfeitures, by writing, engrossing, or printing, in his Majesty's dominions in America, upon unstamped paper, vellum, or parchment, contrary to an act passed at the last session of parliament, for granting and applying certain stamp duties, and other duties, in the British Colonies and Plantations in America; and for making good and valid all writings, engrossings, and printings, wrote, engrossed, or printed, or which shall be wrote, engrossed or printed upon unstamped paper, which by the said act would have been, or shall be null and void upon payment of certain sums of money."

This was the title of the bill when it was presented to the house, and it was then read a first time, and ordered to be read a second time, which it was on the 25th, and committed to a committee of the whole house for the 9th of April; but in the mean time an objection was raised to the bill as it then stood, that we had already by an act of that session, repealed, wholly, absolutely, and unconditionally, the Stamp Duty act of the preceding session; whereas by the bill then depending before the house, we were to enact that the said act of the preceding session shall be repealed only in part and upon condition.

This objection had so much weight, that the order for committing the bill was from time to time put off, until the 16th of May, on which day, the house resolved itself in a committee of the whole house, on the said bill, went through the same with several amendments, and ordered the report to be received on the 22d, when the amendments were agreed to, and the bill ordered to be engrossed.

On the 30th it was, according to order, read a third time, and a motion made to resolve, that the bill do pass, which after reading the above-mentioned 6th resolution of the 24th of February, was agreed to, and as all restric-colonies and plantations in America, towards further defraying the expenses of defending, protecting, and securing the same; and for amending such parts of the several acts of parliament relating to the trade and revenues of the said colonies and plantations, as direct the manner of determining and recovering the penalties and forfeitures therein mentioned: and whereas the continuance of the said act would be attended with many inconveniences, and may be productive of consequences greatly detrimental to the Commercial interests of these kingdoms; may it therefore please your most excellent Majesty, that it may be enacted; and be it enacted by the King's most excellent majesty, by and with the advice and consent of the lords spiritual and temporal and commons, in this present parliament assembled, and by the authority of the same, That from and after the first day of May, one thousand seven hundred and sixty-six, the above-mentioned act, and the several matters and things therein contained, shall be, and is and are hereby repealed and made void to all intents and purposes whatsoever.

An act for the better securing the dependency of his Majesty's dominions in America upon the crown and parliament of Great Britain.

WHEREAS several of the houses of representatives in his Majesty's colonies and plantations in America, have of late, against law claimed to themselves, or to the general assemblies of the same, the sole and exclusive right of imposing duties and taxes upon his Majesty's subjects in the said colonies and plantations; and have, in pursuance of such claim, passed certain votes, resolutions, and orders, derogatory to the legislative authority of parliament, and inconsistent with the dependency of the said colonies and plantations upon the crown of Great Britain: may it therefore please your most excellent Majesty, that it may be declared; and be it declared by the King's most excellent majesty, by and with the advice and consent of the lords spiritual and temporal, and commons, in this present parliament assembled, and by the authority of the same, That the said colonies and plantations in America, have been, are, and of right ought to be, subordinate unto, and dependent upon the imperial crown and parliament of Great Britain; and that the King's majesty by and with the advice and consent of the lords spiritual and temporal, and commons of Great Britain, in parliament assembled had, hath, and of right ought to have, full power and authority to make laws and statutes of sufficient force and validity to bind the colonies and people of America, subjects to the crown of Great Britain) in all cases whatsoever.

II. And be it further declared and enacted by the authority aforesaid, That all resolutions, votes, orders, and proceedings, in any of the said colonies or plantations, whereby the power and authority of the parliament of Great Britain, to make laws and statutes as aforesaid, is denied, or drawn into question, are, and are hereby declared to be, utterly null and void to all intents and purposes whatsoever.

tions and conditions for the payment of any money had been in the committee left out, it was resolved, that the title of the bill should be, "an act for indemnifying persons who have incurred certain penalties inflicted by an act of the last session of Parliament, for granting certain Stamp Duties in the British Colonies and Plantations in America; and for making valid all instruments executed, or enrolled there, on unstamped paper, vellum, or parchment:" And Mr. Fuller was then ordered to carry the bill to the lords, and desire their concurrence; which their lordships were pleased to grant, without any amendment; and on the 6th of June the bill received the royal assent.

It is unnecessary to give any abstract of his, as the substance of it will appear from the resolution and instructions on which it was founded, and the amendment made by the committee, in leaving out the restrictions directed by the instruction, was not only a right but a prudent amendment, for if the courts or judges in America had attempted to carry the restrictions or conditions contained in the first draught of the bill into execution, it would have been a great grievance upon many innocent men, and might probably have revived those disturbances which had been occasioned by the Stamp Duty Act, and intended to be extinguished by the repeal of that act; consequently, if this amendment had not been made, we should have been in danger of defeating our own design; which shows the advantage we reap from our established forms in the passing of any new law.

Thus I have given the history of the three unfortunate bills which were brought in and passed in pursuance of the first resolutions of the committee appointed to consider of the several papers laid before the House by His Majesty's command, relative to the Stamp duty Act, of the preceding session, and the disturbances thereby occasioned in America.

When the bill to repeal the Stamp Act was before the Committee of the House of Commons, Dr. Benjamin Franklin was examined at the bar of the House on the affairs of America. The following is a copy of the examination.

Q. What is your name, and place of abode?

A. Franklin, of Philadelphia.

Q. Do the Americans pay any considerable taxes among themselves?

A. Certainly many, and very heavy taxes.

Q. What are the present taxes in Pennsylvania, laid by the laws of the colony?

A. There are taxes on all estates, real and personal, a poll-tax, a tax on all offices, professions, trades and businesses, according to their profits; an excise on all wine, rum, and other spirits; and a duty of ten pounds per head on all negroes imported, with some other duties. For what purposes are those taxes laid?—for the support of the civil and military establishments of the country, and to discharge the heavy debt contracted in the last war.

How long are those taxes to continue?—

Those for discharging the debt are to continue till 1772, and longer, if the debt should not be then all discharged. The others must always continue.

Was it not expected that the debt would have been sooner discharged?—It was, when the peace was made with France and Spain—But a fresh war breaking out with the Indians, a fresh load of debt was incurred, and the taxes, of course, continued longer by a new law.

Are not all the people very able to pay those taxes?—No. The frontier counties, all along the continent, have been frequently ravaged by the enemy, and greatly impoverished, are able to pay very little tax. And therefore, in consideration of their distresses, our late tax laws do expressly favour those counties, excusing the sufferers; and I suppose the same is done in other governments.

Are not you concerned in the management of the post office in America?—Yes. I am deputy post-master-general of North America.

Don't you think the distribution of stamps, by post, to all the inhabitants, very practicable, if there was no opposition?—The posts only go along the sea-coasts; they do not, except in a few instances, go back into the country; and if they did, sending for stamps by post would occasion an expence of postage, amounting, in many cases, to much more than that of the stamps themselves.

Are you acquainted with Newfoundland?—I never was there.

Do you know whether there are any post-roads on that island?—I have heard that there are no roads at all; but that the communication between one settlement and another is by sea only.

Can you disperse the stamps by post in Canada?—There is only a post between Montreal and Quebec. The inhabitants live so scattered and remote from each other, in that vast country, that posts cannot be supported among them, and therefore, they cannot get stamps per post. The English colonies too, along the frontiers, are very thinly settled.

From the thinness of the back settlements, would not the Stamp Act be extremely inconvenient to the inhabitants, if executed?—To be sure it would; as many of the inhabitants could not get stamps when they had occasion for them, without taking long journeys, and spending perhaps three or four pounds, that the crown might get six-pence.

Are not the colonies, from their circumstances, very able to pay the stamp duty?—In my opinion, there is not gold and silver enough in the colonies to pay the stamp duty for one year.

Don't you know that the money arising from the stamps was all to be laid out in America?—I know it is appropriated by the act to the American service; but it will be spent in the conquered colonies, where the soldiers are not in the colonies that pay it.

Is there not a balance of trade due from the colonies where the troops are posted, that will bring back the money to the old colonies?—I think not. I believe very little would come back. I know of no trade likely to bring it back. I think it would come from the colonies where it was spent directly to England; for I have always observed, that in every colony the more plenty the means of remittance to England, the more goods are sent for, and the more trade with England carried on.

What number of white inhabitants do you think there are in Pennsylvania?—I suppose there may be about 160,000.

What number of them are Quakers?—Perhaps a third.

What number of Germans?—Perhaps another third; but I cannot speak with certainty.

Have any number of the Germans seen service, as soldiers, in Europe?—Yes,—many of them, both in Europe and America.

Are they as much dissatisfied with the stamp duty as the English?—Yes, and more; and with reason, as their stamps are, in many cases, to be double.

How many white men do you suppose there are in North America?—About 300,000, from sixteen to sixty years of age.

What may be the amount of one year's imports into Pennsylvania from Britain?—I have been informed that our merchants compute the imports from Britain to be above 500,000 pounds.

What may be the amount of the produce of your province exported to Britain?—It must be small, as we produce little that is wanted in Britain. I suppose it cannot exceed 40,000l.

How then do you pay the balance?—The balance is paid by our produce carried to the West Indies (and sold in our own islands, or to the French, Spaniards, Danes, and Dutch)—by the same carried to other colonies in North America, (as to New England, Nova Scotia, Newfoundland, Carolina and Georgia)—by the same, carried to different parts of Europe, (as Spain, Portugal and Italy.) In all which places we receive either money, bills of exchange, or commodities that suit for remittance to Britain; which, together with all the profits on the industry of our merchants and mariners, arising in those circuitous voyages, and the freights made by their ships, centre finally in Britain to discharge the balance and pay for British manufactures continually used in the provinces, or sold to foreigners by our traders.

Have you heard of any difficulties lately laid on the Spanish trade?—Yes, I have heard that it has been greatly obstructed by some new regulations, and by the English men-of-war and cutters stationed all along the coast in America.

Do you think it right that America should be protected by this country and pay no part of the expense?—That is not the case. The colonies raised, clothed and paid, during the last war, near twenty-five thousand men, and spent many millions.

Were you not reimbursed by Parliament?—We were only reimbursed what, in your opinion, we had advanced beyond our proportion, or beyond what might reasonably be expected from us; and it was a very small part of what we spent. Pennsylvania, in particular, disbursed about 500,000*l.* and the reimbursement, in the whole, did not exceed 60,000*l.*

You have said that you pay heavy taxes in Pennsylvania; what do they amount to in the pound?—The tax on all estates, real and personal, is eighteen pence in the pound fully rated, and the tax on the profits of trades and professions, with other taxes, do, I suppose, make full half a crown in the pound.

Do you know any thing of the rate of exchange in Pennsylvania, and whether it has fallen lately?—It is commonly from one hundred and seventy to one hundred and seventy-five. I have heard that it has fallen lately from one hundred and seventy-five, to one hundred and sixty two and a half; owing, I suppose, to their lessening their orders for goods; and when their debts to this country are paid, I think the exchange will probably be at par.

Do not you think the people of America would submit to pay the stamp duty, if it was moderated?—No, never, unless compelled by force of arms.

Are not the taxes in Pennsylvania laid or unequally, in order to burthen the English trade; particularly the tax on professions and business?—It is not more burthensome, in proportion, than the tax on lands. It is intended and supposed to take an equal proportion of profits.

How is the Assembly composed? Of what kinds of people are the members; landholders or traders?—It is composed of landholders, merchants, and artificers.

Are not the majority landholders?—I believe they are.

Do not they, as much as possible, shift the tax off from the land, to ease that, and lay the burthen heavier on trade?—I have never understood it so. I never heard such a thing suggested. And indeed an attempt of that kind could answer no purpose. The merchant or trader is always skilled in figures, and ready with his pen and ink. If unequal burthens are laid on his trade, he puts an additional price on his goods; and the customers, who are chiefly landholders, finally pay the greatest part, if not the whole.

What was the temper of America towards Great Britain before the year 1763?—The best in the world. They submitted willingly to the government of the crown, and paid, in all their courts, obedience to acts of parliament. Numerous as the people are in the several old provinces, they cost you nothing in forts, citadels, garrisons or armies, to keep them in subjection. They were governed by this country at the expence only of a little pen, ink, and paper. They were led by a thread. They had not only a respect, but an affection for Great Britain, for its laws, its customs and manners, and even a fondness for its fashions, that greatly increased the commerce. Natives of Britain were always treated with particular regard; to be an Old-England man was, of itself, a character of some respect, and gave a kind of rank among us.

And what is their temper now?—O, very much altered.

Did you ever hear the authority of parliament to make laws for America questioned till lately?—The authority of parliament was allowed to be valid in all laws, except such as should lay internal taxes. It was never disputed in laying duties to regulate commerce.

In what proportion hath population increased in America?—I think the inhabitants of all the provinces together, taken at a medium, double in about 25 years. But their demand for British manufactures increase much faster, as the consumption is not merely in proportion to their numbers, but grows with the growing abilities of the same numbers to pay for them. In 1723, the whole importation from Britain to Pennsylvania, was but about 15,000*l*. sterling; it is now near half a million.

In what light did the people of America use to consider the parliament of Great Britain? They considered the parliament as the great bulwark and security of their liberties and privileges, and always spoke of it with the utmost respect and veneration. Arbitrary ministers, they thought, might possibly, at times, attempt to oppress them; but they relied on it, that the parliament, on application, would always give redress. They remembered with gratitude, a strong instance of this, when a bill was brought into parliament, with a clause to make royal instructions laws in the colonies, which the House of Commons would not pass, and it was thrown out.

And have they not still the same respect for parliament?—No; it is greatly lessened.

To what causes is that owing?—To a concurrence of causes; the restraints lately laid on their trade, by which the bringing of foreign gold and silver into the colonies was prevented; the prohibition of making paper money among themselves and then demand a new and heavy tax by stamps, taking away, at the same time, trials by juries, and refusing to receive and hear their humble petitions.

Don't you think they would submit to the Stamp Act, if it was modified, the obnoxious parts taken out, and the duty reduced to some particulars, of small moment?—No; they will never submit to it.

What do you think is the reason that the people of America increase faster than in England?—Because they marry younger and more generally.

Why so?—Because any young couple that are industrious, may easily obtain land of their own, on which they can raise a family.

Are not the lower rank of people more at their ease in America than in England?—They may be so, if they are sober and diligent, as they are better paid for their labour.

What is your opinion of a future tax, imposed on the same principle with that of the Stamp Act, how would the Americans receive it?—Just as they do this. They would not pay it.

Have not you heard of the resolution of this House and of the House of Lords, asserting the right of parliament relating to America, including a power to tax the people there?—Yes, I have heard of such resolutions.

What will be the opinion of the Americans on those resolutions? They will think them unconstitutional and unjust.

Was it an opinion in America before 1763, that the parliament had no right to lay taxes and duties there?—I never heard any objection to the right of laying duties to regulate commerce; but a right to lay internal taxes was never supposed to be in parliament, as we are not represented there.

On what do you found your opinion, that the people in America made any such distinction?—I know that whenever the subject has occurred in conversation where I have been present, it has appeared to be the opinion of every one, that we could not be taxed in a parliament where we were not represented. But the payment of duties laid by act of Parliament, as regulations of commerce was never disputed.

But can you name any act of assembly, or public act of any of your governments, that made such distinction?—I do not know that there was any; I think there was never an occasion to make any such an act, till now that you have attempted to tax us; that has occasioned resolutions of assembly, declaring the distinction, in which I think every assembly on the continent, and every member in every assembly, have been unanimous.

What then could occasion conversations on that subject before that time?—I here was in 1754 a proposition made (I think it came from hence) that in case of a war, which was then apprehended, the governors of the colonies should meet, and order the levying of troops, building of forts, and taking every other necessary measure for the general defence; and should draw on the treasury here for the sums expended, which were afterwards to be raised in the colonies by a general tax, to be laid on them by act of parliament. This occasioned a good deal of conversation on the subject, and the general opinion was, that the parliament neither would nor could lay any tax on us, till we were duly represented in parliament, because it was not just, nor agreeable to the nature of an English constitution.

Don't you know there was a time in New-York, when it was under consideration to make an application to parliament to lay taxes on that colony, upon a deficiency arising from the assembly's refusing or neglecting to raise the necessary supplies for the support of the civil government?—I never heard of it.

There was such an application under consideration in New-York; and do you apprehend they could suppose the right of parliament to lay a tax in America was only local, and confined to the case of a deficiency in a particular colony, by a refusal of its assembly to raise the necessary supplies?—They could not suppose such a case, as that the assembly would not raise the necessary supplies to support its own government. An assembly that would refuse it must want common sense, which cannot be supposed. I think there was never any such case at New-York, and that it must be a misrepresentation, or the fact must be misunderstood. I know there have been some attempts, by ministerial instructions from hence, to oblige the assemblies to settle permanent salaries on governors, which they wisely refused to do; but I believe no assembly of New-York, or any other colony, ever refused duly to support government by proper allowances, from time to time, to public officers.

But in case of a governor, acting by instruction, should call on an assembly to raise the necessary supplies, and the assembly should refuse to do it, do you not think it would then be for the good of the people of the colony, as well as necessary to government, that the parliament should tax them?—I do not think it would be necessary. If an assembly could possibly be so absurd as to refuse raising the supplies requisite for the maintenance of government among them, they could not long remain in such a situation; the disorders and confusion occasioned by it must soon bring them to reason.

If it should not, ought not the right to be in Great Britain of applying a remedy?—A right only to be used in such a case, I should have no objection to, supposing it to be used merely for the good of the people of the colony.

But who is to judge of that, Britain or the colony?—Those that feel can best judge.

You say the colonies have always submitted to external taxes, and object to the right of parliament only in laying internal taxes; now can you shew that there is any kind of difference between the two taxes to the colony on which they may be laid?—I think the difference is very great. An external tax is a duty laid on commodities imported; that duty is added to the first cost, and other charges on the commodity, and when it is offered to sale, makes a part of the price. If the people do not like it at that price, they refuse it; they are not obliged to pay it. But an internal tax is forced from the people without their consent, if not laid by their own representatives. The stamp act says we shall have no commerce, make no exchange of property with each other, neither purchase nor grant, nor recover debts; we shall neither marry nor make our wills, unless we pay such and such sums, and thus it is intended to extort our money from us, or ruin us by the consequences of refusing to pay it.

But supposing the internal tax or duty to be laid on the necessities of life imported into your colony, will not that be the same thing in its effects as an internal tax?—I do not know a single article imported into the northern colonies, but what they can either do without, or make themselves.

Don't you think cloth from England absolutely necessary to them?—No, by no means absolutely necessary; with industry and good management, they may very well supply themselves with all they want.

Will it not take a long time to establish that manufacture among them; and must they not in the mean while suffer greatly?—I think not. They have made a surprising progress already. And I am of opinion, that before their old clothes are worn out, they will have new ones of their own making.

Can they possibly find wool enough in North America?—They have taken steps to increase the wool. They entered into general combination to eat no more lamb, and very few lambs were killed last year. This course persisted in, will soon make a prodigious difference in the quantity of wool. And the establishing of great manufactories like those in the clothing towns here, is not necessary as it is where the business is to be carried on for the purposes of trade. The people will all spin and work for themselves, in their own houses.

Can there be wool and manufacture enough in one or two years?—In three years, I think they may.

Does not the severity of the winter, in the northern colonies, occasion the wool to be of bad quality?—No, the wool is very fine and good.

In the more southern colonies as in Virginia don't you know that wool is coarse, and only a kind of hair?—I don't know it. I never heard it. Yet I have been sometimes in Virginia. I cannot say I ever took particular notice of the wool there, but I believe it is good though I cannot speak positively of it; but Virginia, and the colonies south of it, have less occasion for wool; their winters are short, and not very severe, and they can very well clothe themselves with linen and cotton of their own raising for the rest of the year.

Are not the people in the more northern colonies obliged to fodder their sheep all the winter?—In some of the most northern colonies they may be obliged to do it some part of the winter.

Considering the resolutions of parliament as to the right, do you think, if the Stamp Act is repealed, that the North Americans will be satisfied?—I believe they will.

Why do you think so?—I think the resolutions of right will give them very little concern, if they are never attempted to be carried into practice. The colonies will probably consider themselves in the same situation, in that respect, with Ireland; they know you claim the same right with regard to Ireland, but you never exercise it. And they may believe you never will exercise it in the colonies, any more than in Ireland, unless on some very extraordinary occasion.

But who are to be the judges of that extraordinary occasion? Is not the parliament?—Though the parliament may judge of the occasion, the people will think it can never exercise such right, till representatives from the colonies are admitted into parliament, and that whenever the occasion arises, representatives will be ordered.

Did you never hear that Maryland, during the last war, had refused to furnish a quota towards the common defence?—Maryland has been much misrepresented in that matter. Maryland, to my knowledge, never refused to contribute, or grant aids to the crown. The assemblies every year during the war, voted considerable sums, and formed bills to raise them. The bills were, according to the constitution of that province, sent up to the council, or upper house, for concurrence, that they might be presented to the Governor, in order to be enacted into laws. Unhappy disputes between the two houses arising, from the defects of that constitution principally, rendered all the bills but one or two abortive.

the proprietary's council rejected them. It is true, Maryland did not then contribute its proportion; but it was, in my opinion, the fault of the government, not of the people.

Was it not talked of in the other provinces, as a proper measure, to apply to parliament to compel them?—I have heard much discourse; but as it was well known the people were not to blame, no such application was ever made, nor any step taken towards it.

Was it not proposed at a public meeting? Not that I know of.

Do you remember of the abolishing the paper currency in New England, by act of assembly?—I do remember its being abolished in the Massachusetts Bay.

Was not lieutenant-governor Hutchinson principally concerned in that transaction? I have heard so.

Was it not at that time a very unpopular war?—I believe it might, though I can say little about it, as I lived at a distance from that province.

Was not the scarcity of gold and silver an argument used against abolishing the paper?—I suppose it was.

What is the present opinion there of that war? Is it as unpopular as it was at first? I think it is not.

Have not instructions from hence been sometimes sent over to governors, highly oppressive, and unpolitical?—Yes.

Have not some governors dispensed with them for that reason?—Yes I have heard so.

Did the Americans ever dispute the controlling power of parliament to regulate commerce?—No.

Can any thing less than a military force carry the stamp act into execution?—I do not see how a military force can be applied to that purpose.

Why may it not?—Suppose a military force sent into America, they will find nobody in arms; what are they to do? They cannot force a man to take stamps who chooses to do without them. They will not find a rebellion; they may indeed make one.

If the act is not repealed, what do you think will be the consequences?—A total loss of the respect and affection the people of America bear to this country, and of all the commerce that depends on that respect and affection.

How can the commerce be affected?—You will find, that if the act is not repealed, they will take very little of your manufactures in a short time.

Is it in their power to do without them? I think they may very well do without them.

Is it their interest not to take them?—The goods they take from Britain are either necessities, mere conveniences, or superfluities. The first, as cloth, &c. with a little industry, they can make at home; the second they can do without, till they are able to provide them among themselves; and the last, which are much the greatest part, they will strike off immediately. They are mere articles of fashion, purchased and consumed, because the fashion in a respected country; but will now be detested and rejected. The people have already struck off, by general agreement, the use of all goods fashionable in mournings, and many thousand pounds worth are sent back as unsaleable.

Is it their interest to make cloth at home?—I think they may at present get it cheaper from Britain; I mean of the same fineness and neatness of workmanship; but when one considers other circumstances, the restraints on their trade, and the difficulty of making remittances, it is their interest to make every thing.

Suppose an act of internal regulations connected with a tax, how would they receive it?—I think it would be objected to.

Then no regulation with a tax would be submitted to?—Their opinion is, that when aids to the crown are wanted, they are to be asked of the several assemblies, according to the old established usage, who will, as they always have done, grant them freely. And that their money ought not to be given away, without their consent, by persons at a distance, unacquainted with their circumstances and abilities. The granting aids to the crown, is the only means they have of recommending themselves to their sovereign, and they think it extremely hard and unjust, that a body of men, in which they have no representatives, should make a merit to itself of giving and granting what is not its own, but theirs, and deprive them of a right they esteem of the utmost value and importance, as it is the security of all their other rights.

But is not the post-office, which they have long received, a tax as well as a regulation?—No; the money paid for the postage of a letter is not of the nature of a tax; it is merely a quantum meruit for a service done; no person is compelled to pay the money, if he does not chuse to receive the service. A man may still, as before the act, send his letter by a servant, a special messenger, or a friend, if he thinks it cheaper and safer.

But do they not consider the regulations of the post-office, by the act of last year, as a tax?—By the regulations of last year the rate of postage was generally abated near thirty per cent. through all America; they certainly cannot consider such abatement as a tax.

If an excise was laid by parliament, which they might likewise avoid paying, by not consuming the articles excised, would they then not object to it?—They would certainly object to it, as an excise is unconnected with any service done, and is merely an aid which they think ought to be asked of them, and granted by them, if they are to pay it; and can be granted for them by no others whatsoever, whom they have not empowered for that purpose.

You say they do not object to the right of parliament, in laying duties on goods to be paid on their importation; now, is there any kind of difference between a duty on the importation of goods, and an excise on their consumption?—Yes, a very material one; an excise, for the reasons I have just mentioned, they think you can have no right to lay with in their country. But the sea is yours; you maintain, by your fleets, the safety of navigation in it, and keep it clear of pirates; you may have therefore a natural and equitable right to some toll or duty on merchandise carried through that part of your dominions, towards defraying the expense you are at in ships to maintain the safety of that carriage.

Does this reasoning hold in the case of a duty laid on the produce of their lands exported? And would they not then object to such a duty?—If it tended to make the produce so much dearer abroad as to lessen the demand for it, to be sure they would object to such a duty; not to your right of laying it, but they would complain of it as a burthen, and petition you to lighten it.

Is not the duty paid on the tobacco exported a duty of that kind?—That, I think, is only on tobacco carried coastwise from one colony to another, and appropriated as a fund for supporting the college at Williamsburg, in Virginia.

Have not the assemblies in the West Indies the same natural rights with those in North America?—Undoubtedly.

And is there not a tax laid there on their sugars exported?—I am not much acquainted with the West Indies, but the duty of four and a half per cent. on sugars exported, was, I believe, granted by their own assemblies.

How much is the poll-tax in your province laid on unmarried men?—It is, I think, fifteen shillings, to be paid by every single freeman, upwards of twenty-one years old.

What is the annual amount of all the taxes in Pennsylvania?—I suppose about 20,000 pounds sterling.

Supposing the stamp act continued and enforced, do you imagine that ill-humour will induce the Americans to give as much for worse manufactures of their own, and use the more preferable to better of ours?—Yes, I think so. People will pay as freely to gratify one passion as another, their resentment as their pride.

Would the people at Boston discontinue their trade?—The merchants are a very small number compared with the body of the people, and must discontinue their trade if nobody will buy their goods.

What are the body of the people in the colonies?—They are farmers, husbandmen, or planters.

Would they suffer the produce of their lands to rot?—No; but they would not raise so much. They would manufacture more and plough less.

Would they live without the administration of justice in civil matters, and suffer all the inconvenience of such a situation for any considerable time, rather than take the stamps supposing the stamps were protected by a sufficient force, where every one might have them?—I think the supposition impracticable, that the stamps should be so protected as that every one might have them. The act requires sub-distributors to be appointed in every county town, district, and village, and they would be necessary. But the principal distributors, who were to have had a considerable profit on the whole, have not thought it worth while to continue in the office; and I think it impossible to find sub-distributors fit to be trusted, who, for the trifling profit that must come to their share, would incur the odium, and run the hazard that would attend it; and if they could be found, I think it impracticable to protect the stamps in many distant and remote places.

But in places where they could be protected, would not the people use them, rather than remain in such a situation, unable to obtain any right, or recover by law, any debt?—It is hard to say what they would do. I can only judge what other people will think, and how they will act, by what I feel within myself. I have a great many debts due to me in America, and I had rather they should remain unrecoverable by any law, than submit to the stamp act. They will be debts of honour. It is my opinion the people will either continue in that situation, or find some way to extricate themselves, perhaps by generally agreeing to proceed in the courts without the stamps.

What do you think a sufficient military force to protect the distribution of the stamps in every part of America?—A very great force, I can't say what, if the disposition of America is for a general resistance.

What is the number of men in America able to bear arms, or of disciplined militia?—There are, I suppose, at least. . . .

[Question objected to. He withdrew. Called in again.]

Is the American stamp act an equal tax to the country?—I think not.

Why so?—The greatest part of the money must arise from law-suits for the recovery of debts, and be paid by the low sort of people who were too poor easily to pay their debts; it is therefore a heavy tax on the poor, and tax upon them for being poor.

But will not this increase of expence be means of lessening the number of law-suits? I think not; for as the costs all fall upon the debtor, and are to be paid by him, they would be no discouragement to the creditor to bring his action.

Would it not have the effect of excessive usury?—Yes; as an oppression of the debtor.

How many ships are there laden annually in North America with flax-seed for Ireland?—I cannot speak to the number of ships, but I know, that in 1752 ten thousand hogsheads of flax-seed, each containing seven bushels were exported from Philadelphia to Ireland. I suppose the quantity is greatly increased since that time, and it is understood, that the exportation from New York is equal to that from Philadelphia.

What becomes of the flax that grows with that flax-seed?—They manufacture some into coarse, and some into a middling kind of linen.

Are there any spinning-mills in America? I think there are three, but I believe on one at present employed. I suppose the rest will all be set to work, if the interruption of trade continues.

Are there any fulling-mills there?—A great many.

Did you never hear, that a great quantity of stockings were contracted for, for the army, during the war, and manufactured in Philadelphia?—I have heard so.

If the stamp act should be repealed, would not the Americans think they could oblige the parliament to repeal every eternal tax now in force?—It is hard to answer questions of what people at such a distance will think.

But what do you imagine they will think ere the motives of repealing the act?—I suppose they will think, that it was repealed on a conviction of its inexpediency; and they will rely upon it, that while the same inexpediency subsists, you will never attempt to make such another.

What do you mean by its inexpediency? I mean its inexpediency on several accounts; the poverty and inability of those who were to pay the tax; the general discontent it has occasioned; and the impracticability of enforcing it.

If the Act should be repealed, and the legislature should shew its resentment to the opposers of the Stamp Act, would the colonies acquiesce in the authority of the legislature?—That is your opinion they would do?—I don't doubt at all, that if the legislature repeal the Stamp Act, the colonies will acquiesce in the authority.

But if the legislature should think fit to ascertain its right to lay taxes, by an act laying small tax, contrary to their opinion, would they submit to pay the tax?—The proceedings the people in America have been considering too much together. The proceedings of assemblies have been very different from those of the mobs, and should be distinguished, having no connection with each other. Assemblies have only peaceably resolved that they take to be their rights; they have not built a fort, raised a man, or provided a train of ammunition, in order to such opposition. The ring-leaders of riots they think ought to be punished; they would punish themselves, if they could. Every sober, sensible man would wish to see rioters punished, as otherwise peaceable people have no security of person or estate. But as to an interdicted tax, how small soever laid by the legislature here on the people there, while they have no representative in this legislature, I think it will never be submitted to.—I they will oppose it to the last.—They do not consider as at all necessary for you to raise money on them by your taxes, because they are, and always have been, ready to raise money by taxes among themselves, and to grant large sums equal to their abilities, upon requisition from the crown.—They have not only granted equal to their abilities, but, during all the last war, they granted far beyond their abilities, and beyond their proportion with this country, by yourselves being judges, to the amount of many hundred thousand pounds, and this they did freely and readily, only on a sort of promise from the secretary of state, that it should be recommended to parliament to make them compensation. It was accordingly ly recommended to parliament, in the most honourable manner, for them. America has been greatly misrepresented and abused here in papers, and pamphlets, and speeches, as ungrateful, and unreasonable and unjust, in having put this nation to immense expense for their defence and refusing to bear any part of that expense. The colonies raised, paid, and clothed, near 25,000 men during the last war, a number equal to those sent from Britain, and far beyond their proportion; they went deeply into debt in doing this, and all their taxes and estates are mortgaged, for many years to come, for discharging that debt. Government here at that time was very sensible of this. The colonies were recommended to parliament. Every year the King sent down to the House a written message to this purpose, that his Majesty, being highly sensible of the zeal and vigour with which his faithful subjects in North America had exerted themselves, in defence of his Majesty's just rights and his possessions, recommended it to the House to take the same into consideration, and enable him to give them a proper compensation. You will find those messages on your own journals every year of the war to the very last, and you did accordingly give 200,000*l.* annually to the crown, to be distributed in such compensation to the colonies. This is the strongest of all proofs that the colonies, far from being unwilling to bear a share of the burden, did exceed their proportion, for if they had done less, or had only equalled their proportion, there would have been no room or reason for compensation. Indeed, the sums reimbursed them, were by no means adequate to the expense they incurred beyond their proportion; but they never murmured at that; they esteemed their sovereign's approbation of their zeal and fidelity, and the approbation of this house, far beyond any other kind of compensation; therefore there was no occasion for this act, to force money from a willing people; they had not refused giving money for the purposes of the act; no requisition had been made; they were always willing and ready to do what could be reasonably expected from them, and in this sight they wish to be considered.

But suppose Great Britain should be engaged in a war in Europe, would North America contribute to the support of it?—I do think they would, as far as the circumstances would permit. They consider themselves as a part of the British empire, and as having one common interest with it; they may be looked on here as foreigners, but they do not consider themselves as such. They are zealous for the honour and prosperity of this nation, and while they are well used, will always be ready to support it, as far as their little power goes. In 1739 they were called upon to assist in the expedition against Carthagea, and they sent 3,000 men to join your army. It is true Carthagea is in America, but is remote from the northern colonies as if it had been in Europe. They make no distinction of wars, as to their duty of assisting in them. I know the last war is commonly spoken of here as entered into for the defence, or for the sake of the people of America. I think it is quite raisunderstood. It began about the limits between Canada and Nova Scotia, about territories to which the crown indeed laid claim, but were not claimed by any British colony; none of the lands had been granted to any colonist; we had therefore no particular concern or interest in that dispute. As to the Ohio, the contest there began about your right of trading in the Indian country, a right you had by the treaty of Utrecht, which the French infringed; they seized the traders and their goods, which were your manufactures; they took a fort which a company of your merchants, and their factors and correspondents, had erected there to secure that trade. Braddock was sent with an army to re-take that fort, (which was looked on here as another encroachment on the King's territory) and to protect your trade. It was not till after his defeat that the colonies were attacked. They were before in perfect peace with both French and Indians; the troops were not therefore sent for their defence. The trade with the Indians, though carried on in America, is not an American interest. The people of America are chiefly farmers and planters; scarce any thing that they raise or produce is a article of commerce with the Indians. The Indian trade is a British interest; it is carried on with British manufactures, for the profit of British merchants and manufacturers; therefore the war, as it commenced for the defence of territories of the crown, the property of no American, and for the defence of a trade purely British, was really a British war—and yet the people of America made no scruple of contributing their utmost towards carrying it on, and bringing it to a happy conclusion.

Do you think, then, that the taking possession of the King's territorial rights, and strengthening the frontiers, is not an American interest?—Not particularly, but conjointly a British and American interest.

You will not deny that the preceding war, the war with Spain, was entered into for the sake of America; was it not occasioned by captures made in the American seas?—Yes, captures of ships carrying on the British trade there, with British manufactures.

Was not the late war with the Indians, since the peace with France a war for America only?—Yes; it was more particularly for America than the former; but it was rather a consequence or remains of the former war, the Indians not having been thoroughly pacified, and the Americans bore by much the greatest share of the expense. It was put an end to by the army under General Boquet; there were not above 300 regulars in that army, and above 1,000 Pennsylvanians.

Is it not necessary to send troops to America, to defend the Americans against the Indians?—No, by no means; it never was necessary. They defended themselves when they were but an handful, and the Indians much more numerous. They continually gained ground, and have driven the Indians over the mountains, without any troops sent to their assistance from this country, and can it be thought necessary now to send troops for their defence from those diminished Indian tribes, when the colonies are become so populous and so strong? There is not the least occasion for it; they are very able to defend themselves.

Do you say there were no more than regular troops employed in the late Indian war?—Not on the Ohio, or the frontiers of Pennsylvania, which was the chief part of the war that affected the colonies. There were garrisons at Niagara, Fort Detroit, &c. those remote posts kept for the sake of your trade; I did not reckon them, but I believe that on the whole, the number of American or provincial troops, employed in the war was greater than that of the regulars. I am not certain, but I think so.

Do you think the assemblies have a right to levy money on the subject there, to grant the crown?—I certainly think so; they have always done it.

Are they acquainted with the declaration of rights? And do they know that, by that statute, money is not to be raised on the subject but by consent of parliament?—They are very well acquainted with it.

How then can they think they have a right to levy money for the crown, or for any other than for local purposes?—They understand that clause to relate to subjects or within the realm; that no money can be levied on them for the crown, but by consent of parliament. The colonies are not supposed to be within the realm; they have assemblies of their own, which are their parliament, and they are, in that respect, in the same situation with Ireland. When money is to be raised for the crown upon the subject, in Ireland, or in the colonies, the consent is given in the parliament of Ireland or in the assemblies of the colonies. They think the parliament of Great Britain cannot properly give that consent till it has representatives from America; for the petition of right expresses, it is to be by common consent in Parliament, and the people of America have representatives in parliament, to make a part of that common consent.

If the stamp act should be repealed, and an act should pass ordering the assemblies of the colonies to indemnify the sufferers by riots, would they obey it?—That is a question I cannot answer.

Suppose the King should require the colonies to grant a revenue and the parliament should be against their doing it, do they think they can grant a revenue to the King without the consent of the parliament of Great Britain?—That is a deep question. To my own opinion, I should think myself at liberty to do it, and should do it, if I liked it on occasion.

When money has been raised in the colonies, upon requisitions, has it not been granted to the king?—Yes, always; but the requisitions have generally been for some service expressed, as to raise, clothe, and pay troops, and not for money only.

If the act should pass, requiring the American assemblies to make compensation to the sufferers, and they should disobey it, and the parliament, should, by another act, lay an internal tax, would they then obey it?

The people will pay no internal tax; and I think an act to oblige the assemblies to make compensation is unnecessary; for I am of opinion, that as soon as the present heats are abated, they will take the matter into consideration, and if it is right to be done, they will do it of themselves.

Do not letters often come into the post offices in America directed to some inland town where no post goes?—Yes.

Can any private person take up those letters and carry them as directed?—Yes; any friend of the person may do it, paying the postage that has accrued.

But must not he pay an additional postage for the distance to such inland town?—No.

Can the post-master answer delivering the letter, without being paid such additional postage?—Certainly he can demand nothing, when he does no service.

Suppose a person, being far from home, finds a letter in the post office directed to him, and he lives in a place to which the post generally goes, and the letter is directed to that place, will the post master deliver him the letter, without his paying the postage receivable at that place to which the letter is directed?—Yes; the office cannot demand postage for a letter it does not carry, or farther than it does carry it.

Are not ferry-men in America obliged, by act of parliament, to carry over the posts without pay?—Yes.

Is not this a tax on the ferry-men?—They do not consider it as such, as they have an advantage from persons travelling with the post.

If the stamp act should be repealed, and the crown should make a requisition to the colonies for a sum of money would they grant it?—I believe they would.

Why do you think so?—I can speak for the colony I live in; I had it in instruction from the assembly to assure the ministry, that as they always had done, so they should always think it their duty, to grant such aids to the crown as were suitable to their circumstances and abilities, whenever called upon for that purpose, in the usual constitutional manner; and I had the honour of communicating this instruction to that honourable gentleman then minister.

Would they do this for a British concern, as suppose a war in some part of Europe, that did not affect them?—Yes, for any thing that concerned the general interest. They consider themselves as part of the whole.

What is the usual constitutional manner of calling on the colonies for aids?—A letter from the Secretary of State.

Is this all you mean; a letter from the Secretary of State?—I mean the usual way of requisition, in a circular letter from the Secretary of State, by his majesty's command, reciting the occasion, and recommending it to the colonies to grant such aids as became their loyalty, and were suitable to their abilities.

Did the Secretary of State ever write for money for the crown?—The requisitions have been to raise, clothe, and pay men, which cannot be done without money.

Would they grant money alone, if called on?—In my opinion they would, money as well as men, when they have money, or can procure it.

If the parliament should repeal the Stamp Act, will the assembly of Pennsylvania rescind their resolutions?—I think not.

Before there was any thought of the Stamp Act, did they wish for a representation in parliament?—No.

Don't you know that there is in the Pennsylvania charter, an express reservation of the right of parliament to lay taxes there?—I know there is a clause in the charter, by which the king grants that he will levy no taxes on the inhabitants, unless it be with the consent of the assembly, or by act of parliament.

How then could the assembly of Pennsylvania assert, that laying a tax on them by the Stamp Act, was an infringement of their rights?—They understand it thus: by the same charter, and otherwise, they are entitled to all the privileges and liberties of Englishmen; they find in the great charters, and the petition and declaration of rights, that one of the privileges of English subjects is, that they are not to be taxed but by their common consent; they have therefore relied upon it, from the first settlement of the province, that the parliament never would, nor could, by colour of that clause in the charter, assume a right of taxing them, till it had qualified itself to exercise such right, by admitting representatives from the people to be taxed, who ought to be a part of that common consent.

Are there any words in the charter that justify that construction?—The common rights of Englishmen, as declared by Magna Charta, and the Petition of Right, all justify it.

Does the distinction between internal and external taxes exist in the words of the charter?—No, I believe not.

Then may they not, by the same interpretation object to the parliament's right of external taxation?—They never have hitherto. Many arguments have been lately used here to show them that there is no difference, and that if you have no right to tax them internally, you have none to tax them externally, or make any other law to bind them. At present they do no reason so; but in time they may possibly be convinced by these arguments.

Do not the resolutions of the Pennsylvania assembly say—all taxes?—If they do, they mean only internal taxes; the same words have not always the same meaning here and in the colonies. By taxes, they mean internal taxes; by duties, they mean customs; these are their ideas of the language.

Have you not seen the resolutions of the Massachusetts Bay assembly?—I have.

Do then not say, that neither external nor internal taxes can be laid on them by parliament?—I don't know that they do; I believe not.

If the same colony should say, neither tax nor imposition could be laid, does not that province hold the power of parliament can lay neither?—I suppose that by the word imposition, they do not intend to express duties to be laid on goods imported, as regulations of commerce.

What can the colonies mean then by imposition as distinct from taxes?—They may mean many things, as impressing of men, or of carriages, quartering troops on private houses, and the like; there may be great impositions that are not properly taxes.

Is not the post office rate an internal tax laid by act of parliament?—I have answered that.

Are all parts of the colonies equally able to pay taxes?—No, certainly; the frontier parts, which have been ravaged by the enemy, are greatly disabled by that means, and therefore, in such cases, are usually favoured in our tax laws.

Can we, at this distance, be competent judges of what favours are necessary?—The parliament have supposed it, by claiming a right to make tax laws for America; I think it impossible.

Would the repeal of the Stamp Act be any discouragement of your manufactures?—Will the people that have begun to manufacture decline it?—Yes, I think they will; especially if, at the same time, the trade is opened again, so that remittances can be easily made. I have known several instances that make it probable. In the war before last, tobacco being low, and making little remittance, the people of Virginia went generally into family manufactures. Afterwards, when tobacco bore a better price, they returned to the use of British manufactures. So fulling mills were very much disused in the last war in Pennsylvania, because bills were then plenty, and remittances could easily be made to Britain for English cloth and other goods.

If the Stamp Act should be repealed, would it induce the assemblies of America to acknowledge the right of parliament to tax them, and would they erase their resolutions?—No, never.

Is there no means of obliging them to erase those resolutions?—None, that I know of; they will never do it, unless compelled by force of arms.

Is there a power on earth that can force them to erase them?—No power, how great soever, can force men to change their opinions.

Do they consider the post office as a tax, or as a regulation?—Not as a tax, but as a regulation and convenience; every assembly encouraged it, and supported it in its infancy, by grants of money, which they would not otherwise have done; and the people have always paid the postage.

When did you receive the instructions you mentioned?—I brought them with me, when I came to England, about 15 months since.

When did you communicate that instruction to the minister?—Soon after my arrival; while the stamping of America was under consideration, and before the bill was brought in.

Would it be most for the interest of Great Britain, to employ the hands of Virginia in tobacco, or in manufactures?—In tobacco, to be sure.

What used to be the pride of the Americans?—To indulge in the fashions and manufactures of Great Britain.

What is now their pride?—To wear their old clothes over again, till they can make new ones.—Withdrew.

Protests of the minority in the House of Lords, against the Repeal of the American Stamp Act.

March 11, 1766.—The order of the day being read for the second reading of the bill, entitled, "An Act to repeal an Act made in the last session of Parliament, entitled, An Act for granting and applying certain Stamp Duties and other duties in the British Colonies and Plantations in America, towards further defraying the expenses of defending, protecting and securing the same, and for amending such parts of the several acts of parliament relating to the Trade and Revenues of the said Colonies and Plantations, as direct the manner of determining and recovering the penalties and forfeitures therein mentioned."

The said Bill was read a second time, and it being proposed to commit the bill, the same was objected to. After a long debate thereupon, the question was put, Whether the said bill shall be committed: It was resolved in the affirmative. Contents 73, Proxies 32, Total 105; Not Contents 61, Proxies 10, total 71; Majority 34.

Dissentient,

1st, BECAUSE, as this house has, in this session, by several resolutions, most solemnly asserted and declared, First, "That the King's Majesty, by and with the advice and consent of the Lords Spiritual and Temporal, and Commons of Great Britain, in Parliament assembled, had, hath, and of right ought to have, full power and authority to make laws and statutes, of sufficient force and validity to bind the colonies and people of America, subjects of the Crown of Great Britain, in all cases whatsoever." Secondly, "That tumults and insurrections of the most dangerous nature have been raised and carried on in several of the North American Colonies, in open defiance of the power and dignity of his Majesty's Government, and in manifest violation of the laws and legislative authority of this kingdom; Thirdly, "That the said tumults and insurrections have been encouraged and inflamed by sundry votes and resolutions passed in several of the assemblies of the said provinces, derogatory to the honour of his Majesty's government, and destructive of the legal and constitutional dependency of the said colonies, on the imperial crown and parliament of Great Britain."

Which resolutions were founded on a full examination of the papers on our table, manifesting a denial of the legislative authority of the crown and parliament of Great Britain to impose duties and taxes on our North American colonies; and a criminal resistance there made to the execution of the commercial and other regulations of the Stamp Act, and of other acts of parliament: We are of opinion, that the total repealing of that law, especially while such resistance continues, would (as governor Bernard says is their intention)

"make the authority of Great Britain contemptible hereafter;" and that such a submission of king, lords, and commons, under such circumstances, in so strange and unheard of a contest, would, in effect, surrender their antient, unalienable rights of supreme jurisdiction, and give them exclusively to the subordinate provincial legislatures, established by prerogative; which was never intended or thought of, and is not in the power of prerogative to bestow; as they are inseparable from the three estates of the realm assembled in parliament.

2dly, Because the law which the bill now proposes to repeal, was passed in the other house with very little opposition, and in this without one dissentient voice, during the last session of parliament, which we presume, if it had been wholly and fundamentally wrong, could not possibly have happened; as the matter of it is so important, and as the intention of bringing it in had been communicated to the commons, by the first commissioner of the treasury, the year before, and a resolution, relating and preparatory to it, was agreed to in that house, without any division.

3dly, Because, if any particular parts of that law, the principle of which has been experienced and submitted to in this country, without repining, for near a century past, had been found liable to just and reasonable objections, they might have been altered by a bill to explain and amend it, without repealing the whole. And, if any such bill had been sent to us by the commons, we should have thought it our duty to have given it a most serious consideration, with a warm desire of relieving our countrymen in America from any grievance or hardship; but with proper care to enforce their submission and obedience to the law so amended, and to the whole legislative authority of Great Britain, without any reserve or distinction whatsoever.

5thly, Because, the ability of our North American colonies to bear without inconvenience the proportion laid on them by the Stamp Act of last year, appears to us most unquestionable, for the following reasons. First, That the estimated produce of this tax, amounting to sixty thousand pounds per annum, if divided amongst twelve hundred thousand people (being little more than one half of the subjects of the crown in North America) would be only one shilling per head a year; which is but a third of the wages usually paid to every labourer or manufacturer there for one day's labour. Second y, That it appears by the accounts that have been laid before this house from the Commissioners of Trade and Plantations, that of the debt contracted by those colonies in the last war, above 1,755,000*l.* has already been discharged, during the course of three years only, by the funds provided for that purpose in the several provinces, and the much greater part of the remaining incumbrance, which, in the whole, is about 760,000*l.* will be paid in two years more. We must likewise observe, that the bounties and advantages given to them by parliament in 1764 and 1765, and the duties thereby lost to Great Britain for their service and in order to enable them more easily to pay the tax, must necessarily amount, in a few years, to a far greater sum than the produce thereof. It is also evident that such produce being wholly appropriated to the payment of the army maintained by this kingdom in our colonies, at the vast expense of almost a shilling in the pound land tax, annually remitted by us for their special defence and protection; not only no money would have been actually drawn by it out of that country, but the ease given by it to the people of Great Britain, who are laboring under a debt of seventy millions, contracted by them to support a very dangerous war, entered into for the interest and security of those colonies, would have redounded to the benefit of the colonies themselves in their own immediate safety, by contributing to deliver them from the necessary expense, which many of them have hitherto always borne in guarding their frontiers against the savage Indians.

6thly, Because, not only the right, but the expediency and necessity of the supreme legislature's exerting its authority to lay a general tax on our American colonies, whenever the wants of the public make it fitting and reasonable that all the provinces should contribute in a proportion to the defence of the whole, appear to us undeniable, from these considerations: First, That every province being separate and independent on the others, and having no common council empowered by the constitution of the colonies to act for all, or bind all, such a tax cannot regularly, or without infinite difficulty, be imposed upon them at any time, even for their immediate defence or protection, by their own provincial assemblies; but requires the intervention and superintending power of the parliament of Great Britain. Secondly, That in looking forwards to the possible contingency of a new war, a contingency perhaps not far remote, the prospect of the burthens, which the gentry and people of this kingdom must then sustain, in addition to those which now lies so heavy upon them, is so melancholy and dreadful, that we cannot but feel it a most indispensable duty to ease them as much as is possible, by a due and moderate exertion of that great right which the constitution of this realm has vested in the parliament, to provide for the safety of all, by a proportionate charge upon all, equally and indifferently laid. We likewise apprehend, that a partial exemption of our colonies from any exercise of this right by the British legislature, would be thought so invidious and so unjust to the other subjects of the crown of Great Britain, as to alienate the hearts of these from their countrymen residing in America, to the great detriment of the latter, who have on many occasions received, and may again want, assistance, from the generous warmth of their affection.

7thly, Because the reasons assigned in the public resolutions of the provincial assemblies, in the North American colonies, for their disobeying the Stamp Act, viz. "That they are not represented in the Parliament of Great Britain," extends to all other laws, of what nature soever, which that parliament has enacted, or shall enact, to bind them in times to come, and must, (if admitted) set them absolutely free from any obedience to the power of the British legislature. We likewise observe, that in a letter to Mr. Secretary Conway, dated the 12th of October, 1765; the commander in chief of his Majesty's forces in North America has declared his opinion, "That the question is not of the inexpediency of the Stamp Act, or of the inability of the colonies to pay the tax; but that it is unconstitutional and contrary to their rights, supporting the independency of the provinces, and not subject to the legislative power of Great Britain." It is moreover affirmed, in a letter to Mr. Conway, dated 7th November, "That the people in general are averse to taxes of any kind; and that the merchants of that place think they have a right to every freedom of trade which the subjects of Great Britain now enjoy." This opinion of theirs strikes directly at the Act of Navigation, and other subsequent laws, which from time to time have been made in the wise policy of that act; and should they ever be encouraged to procure for themselves that absolute freedom of trade, which they appear to desire, our plantations would become, not only of no benefit, but in the highest degree prejudicial to the commerce and welfare of their mother country; nor is it easy to conceive a greater encouragement, than the repealing of a law, opposed by them on such principles, and with so much contempt of the sovereignty of the British legislature.

8thly, Because, the appearance of weakness and timidity in the government and parliament of this kingdom, which a concession, of this nature may too probably carry with it, has a manifest tendency to draw on further insults, and by lessening the respect of all his Majesty's subjects to the dignity of the crown, and authority of his laws, throw the whole British empire into a miserable state of confusion and anarchy, with which it seems by many symptoms, to be dangerously threatened; and this is more to be feared, as the plea of our North American colonies, that, not being represented in the parliament of Great Britain, they ought not to pay taxes imposed or levied upon them by the authority thereof, may by the same reasoning be extended to all persons in this island, who do not actually vote for members of parliament; nor can we help apprehending, that the opinion of some countenance being given to such notions by the legislature itself, in consenting to this bill for the repeal of the Stamp Act, may greatly promote the contagion of a most dangerous doctrine, destructive to all government, which has spread itself over all our North American colonies, that the obedience of the subject is not due to the laws and legislature of the realm, farther than he in his private judgment shall think it conformable to the ideas he has formed of a free constitution.

9thly, Because, we think it no essential guard, or security, against this danger, that the parliament has declared in the resolutions of both houses, passed during this session, and now reduced into a bill. That such notions are ill founded; as men will always look more to deeds than words, and may therefore incline to believe, that the insurrections in our colonies, excited by these notions, have so far proved successful, as to attain the very point, at which they aimed, the immediate repeal of the Stamp Act, without any previous submission on the part of the colonies, the legislature has in fact submitted to them, and has only more grievously injured its own dignity and authority, by verbally asserting that right, which it substantially yields up to their opposition. The reasons assigned for this concession render it still more alarming, as they arise from an illegal and hostile combination of the people of America, to distress and starve our manufacturers, and to withhold from our merchants the payment of their just debts: the former of which measures has only been practised in open war between two states; and the latter, we believe, not even in that situation, either by the public or by individuals, among the civilized nations of Europe, in modern times. If this unprecedented plan of intimidation shall meet with success, it is easy to foresee, that the practice of it for other and still greater objects will frequently be renewed, and our manufacturers and merchants reduced to the like, and more permanent distress: we cannot therefore but wish, that some more eligible method, consistent with their future safety and our dignity, had been taken by parliament, to shew our tender concern and compassion for their sufferings, and to discourage any other such unwarrantable attempts; which we are fully persuaded would have been very practicable, with due care and attention, and at an expence very inferior to the importance of the object.

Lastly, Because we are convinced from the unanimous testimony of the governors, and other officers of the crown in America, that if, by a most unhappy delay and neglect to provide for the due execution of the law, and arm the government there with proper orders and powers, repeatedly called for in vain, these disturbances had not been continued and increased, they might easily have been quieted before they had attained to any dangerous height; and we cannot, without feeling the most lively sense of grief and indignation, hear arguments drawn from the progress of evils, which should and might have been stopped in their first and feeble beginnings, used for the still greater evil of sacrificing to a present relief the highest permanent interests, and the whole majesty, power, and reputation of government: This afflicts us the more deeply, because it appears from many letters, that this law, if properly supported by government, would from the peculiar circumstances attending the disobedience to it, execute itself without bloodshed. And it is said in one of the letters to Mr. Secretary Conway, "That the principal view is to intimidate the parliament; but that if it be thought prudent to enforce their authority, the people dare not oppose a vigorous resolution of the parliament of Great Britain." That vigorous resolution has not yet been found in the parliament; and we greatly fear, that the want of it will certainly produce one of these two fatal consequences; either that the repeal of this law will in effect annul and abrogate all other laws and statutes relating to our colonies, and particularly the acts that restrain or limit their commerce, of which they are most impatient; or, if we should hereafter attempt to enforce the execution of those laws against their will, and by virtue of an authority, which they have dared to insult with impunity and success, that endeavour will bring upon us all those evils and inconveniences, to the fear of which we now sacrifice the sovereignty of the realm; and this at a time when the strength of our colonies, as well as their desire of a total independence on the legislature and government of their mother country, may be greatly augmented, and when the circumstances and dispositions of other powers of Europe, may render the contest far more dangerous and formidable to this kingdom.

Die Lunæ, 17 Martii, 1766.

The Order of the Day being read for the third reading of the Bill, entitled, "an Act to repeal an act made in the last session of Parliament," entitled, "an Act for granting and applying certain Stamp Duties, and other Duties in the British Colonies and Plantations in America, towards further defraying the Expenses of defending, protecting, and securing the same, and for amending such parts of the several Acts of Parliament relating to the Trade and Revenue of the said Colonies and Plantations, as direct the manner of determining and recovering the Penalties and Forfeitures therein mentioned."

Then the said bill was read a third time, and it being proposed to pass the bill, the same was objected to. After some debate thereupon, the question was put, Whether the said bill shall pass: It was resolved in the affirmative.

Dissentient,

1st, BECAUSE we think that the Declaratory Bill we passed last week, cannot possibly obviate the growing mischiefs in America, where it may seem calculated only to deceive the people of Great Britain, by holding forth a delusive and nugatory affirmation of the legislative right of this kingdom, whilst the enacting part of it does no more than abrogate the resolutions of the house of representatives in the North American colonies, which have not in themselves the least colour of authority; and declares that, which is apparently and certainly criminal, only null and void:

2dly, Because the particular objections which have been made to the Stamp Act in North America, and which have been adopted in the course of the debates upon this bill for repealing it, are, in fact contradicted by undeniable evidence upon our table: it having been urged, first, that all the money to be collected by this tax was to be annually remitted hither, and that the North American colonies would thereby be drained of all their specie; and, secondly, that the institution of vice-admiralty courts in those colonies, for the recovery of penalties upon revenue laws without juries, is a novel practice, by means of which his Majesty's subjects, in those dominions, "would be deprived of one of their most valuable liberties, trials by juries, and in this respect distinguished from their fellow subjects in Great Britain; and would likewise be liable to the greatest inconvenience, vexation, and injustice, through the option left to any prosecutor to call them from one end of that extensive continent to the other; and through the temptation to the judge, to condemn rather than to acquit, from his being paid by poundage of the condemnation money:" whereas, with regard to the first of these objections, it appears, by the minute of the late board of treasury laid before this house, and dated on the 9th day of July last, that the fullest directions had been sent to the several officers of the revenue, "that in order to obviate the inconvenience of bringing into this kingdom the money to be raised by the Stamp duties, all the produce of the American duties arising or to arise, by virtue of any British act of parliament, should from time to time, be paid to the deputy paymaster in America to defray the subsistence of the troops and any military expenses incurred in the colonies;" and, with regard to the second objection, it is manifest, from sundry acts of parliament, that a jurisdiction has been assigned to the judges of those courts, for the recovery of penalties upon the laws or revenue, and of trade, without juries, for near a century past, from the consideration (as we apprehend) that, in some of the colonies they are the only judges not elected by the people: and so far it is from being true, that the subjects in North America, by being deprived, in these cases, of trials by juries, were, in that respect, distinguished from their fellow subjects in Great Britain; that, in this very instance of the Stamp duties the penalties, which by the American Stamp Act were made recoverable without a jury before a judge of the Vice admiralty court are, by the laws now in force for collecting the Stamp duties in Great Britain, recoverable also without a jury, before two justices of the peace, with the like powers in both cases which we earnestly wish were not still more necessary, for the collection of the public revenue in America than in Great Britain; and which we should be most desirous, if possible, to alleviate in both countries. With this view, and to take away all just occasion for discontent, we were very glad to find, by the representation from the late commissioners of the treasury to his Majesty in council, dated on the 4th of July last, that the strictest attention had been given by that board, to prevent the inconvenience and injustice above mentioned, by a plan to establish three different courts of Vice admiralty at the most convenient places, with proper districts annexed to each; and to give the judges sufficient and honourable salaries in lieu of all poundage and fees whatsoever. But we cannot observe, without the highest concern and surprise, that this representation, founded upon a clause inserted in the Stamp Act for this very purpose, and expressly calculated to relieve his Majesty's subjects in North America from many unnecessary hardships and oppressions, to which they are now liable by many other laws, still subsisting, should be totally disregarded for several months, and be suffered to remain unexecuted in every part of it, even to this day; and that no notice whatever should be taken, in any of the dispatches from the present administration to the governors of the colonies in North America, of the timely care which had been employed, to obviate the objections raised on both those heads; especially as it is notorious, that the measures to be pursued, in consequence of that minute and representation, had been fully opened and approved in parliament, at the time when the Stamp Act was proposed; and as the total neglect of it has given occasion to great clamour and dissatisfaction in the colonies. We cannot help farther observing that as the Stamp Act was not to take place till the 1st of November, if the parliament had been called early, their determinations either for enforcing or repealing that law, would, probably, have delivered the merchants and manufacturers here from all the difficulties and distress to which they have been, for so many months, exposed: nor would the disorders in America, where all government is prostrate, have risen to so great a height, or taken so deep a root.

3dly, Because the argument which has been used in favour of this bill of repeal, that the experiment of the Stamp Act has been tried, and has failed, is extremely ill-founded, as it manifestly appears from the whole tenor of the papers laid before us, that if this experiment had been properly tried with the same zeal for its success with which it was first proposed, it would not have failed in any of the colonies: and that this was the opinion of the greater part of the governors in North America, and of many of the most intelligent and respectable persons in those provinces, for some time after this act was passed, is evident, beyond a doubt, from the letters of the former, now upon our table, and from the latter having applied for, and accepted the office of distributors of the stamps under that act, which they certainly would not have done, and thereby have exposed their lives and fortunes to the violence and outrages which they have since undergone, if they had then thought the success of this measure in any degree precarious: nor have we heard of any impracticability attending this law in Jamaica and Barbadoes, and some other of the West India Islands, or in those of our colonies in North America, where it has been executed.

4thly, Because a precedent of the two houses of parliament lending their power, from motives of fear or impatience under a present uneasiness, to overturn in one month a plan of measures undertaken with their warmest approbation and concurrence, after the most mature deliberation of two years together for the improvement of our revenue and the relief of our people, will effectually discourage all officers of the crown in America from doing their duty, and executing the laws of this kingdom; and is enough to deter future ministers, in any circumstances of distress or danger to their country, from opposing their fortitude and zeal for the service of the public, to strong combinations of private and particular interests, to the clamour of multitudes, or to the malice of faction; which must necessarily bring on such a weakness and pusillanimity in the administration of government, as will soon end in the downfall and ruin of the state.

Lastly, Because the repeal of this law, under the present circumstances, will, we fear, not only surrender the honour and essential interests of the kingdom now and for ever, both at home and abroad, but will also deeply affect the fundamental principles of our constitution: for if we pass this bill, against our opinion, from the threats and compulsion publicly avowed in our colonies, and enforced by the most unjustifiable means within Great Britain, we disclaim that legislative authority over the subjects, which we own ourselves unable to maintain. If we give our consent to it here, without a full conviction that it is right, merely because it has passed the other house, by declining to do our duty on the most important occasion which can ever present itself, and where our interposition, for many obvious reasons, would be peculiarly proper, we, in effect, annihilate this branch of the legislature, and vote ourselves useless. Or, if by passing this bill, we mean to justify those who in America, and even in Great Britain, have treated a series of British acts of parliament as so many acts of tyranny and oppression, which it is scarcely criminal to resist; or those officers of the crown, who, under the eye, and with the knowledge of government, have taken upon themselves whilst the parliament was sitting, without its consent, to suspend the execution of the Stamp Act, by admitting ships from the colonies, with unstamped clearances, to an entry, in direct violation of it, which from the papers upon our table, appears to have been done; we shall then give our approbation to an open breach of the first article of that great palladium of our liberties, the bill of Rights; by which it is declared "that the pretended power of suspending of laws, or the execution of laws by legal authority, without consent of parliament, is illegal." Lastly, if we ground our proceedings upon the opinion of those who have contended in this house, that from the constitution of our colonies they ought never to be taxed, even for their own immediate defence, we fear that such a declaration, by which near a fifth part of the subjects of Great Britain, who by the acts of parliament to restrain the pressing of seamen in America are already exempted from furnishing men to our navy, are to be forever exempted from contributing their share towards their own support in money likewise, will, from the flagrant partiality and injustice of it, either depopulate this kingdom, or shake the basis of equality, and of that original compact upon which every society is founded: and as we believe that there is no instance of such a permanent exemption of so large a body of the subjects of any state, in any history, ancient or modern, we are extremely apprehensive of the fatal consequences of this unhappy measure; to which for these reasons in addition to those contained in the Protest of the 11th of this month, our duty to the King and justice to our country, oblige us to enter this our solemn dissent.—(Signed)

1832.

PRESIDENT OF THE UNITED STATES.

ANDREW JACKSON, of Tennessee, $25,000 per annum.

The President must be thirty-five years of age, fourteen years a resident of the United States, a natural born citizen, or a citizen at the time of the adoption of the Constitution. In case of his removal, death, or resignation, or inability, the duties of his office devolve on the Vice President: and, by act of 1st March, 1792, in case of removal, death or resignation, or inability, both of President and Vice President, the President of the Senate pro tempore; and in case there shall be no President of the Senate, then the Speaker of the House of Representatives, for the time being is to act as President. The legal title of this officer is The President of the United States; and he is, by the Constitution, Commander in Chief of the Army and Navy of the United States, and of the Militia of the several States, when called into the service of the United States. He receives ambassadors and other public ministers; and it is his duty to take care that the laws are faithfully executed. He is empowered, with the advice and consent of two-thirds of the Senators present to make treaties, and, by and with the advice of a majority of the Senate, he appoints ambassadors, other public ministers and consuls, judges of the Supreme Court, and all other officers established by law, whose appointments are not otherwise provided for in the Constitution, and the appointment of whom, when of an inferior nature, is not vested by Congress in the President alone, in the courts of law, or in the heads of departments. He commissions all officers of the United States; and may grant reprieves and pardons, except in cases of impeachment. The compensation of the President is 25,000 dollars per annum, which cannot be increased or diminished during the term for which he is elected. His salary was fixed by act of 18th February, 1793. He, as well as the Vice President, is elected by Electors, in the respective States, who are chosen as the Legislatures of the several States may provide.

According to an Act of Congress, of the 1st of March, 1792, the choice of these Electors must be made within thirty-four days preceding the first Wednesday of December, of the year in which an election of the President and Vice President takes place; and they must "be equal to the number of Senators and Representatives to which the several States may, by law, be entitled at the time when the President and Vice President are to be chosen shall come into office: Provided always, That where no apportionment of Representatives shall have been made after any enumeration, at the time of chosen electors, then the number of Electors shall be according to the existing apportionment of Senators and Representatives." No Senator or Representative, or person holding an office of trust or profit under the United States, can be appointed an Elector. The votes for President and Vice President are given by the Electors on the first Wednesday of December, in every fourth year, throughout the Union; and will be given for the twelfth term, in 1832.

The Electors meet in their respective States, and vote by ballot for President and Vice President one of whom, at least, shall not be an inhabitant of the same State with themselves. They vote for President and Vice President separately, by distinct ballots. They make lists of the number of votes given, and of the persons voted for; which they transmit sealed to the seat of the General Government, directed to the President of the Senate, who in presence of the Senate and House of Representatives, opens all the certificates, and the votes are counted. The person having the greatest number of votes for President is duly elected if such number be a majority of all the Electors appointed.

If no person have such majority, then from the persons having the highest numbers, not exceeding three, in the list of those voted for as President, the House of Representatives shall choose, immediately, by ballot, the President. But in choosing the President the votes are taken by States, the Representation from each having ONE vote; a quorum for this purpose consists of a member or members from two-thirds of the States, and a majority of all the States is necessary to a choice.

If the House of Representatives shall not choose a President whenever the right of choice devolves upon them, before the fourth of March next following, then the Vice President shall act as President, as in the case of the death or other constitutional disability of the President.

The period of service is four years, but there is no restriction as to re-election. If the offices of President and Vice President should both become vacant, it then becomes the duty of the Secretary of State to communicate information thereof to the Executive of each State, and to cause the same to be published in at least one newspaper in every State, giving two months previous notice that Electors of President shall be appointed or chosen in the several States, within thirty four days next preceding the first Wednesday in December ensuing, when the choice of President must proceed as usual. The eleventh Presidential term will expire with the twenty second Congress, on the third of March, 1833.

VICE-PRESIDENT OF THE UNITED STATES.

JOHN C. CALHOUN, of South Carolina, $5,000 per annum.

The Vice President is, ex-officio, President of the Senate; and as President of the Senate, in virtue of an act of the 8th of May, 1792, one of the Commissioners of the Sinking Fund. His salary of 5,000 dollars per annum, is fixed by the Act of 18th of February, 1793. The Vice President is not a member of the Cabinet. The ordinary duties of the officer is, to preside in the Senate of the United States. When he does not officiate in that station, his place is supplied by a President of the Senate pro tempore, who is chosen from the body of Senators by ballot, and receives additional compensation for his services.

The Vice President is elected in the same manner, at the same time for the same term, and by the same Electors, as the President. But no person has a majority of the whole number of Electors, then from the two highest numbers in the list, the Senate chooses the Vice President. A quorum for this purpose consists of two-thirds of the whole number of Senators, and a majority of the whole is necessary to a choice.

No person, constitutionally ineligible to the office of President, is eligible to that of Vice President of the United States.

DEPARTMENT OF STATE.

EDWARD LIVINGSTON, of Louisiana, Secretary, $6,000 per annum.

The Department of State was created by the act of 15th September, 1789. Previously to that period, by act of 27th July, 1789, it was denominated the Department of Foreign Affairs. The Secretary is, ex-officio, a Commissioner of the Sinking Fund, and, by usage, a member of the Cabinet. He conducts the negotiation of all treaties between the United States and Foreign Powers; and corresponds officially with the public Ministers of the United States at Foreign Courts, and with the Ministers of Foreign Powers resident in the United States. He performs also the main duties of what, in other Governments, is called the Home Department. He has the charge of the seal of the United States, but cannot affix it to any commission until signed by the President, nor to any other instrument or act, without the special authority of the President. He is, by law, entrusted with the publication and distribution of all the Acts and Resolutions of Congress; and all Treaties with Foreign Nations and Indian Tribes. He preserves, also, the original of all Laws and Treaties, and of the public correspondence growing out of the intercourse between the United States and Foreign Nations: and is required to procure and preserve copies of the statutes of the several States. He grants passports to American citizens visiting foreign countries. He preserves the evidence of Copy rights, and has control of the office which issues Patents for useful inventions. He holds his office at the will of the President.

Regulations in relation to Patents and Copy Rights.

PATENTS.

The Acts of Congress which relate particularly to the granting of Patents, for inventions and improvements, are those of February 21st, 1793, and April 17th, 1800.

Patents may be obtained for "any new and useful art, machine, manufacture, or composition of matter; or for any new and useful improvement, on any art, machine, manufacture, or composition of matter, not known before the application." (Act of 1793, Sec. 1)

All citizens of the United States, and aliens who have resided therein for two years, are entitled to take out Patents for their inventions or improvements.

Joint inventors or improvers are entitled to a joint Patent, but neither can claim one separately.

If any inventor or discoverer should die intestate, before an application be made for a Patent, his legal representatives may apply for the Patent in trust for the heirs at law, otherwise in trust for the devisees.

The term for which a patent is granted is fourteen years, and may be extended by a special Act of Congress; but a patent for an improvement on any thing previously patented, can have no influence on, and, consequently, cannot renew, or prolong, the original grant.

In applying for a patent, it is necessary to attend to every legal form. The following is the mode of application.

Every inventor, before he presents his petition, shall pay into the Treasury of the United States, thirty dollars, for which he will be furnished with duplicate receipts, one of which he shall deliver to the Secretary of State, when he presents his petition; and the money thus paid shall be in full for the sundry services to be performed in the office of the Secretary of State, consequent to such petition. This petition must be addressed to the Secretary of State, and may be in the following or a similar style:

TO THE HON. _____, SECRETARY OF STATE OF THE UNITED STATES:

The petition of A. B. of _____, in the county of _____, and State of _____, respectfully represents:

That your petitioner has invented a new and useful improvement of art, machine, manufacture, or composition of matter; [or any new and useful improvement in any art, machine, manufacture, or composition of matter] in _____, not known or used before his application; the advantages of which he is desirous of securing to himself and his legal representatives; he therefore prays that letters patent of the United States may be issued, granting unto your petitioner, his heirs, administrators or assigns, the full and exclusive right of making, constructing, using, and vending to others to be used, his said improvement, (art, invention, machine, manufacture, or composition of matter, &c.) agreeably to the acts of Congress in such case made and provided; your petitioner having paid thirty dollars into the Treasury of the United States, and complied with all other provisions of the said act.

A. B.

The specification or description of the machine, art, discovery, or invention, must be given in clear and specific terms, designating it from all other inventions; and describing the whole in such a manner, as to comprehend not only the form and construction, if a machine, but also the mode of using the same; and if it be only an improvement on a certain machine, it ought to be so described; and, as this specification enters into, and forms part of the patent, it must be without any references to a model or drawing, and must be signed by the applicant or applicants, before two witnesses. It is material that this be in good language, and correctly written. Nothing must be added that would defeat the avowed object of the invention; and no more must be claimed than is new, and invented or discovered by the patentee; although it may be proper and necessary, to describe the whole machine.

When a patent is to be taken out for the application of an old instrument, or machine, to some new purpose, that fact must be distinctly stated; and where the patent is for the improvement of some machine, previously patented by others.

The following, or a similar oath or affirmation, taken before any person qualified to administer an oath, by the applicant or applicants, must be subjoined to the specification, if a citizen of the United States:

County of _____ }
State of _____ }

On this _____ day of _____, 18—, before the subscriber, a Justice of the Peace in and for the said county, personally appeared the aforementioned A. B. and made solemn oath (or affirmation) according to the law, that he verily believes himself to be the true and original inventor or discoverer of the art, [machine, invention or improvement, composition of matter, &c.] above specified and described, for _____—(mention here the object or intention) _____ and that he is a citizen of the United States.

Just. Peace.

If not a citizen, the following addition must be made to the declaration, that he verily believes himself to be the true and original inventor, or discoverer of the art, &c.: "And that the same hath not, to the best of his knowledge or belief, been known or used, either in this or any foreign country. _____" "Also that he hath resided in the United States for two years and upwards."

It is not necessary that the time of residence should immediately precede the application.

The specification must be accompanied by a good drawing, in perspective, of the whole machine, or apparatus. where the nature of the case admits of drawings; or with specimens of the ingredients, and of the composition of matter, sufficient in quantity for the purpose of experiment, where the invention is of a composition of matter. And such inventor shall, moreover, deliver a model of his machine, provided the Secretary shall deem such model to be necessary. It is requisite in giving a drawing of the machine, to give also sectional drawings of the interior when the machine is complex; and every drawing should be accompanied with explanatory references. If the machine be complex, a model will likewise be necessary, not only to explain and render it comprehensible to a common capacity, but also to prevent infringements of rights.

When there are two applicants at the same time, for a similar patent, the law has provided for the appointment of three arbitrators, one by each party, and one by the Secretary of State. Where there are more than two applicants, and they do not concur in the appointment of arbitrators, the whole may be appointed by the Secretary of State, and their award is "final as respects the granting of the patent." Act of 1793, Sec. 9. But in order to justify a reference, each party must have complied with all the legal requirements; still, however, the final remedy is that pointed out in the 10th Sec. of the Act of 1793, which provides, that "within three years after issuing the patent, upon an oath or affirmation being made before the judge of the district court, where the patentee, his executors, administrators or assigns, reside, that the patent was obtained surreptitiously, or upon false suggestion, the court upon motion made, if the matter alleged appears to be sufficient, may grant rule to show cause why process shall not issue to repeal the patent."

All persons violating patent rights, "shall forfeit and pay to the patentee, his executors, &c. a sum equal to three times the actual damage sustained by said patentee, his executors, &c." (Act 1800, Sec. 3.)

For copies of patents, or recording transfers, there is a charge of 20 cents for every hundred words; and the legal allowance for copying a drawing of a machine patented, is $ 2. The actual charge is frequently less than this, but in many instances, the drawings are so complex that they cannot be executed for this sum.

For certified copies of patents, there is an extra charge of 25 cents. These are furnished, as evidence, in litigated cases. All such copies must be paid for previously to their delivery.

Caveats are not known to law; but any inventor, by sending a correct account of his invention, before he is ready to take out a patent, secures evidence in his favor.

An inventor may transfer his right before a patent has issued, and the assignee may take out a patent; or he may obtain his patent, and afterwards assign it. The assignment in either case, must be recorded in the Patent Office. (Act of 1793, sec. 4.)

All communications to and from the Superintendent of the Patent Office are free of postage. The petition to the Secretary of State; the fees to be paid into the Treasury; and other matters on the subject of patents may be addressed directly to the patent office; and all business relating to patents may, in general, be as well done in writing as by a journey to Washington.

Paper money remitted, must be of the U. S. Bank, or its Branches, or some of the Banks of Boston, New York, Philadelphia, Baltimore, or of the District of Columbia.

In future no Patent will be issued for any machine until a good model is furnished. It is requested that all models sent to the office may be labeled with the Patentee's name, &c.

Those who are unable to obtain good drawings at home, may have them executed at Washington, by persons unconnected with the office. In some cases a rough sketch, and in all, a good model will serve as a guide. Care will be taken by the Superintendent that the charges shall be moderate.

PATENT LAWS OF ENGLAND.

The following is an enumeration, in the order, of the several steps in the process of taking out a Patent in England.

1. A caveat may be entered at the Patent Office by the party about to apply for a patent, the effect of which will be to entitle him to have notice of any application that may chance to be made by another party for a patent in regard to an invention appearing to be similar to his, before his patent shall have been granted. The caveat costs fifteen shillings, and runs for six months. It may be lodged by any person who chooses, whether he means to take out a patent or not; and it will entitle him to a notice of all patents that may be applied for on the subject which it names.

2. An affidavit is made by the party applying, that he has either invented or has had communicated to him by a foreigner, some discovery, the general nature of which he describes at the same time by what is called its title.

3. A petition is presented to the King, through the office of the Secretary of State for the Home Department, praying a grant of Letters Patent for England, Wales, and Berwick-on-Tweed, either with or without the addition of the colonies, as the petitioner may think fit.

4. A reference is made by the Secretary of State, in the name of the King, to the Attorney or Solicitor-General, to report on the application.

5. If there happen to be any caveats on the books of the Patent Office from persons to be engaged with similar discoveries, notice is now given to them, and a delay of about a week takes place, in order to ascertain whether or no they intend to oppose the present application. If, by the end of that time, notice of an intention to oppose be given by any of them, the applicant's next step is to take out a summons for hearing before the Attorney or Solicitor-General.

6. A week's notice is then given to each party of the time appointed for the hearing, which, from various causes is, however, frequently much longer delayed; but, at last, on the parties both attending, the law officer before whom it takes place hears separately, first the applicant, and then his opponent; and, if he finds that the two claims are for different inventions, reports in favor of granting the patent.

7. That report must then be taken by the applicant to the Secretary of State's office, to be laid before the King.

8. After some time the applicant receives the King's warrant, directing the Attorney-General to prepare the patent.

9. Having carried this warrant to the Patent Bill Office, the party, generally in the course of about a week, receives his patent, with the signature of the Attorney or Solicitor General.

10. It is now called the King's Bill, and must be taken back to the Secretary of State's office for his Majesty's signature.

11. The King having signed it, it next goes to the Signet Office, where it passes, and it is then called the Signet Bill.

12. From this it goes to another office, where it receives the Privy Seal, after which it is called the Privy Seal Bill.

13. From the Privy Seal it goes to the Lord Chancellor's office, and if a caveat be lodged, which, however, is now rarely done at this stage of the process, notice is given of it to the applicant.

14. He must now petition the Lord Chancellor to have the caveat removed, on which his opponent is called upon to support his opposition.

15. If the opposition be found not to rest on sufficient grounds, the patent receives the Great Seal, and is then completed. It used, formerly, to be taken after this to the Hanaper Office, but that form is now dispensed with, although the Hanaper fees are still exacted.

16. A certain time, generally not more than two months, but sometimes extending to even two years, is now allowed to the applicant to make out a specification of his invention; and it is only after he has lodged this specification that he is entitled to the benefit of his patent. The specification must be fairly comprehended under the title or general description already lodged.

By law a patent is entirely vitiated in case the invention shall in any way chance to be made public before the instrument shall have passed the Great Seal. The patent is vitiated, although such publication may have been merely accidental, or even although it may have been brought about by the treachery of those to whom the secret had been unavoidably disclosed in confidence—of the workmen, for instance, whose assistance had been employed in making the necessary experiments.

According to Mr. Wyatt, the editor of the Repertory of Arts, London, the number of patents granted yearly, from 1675 to 1690, appears to have varied from 0 to 7, excepting the year 1684, when it amounted to twelve. During the three years immediately following 1690, it averaged twenty-one annually. It did not afterwards exceed nine till 1732, in which year thirteen patents were taken out, which number were rarely exceeded till 1766, when they amounted to thirty. In 1782, the number was only thirty-nine; but next year it was sixty-four. It varied between forty-three and eighty-four, from that time till 1800, when it rose to ninety-six. In 1804, the number was sixty; in 1809, one hundred and two; in 1813, one hundred and forty-three; in 1825, two hundred and forty-nine; in 1826, one hundred and thirty-one; in 1827, one hundred and forty-eight; in 1828, one hundred and fifty-two; from January to May, 1829, thirty-seven. The total number of patents in force in May, 1829, was one thousand eight hundred and fifty-five.

COPY RIGHTS.

An Act to amend the several acts respecting copy rights.

SEC. 1. Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives, of the United States of America, in Congress assembled, That, from and after the passing of this act, any person or persons, being a citizen or citizens of the United States, or resident therein, who shall be the author or authors of any book or books, map, chart, or musical composition, which may be now made or composed, and not printed and published, or shall hereafter be made or composed, or who shall invent, design, etch, engrave, work, or cause to be engraved, etched, or worked, from his own design, any print or engraving, and the executors, administrators, or legal assigns of such person or persons, shall have the sole right and liberty of printing, reprinting, publishing and vending such book or books, map, chart, or musical composition, print, cut, or engraving, in whole or in part, for the term of twenty-eight years from the time of recording the title thereof in the manner hereinafter directed.

SEC. 2. And be it further enacted, That if, at the expiration of the aforesaid term of years, such author, inventor, designer, engraver, or any of them, where the work had been originally composed and made by more than one person, be still living, and a citizen or citizens of the United States, or resident therein, or being dead, shall have left a widow, or child, or children, either or all then living, the same exclusive right shall be continued to such author, designer, or engraver, or, if dead, then to such widow and child, or children, for the further term of fourteen years: Provided, That the title of the work so secured, shall be a second time recorded, and all such other regulations as are herein required in regard to original copy-rights, be complied with in respect to such renewed copy-right, and that within six months before the expiration of the first term.

SEC. 3 And be it further enacted, That in all cases of renewal of copy-right under this act, such author or proprietor shall, within two months from the date of said renewal, cause a copy of the record thereof to be published in one or more of the newspapers printed in the United States, for the space of four weeks.

SEC. 4. And be it further enacted, That no person shall be entitled to the benefit of this act, unless he shall, before publication, deposit a printed copy of the title of such book or books, map, chart, musical composition, print, cut, or engraving, in the clerk's office of the district court of the District wherein the author or proprietor shall reside, and the clerk of such court is hereby directed and required to record the same thereof forthwith, in a book to be kept for that purpose, in the words following, (giving a copy of the title under the seal of the court to the said author, or proprietor, whenever he shall require the same,)

"District of——, to wit: Be it remembered, that on the—— day of—— Anno domini,—— A. B. of the said District, hath deposited in this office, the title of a book, (map, chart, or otherwise, as the case may be,) the title of which is in the words following to wit: [Here insert the title:] The right whereof he claims as author, (or proprietor, as the case may be;) in conformity with an act of Congress, entitled, "An act to amend the several acts respecting copy rights." C. D. Clerk of the District——"

For which record the Clerk shall be entitled to receive, from the person claiming such right as aforesaid, fifty cents; and the like sum for every copy, under seal, actually given to such person or his assigns. And the author or proprietor of any such book, map chart, musical composition, print, cut, or engraving, shall within three months from the publication of said book, map, chart, musical composition, print, cut, or engraving, deliver, or cause to be delivered, a copy of the same to the clerk of said district. And it shall be the duty of the clerk of each district court, at least once a year, to transmit a certified list of all such records of copy right, including the titles so recorded, and the dates of record, and also all the several copies of books or other works deposited in his office, according to this act, to the Secretary of State, to be preserved in his office.

SEC. 5. And be it further enacted, That no person shall be entitled to the benefit of this act, unless he shall give information of copy-right being secured, by causing to be inserted, in the several copies of each and every edition published during the term secured, on the title-page or the page immediately following, if it be a book, or, if a map, chart, musical composition, print, cut, or engraving, by causing to be impressed on the face thereof, or if a volume of maps, charts, music, or engravings, upon the title or frontispiece thereof, the following words. viz: "Entered according to act of Congress, in the year —, by A. B, in the Clerk's office of the district court of ———." (as the case may be.)

SEC. 6. And be it further enacted, That if any other person or persons, from and after the recording the title of any book or book according to this act, shall, within the term or terms herein limited, print, publish, or import, or cause to be printed, published or imported, any copy of such book or books, without the consent of the person legally entitled to the copy-right thereof, first had and obtained in writing, signed in presence of two or more credible witnesses, or shall, knowing the same to be so printed or imported, publish, sell, or expose to sale, or cause to be published, sold, or exposed to sale, any copy of such book, without such consent in writing, then such offender shall forfeit every copy of such book to the person legally, at the time, entitled to the copy-right thereof; and shall also forfeit and pay fifty cents for every such sheet which may be found in his possession, either printed or printing, published, imported, or exposed to sale, contrary to the intent of this act, the one moiety thereof to such legal owner of the copy-right as aforesaid, and the other to the use of the United States, to be recovered by action of debt in any court having competent jurisdiction thereof.

SEC. 7. And be it further enacted, That if any person or persons, after the recording the title of any print, cut, or engraving, map, chart, or musical composition, according to the provisions of this act, shall, within the term or terms limited by this act, engrave, etch or work, sell or copy, or cause to be engraved, etched, worked or sold, or copied, either or the whole, or by varying, adding to, or diminishing, the main design, with intent to evade the law, or shall print or import for sale, or cause to be printed or imported for sale, any such map, chart, musical composition, print, cut, or engraving, or any parts thereof, without the consent of the proprietor or proprietors of the copy-right thereof, first obtained in writing, signed in the presence of two credible witnesses; or knowing the same to be so printed or imported without such consent, shall publish, sell, or expose to sale, or in any manner dispose of any such map, chart, musical composition, engraving, cut, or print, without such consent as aforesaid, then such offender or offenders shall forfeit the plate or plates on which such map, chart, musical composition, engraving, cut, or print, shall be copied, and also all and every sheet thereof, so copied or printed, as aforesaid, to the proprietor or proprietors of the copy right thereof; and shall further forfeit one dollar for every sheet of such map, chart, musical composition, print, cut, or engraving, which may be found in his or their possession, printed or published, or exposed to sale, contrary to the true intent and meaning of this act, the one moiety thereof to the proprietor or proprietors, and the other moiety to the use of the United States, to be recovered in any Court having competent jurisdiction thereof.

SEC. 8 And be it further enacted, That nothing in this act shall be construed to extend to prohibit the importation, or vending, printing, or publishing of any map, chart, book, musical composition, print, or engraving, written, composed, or made, by any person not being a citizen of the United States, nor resident within the jurisdiction thereof.

SEC. 9. And be it further enacted, That any person or persons, who shall print or publish any manuscript whatever, without the consent of the author or legal proprietor first obtained as aforesaid, (if such author or proprietor be a citizen of the United States, or resident therein,) shall be liable to suffer and pay to the author or proprietor, all damages occasioned by such injury, to be recovered by a special action on the case, founded upon this act, in any Court having cognizance thereof: and the several courts of the United States empowered to grant injunctions to prevent the violation of the rights of authors and inventors, are hereby empowered to grant injunctions, in like manner, according to the principles of equity, to restrain such publication of any manuscript as aforesaid.

SEC. 10. And be it further enacted, That, if any person or persons shall be sued or prosecuted, for any matter, act, or thing done under or by virtue of this act, he or they may plead the general issue, and give the special matter in evidence.

SEC. 11. And be it further enacted, That, if any person or persons, from and after the passing of this act, shall print or publish any book, map, chart, musical composition, print, cut, or engraving, not having legally acquired the copy-right thereof, and shall insert or impress that the same hath been entered according to act of Congress, or words purporting the same, every person so offending shall forfeit and pay one hundred dollars, one moiety thereof to the person who shall sue for the same, and the other to the use of the United States, to be recovered by action of debt, in any court of record having cognizance thereof.

SEC. 12. And be it further enacted, That, in all recoveries under this act, either for damages, forfeitures, or penalties, full costs shall be allowed thereon, any thing in any former act to the contrary notwithstanding.

SEC. 13. And be it further enacted, That no action or prosecution shall be maintained, in any case of forfeiture or penalty under this act, unless the same shall have been commenced within two years after the cause of action shall have arisen.

SEC. 14. And be it further enacted, That the "Act for the encouragement of learning, by securing the copies of maps, charts, and books, to the authors and proprietors of such copies during the times therein mentioned," passed May thirty first, one thousand seven hundred and ninety, and the act supplementary thereto, passed April twenty-ninth, one thousand eight hundred and two, shall be and the same are hereby repealed; saving, always, such rights as may have been obtained in conformity to their provisions.

SEC. 15. And be it further enacted, That all and several the provisions of this act, intended for the protection and security of copy rights, and providing remedies, penalties, and forfeitures, in case of violation thereof, shall be held and construed to extend to the benefit of the legal proprietor or proprietors of each and every copy-right heretofore obtained according to law, during the term thereof, in the same manner as if such copy-right had been entered and secured according to the directions of this act.

SEC. 16. And be it further enacted, That, whenever a copy-right has been heretofore obtained by an author or authors, inventor, designer, or engraver, er, of any book, map, chart, print, cut, or engraving, or by a proprietor of the same; if such author or authors, or either of them, such inventor, designer, or engraver, be living at the passage of this act, then such author or authors, or the survivor of them, such inventor, engraver, or designer, shall continue to have the same exclusive right to his book, chart, map, print, cut, or engraving, with the benefit of each and all the provisions of this act, for the security thereof, for such additional period of time as will, together with the time which shall have elapsed from the first entry of such copy-right, make up the term of twenty-eight years, with the same right to his widow, child, or children, to renew the copy-right, at the expiration thereof, as is above provided in relation to copy-rights originally secured under this act. And if such author or authors, inventor, designer, or engraver, shall not be living at the passage of this act, then, his or their heirs, executors, and administrators, shall be entitled to the like exclusive enjoyment of said copy-right, with the benefit of each and all the provisions of this act for the security thereof, for the period of twenty-eight years from the first entry of said copy-right, with the like privilege of renewal to the widow, child, or children, of author or authors, designer, inventor, or engraver, as is provided in relation to copy-rights originally secured under this act: Provided, That this act shall not extend to any copy-right heretofore secured, the term of which has already expired.

[Approved, Feb. 3, 1831.]

ART. I. His Majesty the King of Denmark, renounces the indemnities which might be claimed from the Government of the United States of America, for the subjects of Denmark, on account of the seizure, detention and condemnation or confiscation of their vessels, cargoes or property whatsoever under the authority of the said Government ; and his Majesty engages moreover, to pay to the said Government, the sum of six hundred and fifty thousand Spanish milled dollars, on account of the citizens of the United States, who have preferred claims relating to the seizure, detention, condemnation or confiscation of their vessels, cargoes or property whatsoever, by the public and private armed ships, or by the tribunals of Denmark, or in the States subject to the Danish sceptre.

ART. II. The payment of the above sum of six hundred and fifty thousand Spanish milled dollars, shall be made, in the times and manner following : On the 31st March, 1831, two hundred and sixteen thousand six hundred and sixty-six dollars and two-thirds of a dollar

On the 30th September, 1832, two hundred and sixteen thousand six hundred and sixty-six dollars and two-thirds of a dollar.

To the second payment shall be added the interest for that, and for the first payment, at four per centum per annum, to be computed from the first payment, on the 31st March, 1831.

At the time when the first payment shall be made, on the 31st March, 1831, two obligations, corresponding to the two last payments to be effected for the capital and interest thereof, shall be issued by the Direction for the public debt and the sinking fund of Denmark, to orders of the Department of Foreign Affairs of Denmark, and assigned to the Government of the United States. By the said obligations, His Majesty the King of Denmark shall acknowledge himself debtor, for the sums not yet paid to the Government of the United States of America, and the same shall be delivered to such person or persons, as may be authorized to receive the same by the said Government ; and when the said obligations are to be discharged, according to the tenor thereof, by the Danish Government, the person or persons authorized by the Government of the United States, to receive the stipulated payments, shall deliver up the said obligations with receipts, for the amount thereof, from the said Government.

ART. III. To ascertain the full amount, and validity of the claims, mentioned in Article I, a Board of Commissioners, consisting of three citizens of the United States, shall be appointed by the President, by and with the advice and consent of the Senate, who shall meet at Washington, and within the space of two years from the time of their first meeting shall receive, examine and decide upon, the amount and validity of all such claims, according to the merits of the several cases, and to justice, equity, and the law of nations.

The Commissioners shall take an oath or affirmation, to be entered in the Journal of their proceedings, for the faithful and diligent discharge of their duties.

In case of the death, sickness or necessary absence of any Commissioner, his place may be supplied by the appointment of another Commissioner in the manner before mentioned, or during the recess of the Senate, by the

In faith thereof, and in virtue of our respective full powers, we have signed the present Convention, and have thereunto set the seals of our arms.

TREASURY DEPARTMENT.

LOUIS McLANE, of Delaware, Secretary, $ 6000 per annum.

The office of Secretary of the Treasury was created by act of the 2nd September, 1789. He superintends all the fiscal concerns of the Government, and, upon his own responsibility, recommends to Congress measures for improving the condition of the revenue. He holds his office at the will of the President; is, by usage, a member of the Cabinet; and, ex officio, one of the Commissioners of the sinking fund. By an act of Congress, of the 15th of May, 1820, the Treasury Department has been invested with extraordinary powers for the recovery of public moneys not accounted for or withheld by officers receiving them prior to such money being paid into the Treasury. Warrants of distress, in the nature of executions upon judgments, are authorised upon certificates of balance from the first Comptroller, against principals and sureties in default: and the judges of the United States are, by the same law, clothed with extensive chancery jurisdiction, with a view of ameliorating any undue severity to individuals, which may possibly occur under the warrants in question.

By the Act of 29th May, 1830, the office of Solicitor of the Treasury was created. A portion of the duties of this office had been previously under the Act of 15th May, 1820, performed by the Fifth Auditor, an agent of the Treasury.

All accounts of the government are finally settled at the Treasury Department: for which purpose it is divided into the office of the Secretary (who superintends the whole, but who is not, therefore, absolute, with respect to the power of adjusting claims or of paying money;) into two Comptrollers, five Auditors, a Register, a Treasurer, and a Solicitor. The Auditors of the public accounts are empowered to administer oath or affirmation to witnesses in any case in which they may deem it necessary for the due examination of the accounts with which they are charged.

Besides the disbursement of moneys for the great objects of government there are contingent funds appropriated yearly by Congress. These are expended for such objects as could not well be foreseen, by some one of the clerks or other officer belonging to each of the departments, who is especially entrusted with that business, to whom the accounts of such contingencies must be presented. He takes his receipt in his own name, and at the end of each quarter of a year is brought to a settlement himself, for all his disbursements, at the Treasury Department.

The act of Congress of May 7, 1822, requires, that all moneys appropriated for the use of the War and Navy Departments shall, from and after the 30th of June, 1822, be drawn from the Treasury, by warrant of the Secretary of the Treasury, upon the requisitions of the Secretaries of those departments, countersigned by the Second Comptroller, and registered by the proper Auditor.

The act of January 31st, 1823, prohibits an advance of public money in any case whatever; and requires all persons who may receive public money for disbursement, to render quarterly accounts to the proper accounting officers of the Treasury, for settlement: and all officers of the government who neglect to comply with this regulation, are to be promptly reported to the President, and dismissed from the public service.

SECOND COMPTROLLER'S OFFICE.

James B. Thornton, Comptroller, $3,000 per annum.

In the brief view given of the powers of the Comptrollers of the Treasury, it may be sufficient to remark that, within the sphere of their respective duties they are the ultimate law officers of the government.

The second Comptroller is independent of the first. His office was established to effect a prompt settlement of the public accounts, which from the constantly increasing expenditures of the government, had accumulated, and which with other duties, was found to exceed the ability of one Comptroller. The second Comptroller therefore would be more correctly styled the Comptroller of the accounts of the Army, Navy, and Indian disbursements. It may be here remarked, that the duties of advancing money, and accounting for it, are distinct. The Secretaries of the Departments exercise a discretion, in advancing from the appropriations, the requisite sums to the disbursing officers; but it is made the duty of the accounting officers of the Treasury, independent of the Secretaries, to require accounts and vouchers, showing the legal application of the money. In this division of duties, is perceived a salutary check. The hands of the executive are left unrestrained in advancing to the agents the necessary funds, to accomplish the purposes of the government; but these agents have to account to officers of the Treasury, leaving the executive no power to misapply the funds advanced.

It is the duty of the 2d. Comptroller to revise and certify the accounts stated in the offices of the 2d, 3d, and 4th auditors; and he decides on all appeals from the decisions of those Auditors, and his decision is final except relief is granted by Congress.

In the office of the 2d. Comptroller, a record is kept of the accounts settled, showing the balances due to and from the United States; a record of all the requisitions for money, drawn by the Secretaries of the War and Navy Departments; and on its files are placed all the contracts involving the payment of money, entered into by those Departments. It is also the duty of the Comptroller to direct suits and stoppages on account of delinquencies; to keep an account with each specific appropriation, and to make annual and other statements of the disbursements, as required by law. He also prescribes the forms for the accounts and vouchers, and of keeping and stating the accounts, subject to his revision.

[SEC. 1.] Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That any person who was an insolvent debtor on or before the first day of January last, and who is indebted to the United States for any sum of money then due, which he is unable to pay, unless such person be indebted as the principal in an official bond, or for public money received by him, and not paid over or accounted for according to law, or for any fine, forfeiture, or penalty, incurred by the violation of any law of the United States, may make application in writing under oath or affirmation, to the Secretary of the Treasury, for the purpose of obtaining a release or discharge of the said debt; which application shall state, as near as may be, the time when the applicant became insolvent, how soon thereafter he made known his insolvency to his creditors, the cause or causes, and the amount of such insolvency; and, also, all the estate, real and personal, which the said applicant owned at the time of his insolvency, and the manner in which such estate has been disposed of; and what estate, if any, he has since owned and still owns.

SEC. 2. And be it further enacted, That the Secretary of the Treasury is hereby directed to transmit to the District Attorney of the United States for the District or Territory within which the said applicant shall reside, a certified copy of the said application, with such instructions as he may think proper; and it shall be the duty of the said District Attorney to lay the said copy of such application before the Commissioner or Commissioners of insolvency, to be appointed by virtue of this act, and to appear and act before them as counsel in behalf of the United States.

SEC. 3. And be it further enacted, That the Secretary of the Treasury is hereby authorized and directed to appoint any number of Commissioners of Insolvency he may think proper, not exceeding three in each Judicial District or Territory of the United States, who, before they enter upon the duties of their appointment, shall severally take an oath or affirmation before one of the Justices of the Supreme Court, or before any Judge of a District Court of the United States, that they will faithfully execute the trust committed to them; and it shall be the duty of the said Commissioner or Commissioners to proceed publicly to examine the books, papers, and vouchers of each of the said applicants; and they or either of them, shall also be authorized to examine each of the said applicants, or any other persons or persons, upon oath or affirmation, touching the said application; and it shall be the duty of the said Commissioner or Commissioners, to make a report in writing, to the said Secretary, of the result of their examination in each

SEC. 4. And be it further enacted, That the Secretary of the Treasury, after he shall have received the report of the said Commissioner or Commissioners, shall proceed to examine the circumstances of each case; and if it shall have been proved to his satisfaction that the said debtor is unable to pay the said debt or debts which he owes to the United States; that he hath committed no act fraudulently to deprive the United States of their legal priority; that he has not been guilty of any fraud, nor made any conveyance of his estate, real or personal, in trust for himself, or with an intent to defraud the United States, or whereby to expect any benefit or advantage to himself or family; then and in that case, the said Secretary may compromise with the said debtor, upon such terms and conditions as he may think reasonable and proper, under all the circumstances of the case; and may execute a release to him or her for the amount of the said debt or debts which he or she owes to the United States; which said release shall contain a recital of the foregoing particulars have been satisfactorily proved to the said Secretary: Provided, however, That the said release shall be rendered null and void, if it shall at any time be ascertained that the said insolvent debtor obtained the same upon false suggestions.

SEC. 6. And be it further enacted, That each of the said Commissioners of Insolvency shall receive five dollars per day for each day they shall be actually employed in the performance of their duty under this act; which sum, together with the actual expense incurred for office rent and all other contingencies, provided the same shall not, in the whole, exceed two dollars per day, shall be apportioned among the several applicants by the said Commissioner or Commissioners, under the direction of the Secretary of the Treasury, according to the time occupied in the investigation of each case; and each of the said applicants, immediately after the investigation of his or her case shall be completed, by the Commissioner or Commissioners, and before his report shall be transmitted to the said Secretary, shall pay his or her respective proportions of the same; and it shall be the duty of the said Commissioner or Commissioners to transmit with his or their report, in each case, a statement, under oath or affirmation, to the said Secretary, of the time actually occupied in the investigation thereof, and the amount which they shall have received from the said applicant.

SEC. 7. And be it further enacted, That the compensation to be paid to the District Attorney of each District and Territory shall be five dollars for each day he shall be actually employed under the provisions of this act.

General Thomas S. Jesup, Quartermaster General.

Major Trueman Cross, 7th Infantry, Quartermaster.

Captain Thomas F. Hunt, 5th Infantry, assistant quartermaster.

William A. Gordon, Clerk..... 1150

The objects of this department are, to insure an efficient system of supply, and to give facility and effect to the movements and operations of the army.

The Quartermaster General is stationed at the City of Washington but occasionally visits the several stations of the subordinate officers of his department. He has, under the direction of the Secretary of War, the exclusive control of all the quartermasters, and assistant quartermasters; and of all officers and agents acting in, or making disbursements on account of the department; in every thing relating to the administrative branch of their duties, and their accountability. He has like control of all regimental and company officers, in every thing relating to barracks or quarters, and to the accountability for supplies of the quartermaster's and purchasing departments. One assistant quartermaster is attached to the office of the quartermaster general, who, in addition to his other duties, is charged with the disbursements at Washington, and in the absence of the quartermaster general, has the direction of the office. There is also attached to the office, as many subaltern officers, &c. as the service from time to time requires.

All communications relating to the duties of the department, or to any branch or officer thereof, except from commanding generals of division or departments of armies, must be addressed to the quartermaster general.

It is the duty of the Quartermaster general to make himself acquainted with the frontiers, both maritime and interior, and with the avenues leading to the contiguous Indian and foreign territories, with the resources of the country, in military supplies, and the means of transportation particularly of the districts on the frontiers, with the most eligible points for concentrating troops and collecting supplies, whether in relation to offensive or defensive operations, with the relative expenses of concentrating at particular positions, and the advantages of those positions. It is also his duty to designate the routes of communication between different posts and armies—the course of military roads—and the sites for permanent and temporary depots of provisions and military stores.

The officers of the quartermaster's department are requested to collect formation in relation to all these points, and to make themselves acquainted with the state of the roads, the course and description of the rivers, and the most direct routes between the different military posts within their respective departments.

The quartermaster general can assign the officers of his department such stations as he may think proper, and officers so assigned cannot be removed from their stations, nor be subject to detail, nor be employed on any other duties than those of their department, except by his order that of the Secretary of War.

The officers of this department must provide quarters and transportation for the troops, and transportation for all military stores, provisions, camp and garrison equipage, and artillery; and provide for opening and repairing roads, and constructing and repairing bridges, which may be necessary to the movements of any part of the army.

They must provide good and sufficient store houses for all military supplies, and for all provisions deposited by the commissary general and his assistants, or under contracts between individuals and the government, and appoint store-keepers, when necessary, for the custody of such stores or provisions, or any other property of the government placed there. They purchase all forage, fuel, straw and stationary, for the use of the troops, and have the same transported and issued agreeably to the regulations. They purchase dragoon and artillery horses, and horses, mules, wagons, carts and boats, for the transportation of the baggage, and for garrison purposes; and provide materials for constructing and repairing barracks, hospitals, stables and bridges.

No purchase can be made on public account, in time of peace, by any officer of the quartermaster's department, but of the articles above enumerated, except by special authority from the Secretary of War, communicated through the quartermaster general, or at the risk of the officer ordering the supplies.

Officers of this department will receive from the purchasing and subsistence departments, and from the ordnance depots, all medical and surgical stores, provisions, arms, ammunition and ordnance, and transport the same to the place of destination, and make distribution thereof, agreeably to the direction given to the articles by the commissary general of purchases, the commissary general of subsistence, the ordnance officer, or the general commanding the division or department to which they are destined.

As far as practicable, all supplies and services required in the operations of the quartermaster's department, will be procured by contracts, based upon proposals respecting the same, previously advertised for.—When this course is found impracticable, or inconvenient to the public service, those supplies and services will be obtained by open purchase or agreement in the market.

All contracts entered into, will be executed in triplicate, one of which shall, in all cases, be transmitted to the quartermaster-general's office.—They will be accompanied by a bond of the contractor, conditioned for the faithful performance of his stipulations, under penalty of one half the amount involved, and supported by two sureties, of whose sufficiency satisfactory reference will be required, in the absence of personal knowledge.

Proposals will not be opened until the time shall have elapsed with which they are to be received, and in all cases, the several bidders shall on application, have the privilege of reference to the proposals after they shall have been acted upon. A copy of all advertisements for proposals will be transmitted to the quartermaster general's office, with the contracts to which they relate; also, an abstract of the proposals, showing the names and terms of the several bidders. The proposals themselves will be carefully preserved for future reference.

Officers of the quartermaster's department have the right, without reference to any other authority, to pay for all supplies or services in which they are authorized by these regulations to contract; but advance on contracts being strictly prohibited by law, under all circumstances payment shall in no case be made for supplies until they have been delivered, nor for services until they have been performed.

Payment for services or supplies shall, as far as practicable, be made within the quarter during which the service shall have been rendered, the supplies furnished. When this shall not be practicable, either from the want of funds, or any other cause, the fact must be reported to the quartermaster general at the close of the quarter; and all property received, whether paid for or not, must appear on the property returns of the quarter in which it shall have been received.

Due bills shall not, in any case, be given by officers of the quartermaster's department; nor shall receipts be taken from any claimant, whether for supplies or services, unless the amount specified be actually paid.

No officer or other person employed in the quartermaster's department shall be concerned, directly or indirectly, either for himself or others, in any contract with any department of the government; nor in the purchase of any claim on the government, whether of a soldier or a citizen; nor in the purchase or sale of any article of military supply, except on public account.

All officers and agents of the quartermaster's department, will keep and render their accounts, both of money and property, according to the forms prescribed by the regulations; and each officer and agent of the department, shall forward his accounts to the office of the quartermaster general, within twenty days after the expiration of the quarter; and shall be the duty of the quartermaster general to examine and transmit them, with his remarks, to the proper accounting officer of the treasury department.

Any officer or agent of the quartermaster's department, who shall fail to forward, at the time prescribed, any report, estimate, return, or statement, which he is required by the regulations to make, shall be removed, and his neglect be the subject of military investigation; unless he explain the cause of such failure, to the satisfaction of the quartermaster general.

The quartermaster general may, whenever he shall deem it necessary, cause a thorough inspection to be made of the books and accounts of the quartermasters, and of all officers and agents making disbursements on account of the department. This inspection shall embrace property as well as money; and extend to contracts—to prices paid for articles purchased—prices paid for transportation—and, generally, to every article of supply, and to all effects connected with the department.

The books and accounts of the quartermaster general, will be subject to a similar inspection.

Whenever private buildings shall be occupied as quarters, or lands for encampments, by the troops of the United States, a reasonable compensation shall be paid to the proprietor by the quartermaster of the department, post, or detachment. When the rate of compensation cannot be satisfactorily agreed upon, disinterested persons shall be appointed by the quartermaster and proprietor, to appraise and determine the rent.

Every officer of the quartermaster's department must, before entering upon the duties of his office, give bond to the United States, with two or more sufficient sureties, conditioned for the faithful performance of his duty. The quartermaster general, in the sum of fifty thousand dollars, quartermasters twenty thousand, assistant quartermasters ten thousand, and store keepers, five thousand dollars. The sufficiency of the sureties to be certified by the district attorney, or United States' judge, of the State or Territory in which they reside, or of which they are citizens.

The present mode of supplying the army with subsistence was established by the 6th, 7th, 8th, 9th, and 10th sections of an act of Congress passed April 14th, 1818, entitled "An act regulating the Staff of the Army of the United States;" and by the 8th section "of an act to reduce and fix the military peace establishment," passed 2d March, 1821. By the former, it was to continue for five years; and it was renewed for five more by "an act to continue the present mode of supplying the army," passed 23d January, 1823; and again for five years, by act of same title passed 2d March, 1829.

The first named act provides for a Commissary General of Subsistence, whose duties are to make estimates of expenditure for his department; contract and purchase subsistence for the army; regulate the transmission of funds to his assistants; make payments to contractors; adjust accounts for settlement; locate his assistants at their several stations; and, in general, provide for the proper administration of his department in all its ramifications. VILLIAM T. BARRY, of Kentucky, Postmaster General,

This Department is under the superintendence of a Postmaster General, who is aided in the discharge of his duties by two Assistants, appointed by himself. He has the sole appointment of all postmasters throughout the United States, the making of all contracts for carrying the mails, and, in brief, the control, according to law, of every thing relating to the institution. The revenue arising from the General Post Office has, for the most part, been expended upon the extension and improvement of the establishment, by which means the accommodation of the mail for the conveyance of letters, newspapers, pamphlets, &c. has, to a most extraordinary degree, been extended to the inhabitants of every part of the Union, even to the most remote territorial settlements.

Organization of the Post Office Department; and the duties assigned to the Officers and Clerks, by the Postmaster General.

FIRST DIVISION.

The Senior Assistant Postmaster General is at the head of the first division, and is charged with the duties appertaining to the finances of the Department; with the general supervision, under the direction of the Postmaster General, of the duties performed in the offices of this division, and particularly with the cash disbursements; with the comptrolling of all incidental accounts when audited by the Chief Clerk; and with examining and reporting to the Postmaster General, when deficient, the deposits of the weekly, monthly, and quarterly proceeds of depositing post offices.

The principal book-keeper is charged with the books of the North and East sections, to wit: five ledgers, containing 3,000 postmasters' accounts, the contractors' accounts of this section, as well as the general accounts of the department; a journal, containing the transportation credits to the contractors, and abstract of the day-book of this section, which contains the ordinary entries, by the book-keepers, solicitor, and principal pay clerk.

The second book-keeper is charged with the books of the South and West section, to wit: four ledgers, containing near 3,000 postmasters' accounts, and the contractors' accounts of this section; a journal and a day book, all containing and kept as in the preceding section.

The third book keeper is charged with the books of the Middle section, to wit: four ledgers, containing 2,500 postmasters' accounts, all contractors' accounts of this section, a journal and a day book, containing and kept as above.

The book-keepers also keep a ledger (N) of balances due from late postmasters and contractors, and have charge of the cash-book, kept by the assistant's bank clerk.

Solicitor's Office.

To the solicitor is assigned the final settlement of all accounts; the collection of all balances due; the commencement of suits; and the correspondence with the United States' District Attorneys and others, in relation thereto. Also, the statements of present postmasters' accounts and the correspondence on questions of difference concerning their past accounts.

Pay Office.

It is the duty of the principal pay clerk to examine the accounts of all contractors for the transportation of the mail; ascertain the annual and quarterly payments to be made on their contracts; issue the drafts in their favor on the postmasters belonging to their routes; to keep the pay books of the pay due, of the sums drawn from the post offices, and of the drafts and checks transmitted; and to furnish certificates to the assistant of the sums for which checks are required to meet all payments for transportation. He is also agent for the payment of salaries of the officers, clerks, and others, of the Department proper; and keeps the accounts separately from the accounts of the Department.

The pay clerks are employed in filling up all drafts on postmasters, upwards of 20,000 in number per annum; and with receipts to accompany the checks for money, transmitting them to the contractors.

Examiner's Office.

The Chief Examiner is charged with the opening, crediting and examining, of all postmaster's accounts; receiving and depositing in bank such remittances as are specially authorized, returning what is not receivable; with notifying and reporting delinquents; with notifying to postmasters the errors in their accounts and explaining all questions relating to them.

Register's Office.

It is the duty of the chief register to prepare all the accounts of the Department for the treasury, with their proper vouchers, and with a general account current of the quarterly transactions of the Department; to correspond for deficient vouchers; to superintend the copying and adjusting of the accounts, for the treasury.

There are three registers, whose duty it is to register the accounts current of all postmasters, designating the different items of charge in each particular account; to re-examine and note the errors which have escaped the observation of the examiners.

SECOND DIVISION.

This division is under the direction of the Assistant Postmaster General, to whom is assigned under the Postmaster General, the charge of the duties appertaining to the establishment and regulation of post offices; the appointment, supervision, and instruction of postmasters; and the security of remittances by mail; requiring a supervision of the offices of this division, more especially of the office of appointments and instructions; the direction of its duties and correspondence; the examination of mail routes, in order to determine the location of new offices; the reporting of applications and complaints, for the decision of the Postmaster General.

This office is under the charge of a superintendent, whose duty it is to examine dead letters containing articles of value; to enter, number, and transmit each with contents to the writer or owner, in a letter to the postmaster nearest his residence, with receipts to be executed; and if a dead letter is returned, to note it, &c. In cases of enclosures that are not money, he numbers the letters and contents, enters, endorses, and files them, if law papers, in the order of states, if others, alphabetically. It is his duty, also, to make searches, to answer applications for enclosures, to correspond with postmasters on the subject of dead letters sent to them for delivery, and to report special failures; also to complete the unfinished business of filing and arranging the old papers. The moneys remaining on hand are periodically deposited in bank, subject to the future claims of the owners thereof.

The watchmen and two others are employed to take the returns from the chief examiner's room to the dead letter office; separate the dead letters from the other papers, and return the latter to the chief examier; they open the dead letters and deliver all having enclosures to the superintendent: those that have no enclosures are, without being read, burnt, and also those containing articles of no value.

Privilege of Franking.

Letters and packets to and from the following officers of the government, are by law received and conveyed by post, free of postage.

The President and Vice President of the United States; Secretaries of State, Treasury, War, and Navy; Attorney General; Postmaster General and Assistants Postmaster General; Comptrollers, Auditors, Register and Solicitor of the Treasury; Treasurer; Commissioner of General Land Office; Commissioners of Navy Board; Commissary General, Inspectors General; Quartermaster General; Paymaster General, Superintendent of Patent Office; Speaker and Clerk of the House of Representatives, and Secretary of the Senate; and such individual who shall have been, or may hereafter be, President of the United States; and each may receive newspapers by post, free of postage.

Each member of the Senate, and each member and delegate of the House of Representatives, may send and receive, free of postage, newspapers, letters, and packets, weighing not more than two ounces, (in case of excess of weight, excess alone to be paid for,) and all documents printed by order of either House, during, and sixty days before and after each session of Congress.

Postmasters may send and receive, free of postage, letters and packets not exceeding half an ounce in weight; and they may receive one daily newspaper, each, or what is equivalent thereto.

Printers of newspapers may send one paper to each and every other printer of newspapers within the United States, free of postage under such regulations as the Postmaster General may provide.

Violation of Franking Privilege.

Any person who shall frank any letter or letters, other than those written by himself or by his order, in the business of his office, shall, on conviction thereof, pay a fine of ten dollars—and it is made the especial duty of postmasters to prosecute for such offence. The law provides, however, that the Secretaries of State, Treasury, War, and Navy, and Postmaster General, may frank letters or packets on official business prepared in any other public office in the absence of the principal thereof.

If any person, having the right to receive letters free of postage, shall receive, enclosed to him, any letter or packet addressed to a person not having that right, it is his duty to return the same to the Post Office, marking thereon the place from whence it came, that it may be charged with postage.

Any person who shall counterfeit the hand writing or frank of any person, or cause the same to be done, in order to avoid the payment of postage, shall, for each offence, pay five hundred dollars.

No Postmaster or assistant Postmaster can act as agent for lottery offices, or under any colour of purchase or otherwise vend lottery tickets; nor can any Postmaster receive free of postage, or frank any lottery schemes, circulars, or tickets. For a violation of this provision of law, the persons offending shall suffer a penalty of fifty dollars.

No Postmaster, assistant Postmaster, or clerk employed in any Post Office, can be a contractor, or concerned in any contract for carrying the mail.

THE CONGRESS.

The Congress of the United States consists of the Senate and House of Representatives; the former composed of forty-eight in number, the latter of two hundred and sixteen, of whom three are delegates.

There are two Senators from each State. They were originally divided into three classes, and one third of them are re-chosen every second year for the term of six years. They are chosen by the Legislatures of the States. When a new State is admitted into the Union, the secretary of the Senate puts into the ballot-box two numbers, upon paper of equal size, one of which is drawn out by each of the two Senators from the new State; the Senate having determined, by a previous order, to which class each Senator so drawing the one or the other number shall belong.

The Senate have upon all nominations by the President of the United States, a voice of advice and consent, or otherwise; in which case it sits with closed doors. The journal of its proceedings is then secret. They have also a vote in the ratification of treaties; in which case it is indispensable that two-thirds of them should consent. The Senate is also court for the trial of high crimes and misdemeanors, upon impeachments by the House of Representatives.

No person can be a Senator who has not attained the age of thirty years, and been nine years a citizen of the United States, and who shall not, when elected, be an inhabitant of that State for which he shall be chosen.

The Vice President of the United States is, by the constitution, the president of the Senate, in which body he has only a casting vote, which is given in case of an equal division of the votes of the Senators. The Vice President of the United States, when he acts as President of the Senate, receives no addition to his pay as Vice President, which is $5,000 per annum. In his absence a President pro tempore is chosen, who during the period of his services, receives $16 per diem for every day he attends.

The Senate is the only perpetual body in the federal government. The perpetuity, however, belongs to it only in its character of Senate; the individual members, being renewed, as stated, by successive thirds, biennially. The House of Representatives is composed of members chosen every second year by the People of the several States; and the electors in each State must have the qualifications requisite for electors of the most numerous branch of the State Legislature.

Representatives are apportioned among the several States according to their respective numbers, which are determined by adding to the whole number of free persons, including those bound to service for a term of years, and excluding Indians not taxed, three-fifths of all other persons. A enumeration of the inhabitants of the United States must be made every ten years. The first enumeration was made in 1790, the fifth in 1830.

No person can be a Representative who has not attained the age of twenty-five years, and been seven years a citizen of the United States, and who shall not, when elected, be an inhabitant of the State in which he shall be chosen.

When vacancies happen in the representation from any State, it is made the duty of the executive authority thereof, to issue writs of election, to fill such vacancies.

The Speaker of the House of Representatives is chosen by a majority of the members of the House, for the term of the Congress to which he belongs as a member of the House. His privileges are the same as those of any other member ; and his compensation is $16 per diem.

Each Senator and Representative receives, for his services, $8 per diem, during the period of his attendance in the Senate or House ; and in case of sickness, this compensation is continued. The same allowance is made to each, for every 20 miles of the usual road in going to and returning from the Seat of Government.

The Congress must assemble, at least, once in every year, on the first Monday in December, if not otherwise provided by law. The President of the United States may convene them at any time upon giving forty days notice. Neither House can adjourn for more than three days, without the consent of the other, nor to any other place than that in which the two Houses shall be sitting. In case of disagreement about the time, the President of the United States may adjourn them to such time as he thinks proper. The Senate and House each form their own rules, and are, respectively, judges of their own election.

The times, places, and manner of holding elections for Senators and Representatives, is prescribed in each State by the Legislature thereof ; but the Congress may, at any time by law, make or alter such regulations, except as to the places of choosing Senators.

Both Senators and Representatives are, in all cases except treason, felony, and breach of the peace, privileged from arrest during their attendance at the session of their respective Houses, and in going to or returning from, the same ; and for any speech or debate in either House, they cannot be questioned in any other place. Bills for raising revenue must originate in the House ; and the House, solely, has the power of impeachment.

No Member of Congress can, during the time for which he was elected, be appointed to any civil office under the authority of the United States, which shall have been created, or the emoluments whereof shall have been increased, during such time ; and no person holding any office under the United States, can be a member of either House during his continuance in office ; nor can he be concerned either directly or indirectly, in whole, or in part, in any contract, &c. with the United States.

The President and Secretary of the Senate, and Speaker and Clerk of the House of Representatives, have the privilege of franking letters and packets, not exceeding two ounces in weight, during the year ; and each Senator, Representative, and Delegate in Congress, may frank letters and packets, of not more than two ounces in weight, and all documents printed by order of either House, during, and sixty days before and after each session of Congress.

The officers of the Senate and of the House of Representatives are elected at the first session of each Congress. The Librarian is appointed by the President, but before he can enter upon the duties of his office he is required to give a bond, which must be approved by the President of the Senate and Speaker of the House of Representatives. The term of his service is not limited by law.

COMMITTEES OF CONGRESS.

The Committees of the Senate, when the Vice President is in chair, are elected by ballot; in his absence they are appointed by President pro tempore: those of the House are appointed by the Speaker.

To these Committees, in either House, is confided the initiation of business. They report to the Senate or the House, by bill, or otherwise and upon such report the Senate or House go in committee of the whole in which form of proceeding the whole body of members are regarded as one committee; the Speaker quits the chair, and some one member is called to preside as chairman; (the President of the Senate does not leave the chair when the Senate proceeds to the consideration of a measure as in committee of the whole, but presides on all occasions when he is present.) In this committee, a wide latitude of discussion is allowed and having made progress or come to some determination on the subject under consideration, it rises and reports progress, asks leave to sit again or to be discharged from that business, or reports in a conclusive manner affirmatively or negatively; and the Senate, or House grant or refuse the leave of discharge, or confirm or reject the report of the committee. This form of procedure is eminently calculated to prevent precipitate measures of importance; and it is only in committee of the whole that the Speaker can take part in the debate. The President of the Senate on no occasion enters into the discussion of measures pending before that body.

THE JUDICIARY.

The Judicial power of the United States is vested in one Supreme Court, and in such inferior Courts as Congress, from time to time, estab-

The present Judicial establishment of the United States consists of the Supreme Court, of thirty-one District Courts, and seven Circuit Courts, which are thus organized: the Supreme Court is composed of one Chief Justice and six Associate Justices, who hold a Court in the City of Washington, annually; besides which, each of these Justices attends in certain Circuit comprising two or more districts, appropriated to each, together with the Judge of the District compose a Circuit Court, which is holden in each District of the Circuit. The District Courts are respectively by the District Judge alone. Appeals are allowed from the District to the Circuit Court, and from the Circuit to the Supreme Court; and in some cases, where the inconvenience of attending a Court by a Justice of the Supreme Court is very great, the District Courts are invested with Circuit Court powers. Each State is one District, for the purpose of holding District and Circuit Courts therein, with the exception of New York, Pennsylvania, Virginia, Tennessee, Louisiana, and Alabama, each of which is divided into two Districts. There are, besides, Territorial Courts, which are temporary, and lose that character whenever a Territory becomes a State. In addition to a District Court for the District of Columbia, there is a Circuit Court for that District, which exercises, under the authority of Congress, similar common law and equity jurisdiction as the County Courts of Maryland and Virginia. Each Court has a Clerk, a Public Attorney or Prosecutor, and a Marshal; all of whom are appointed by the Executive of the United States, with the exception of the Clerks, who are appointed by the Courts. The compensation of the Judges is fixed by law; that of the Clerks, Attorneys, and Marshals consists of fees, and in some instances, as it regards Attorneys and Marshals, of a yearly salary about 200 dollars. It is very difficult to ascertain the amount per annum of the fees received in each case, as the payment to them is frequently procrastinated, and in some cases they are entirely lost. The appointments are made by the President, by and with the advice and consent of the Senate.

By an act of Congress of the 15th of May, 1820, District Attorneys can be appointed for four years only, removable at pleasure. Marshals are always held their offices for four years, removable at pleasure, in pursuance of the 27th section of the Act of the 24th of September, 1789; so that the Marshals who have held their places from an earlier date, have been recommissioned many times. The Judges hold their offices during good behaviour, and can only be removed on impeachment.

THE SUPREME COURT OF THE UNITED STATES.

The Supreme Court of the United States has exclusive jurisdiction of all controversies of a civil nature, where a State is a party, except between a State and its citizens; and except, also, between a State and citizens of other States or aliens, in which latter case it has original, but not exclusive jurisdiction; and has exclusively all such jurisdiction of suits or proceedings against ambassadors, or other public ministers, or consuls, or domestics, or domestic servants, as a court of law can have or exercise consistently with the law of nations; and original, but not exclusive jurisdiction of all suits brought by ambassadors, or other public ministers, or in which a consul or vice consul shall be a party. The Supreme Court has also appellate jurisdiction from the Circuit Courts and Courts of the several States, in certain cases; and has power to issue writs of prohibition to the District Courts, when proceeding as courts of admiralty and maritime jurisdiction, and writs of mandamus, in cases warranted by the principles and usages of law, to any courts appointed, or persons holding office, under the authority of the United States.

A final judgment or decree in any suit, in the highest court of law or equity of a State in which a decision in the suit could be had, where drawn in question the validity of a treaty or statute of, or an authority exercised under the United States, and the decision is against their validity; or where is drawn in question the validity of a statute of, or authority exercised under any State, on the ground of their being repugnant to the constitution, treaties, or laws of the United States, and the decision is in favor of such their validity; or where is drawn in question the construction of any clause of the constitution, or of a treaty, statute of, or commission held under the United States, and the decision is against the title, right, privilege, or exemption, specially set up and claimed by either party, under such clause of the constitution, treaty, statute or commission; may be re-examined and reversed or affirmed, the Supreme Court of the United States, upon a writ of error, the certificate being signed by the chief justice, or judge, or chancellor, of the court rendering or passing the judgment or decree complained of, or by the justice of the Supreme Court of the United States, in the same manner and under the same regulations, and the writ has the same effect, as if the judgment or decree complained of had been rendered or passed in a Circuit Court; and the proceeding upon the revisal is also the same, except that the Supreme Court, instead of remanding the cause for a final decision, may, at their discretion, if the cause shall have been once remanded before, proceed to a final decision of the same, and award execution. But no other error can be assigned or regarded as a ground of reversal in any such case, than such as appears on the face of the record and immediately respects the beforementioned questions of validity or construction of the said constitution, treaties, statutes, commissions or authorities in dispute.

THE DISTRICT COURTS OF THE UNITED STATES.

The District Courts of the United States, have, exclusively of the Courts of the several States, cognizance of all crimes and offences that are cognizable under the authority of the United States, committed within their respective districts, or upon the high seas, where no other punishment than whipping, not exceeding thirty stripes, a fine not exceeding one hundred dollars, or a term of imprisonment not exceeding six months, is to be inflicted, and also have exclusive original cognizance of all civil causes of admiralty and maritime jurisdiction, including all seizures under laws of impost, navigation, or trade, of the United States, where the seizures are made on waters which are navigable from the sea by vessels of ten or more tons burthen, within their respective districts, as well as upon the high seas, saving to suitors, in all cases, the right of a common law remedy, where the common law is competent to give it; and also have exclusive original cognizance of all seizures on land or other waters than as aforesaid, made, and of all suits for penalties and forfeitures incurred, under the laws of the United States. And they also have cognizance, concurrent with the Courts of the several States, or the Circuit Courts, as the case may be, of all causes where an alien sues for a tort only in violation of the law of nations or a treaty of the United States. And also have cognizance, concurrent, as last mentioned, of all suits at common law, where the United States sue, and the matter in dispute amounts exclusive of costs, to the sum or value of one hundred dollars. And also have jurisdiction, exclusively of the Courts of the several States, of all suits against consuls or vice consuls, except for offences above the description aforesaid. The trial of issues in fact, in the District Courts, in all causes except civil causes of admiralty and maritime jurisdiction are by jury.

The act of 18th December, 1812, requires the district and territorial judges of the United States to reside within the districts and territories, respectively, for which they are appointed; and makes it unlawful for any judge appointed under the authority of the United States, to exercise the profession or employment of counsel or attorney, or to be engaged in the practice of the law. And any person offending against the injunction or prohibition of this act, shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor.

CIRCUIT COURTS OF THE UNITED STATES.

The Circuit Courts of the United States have original cognizance, concurrent with the Courts of the several States, of all suits of a civil nature, at common law, or in equity; where the matter in dispute exceeds, exclusive of costs, the sum or value of five hundred dollars, and the United States are plaintiffs or petitioners, or an alien is a party, or the suit is between a citizen of the State where the suit is brought, and a citizen of another State; and have exclusive cognizance of all crimes and offences cognizable under the authority of the United States, (except where the laws of the United States otherwise direct,) and concurrent jurisdiction with the District Courts of the crimes and offences cognizable therein. But no person can be arrested in one district, for trial in another, in any civil action, before a Circuit or District Court. No civil suit can be brought before either of said Courts against an inhabitant of the United States, by an original process, in any other District than that whereof he is an inhabitant, or in which he shall be found at the time of serving the writ; and no District or Circuit Court has cognizance of any suit to recover the contents of any promissory note, or other chose in action, in favor of an assignee, unless a suit might have been prosecuted in such court to recover the said contents if no assignment had been made, except in cases of foreign bills of exchange. The Circuit Courts also have appellate jurisdiction from the District Courts, under the regulations and restrictions provided by law.

From final decrees in a District Court, in causes of admiralty and maritime jurisdiction, where the matter in dispute exceeds the sum or value of three hundred dollars, exclusive of costs, an appeal is allowed to the next Circuit Court, to be held in such District. But no District Judge (sitting in a Circuit Court) can give a vote in any case of appeal or error, from his own decision; but may assign the reason of such his decision.

INTERCOURSE WITH FOREIGN NATIONS.

The pay of Ministers Plenipotentiary is 9000 dollars per annum salary besides 9000 dollars for an outfit. Secretaries of Legation receive 2000 dollars, and Chargé des Affaires, 4500 dollars per annum. To entitle any Chargé des Affaires, or Secretary of any Legation or Embassy to any foreign country, or Secretary of any Minister Plenipotentiary, to the above compensation, they must, respectively, be appointed by the President of the United States, by and with the advice and consent of the Senate; but in the recess of the Senate, the President is authorized to make such appointments, which must be submitted to the Senate at the next Session thereafter, for their advice and consent: and no compensation is allowed to any Chargé des Affaires, or any Secretary of Legation, Embassy, or Minister, who shall not be so appointed.

Consuls to Barbary are more of Diplomatic than Commercial Agents; not only as it regards their vocation, but also as it respects their compensation. They receive regular annual salaries; and their pay does not in the least depend on fees of any kind. And no Consul of the United States, residing on the Barbary coast, can own, in whole or in part, any ship or vessel, or be concerned, directly or indirectly, in the exportation from, or importation into, any of the states on the coast of Barbary, of any goods, wares or merchandise, under the penalty, upon conviction, for every offence, of a sum not exceeding one thousand dollars.

Consuls of the United States, generally so called, are, in effect, Agents for Commerce and Seamen; which latter denomination, for particular reasons, is given to some of this class of Public Officers. They receive no yearly salaries, (except at Paris and London, where they have an annual salary of $2000,) and their compensation is derived from the fees which are allowed by law. The amount of these fees depends, of course, upon the state of foreign trade, which is perpetually fluctuating. Consuls of the United States, for commercial purposes, are regularly admitted and recognised, as to their official functions, in the ports of Christian Europe; but in the colonies of the European nations agents for Commerce and Seamen mostly exercise the duties of their stations under courtesy, without any formal recognition, and, in some instances, from the jealousy of colonial policy, they have not been permitted to exercise them at all. In their public capacity, Consuls and Agents for Commerce and Seamen, are principally occupied in verifying, in different forms, the legality of the trade of the United States with foreign nations, and in relieving and sending home American Seamen, who by accident or misfortune, are left destitute within the jurisdiction of their several consulates or agencies.

THE PUBLIC LANDS.

The National Domain, or Public Lands of the United States, consist of large bodies of territories ceded by the States which, in virtue of the several charters, laid claim to the jurisdiction; of all the lands held by France under the name of Louisiana, which was purchased from the government, according to the treaty of cession of the 30th April, 1803, and of all the lands owned by the Spanish government, in the Florida which was ceded by Spain to the United States, by the treaty of amity, settlement, and limits, of Feb. 22, 1819. The usual process of sale of these lands, is, 1st. The extinguishment of the Indian title, which is effected by paying an equivalent in money and goods: 2d. The laying out of the territory to which the Indian title has been thus extinguished in land districts and the establishment of land offices therein. The duties of these land offices are discharged, in each instance, by a Register and a Receiver of public moneys.

The lands are surveyed before they are offered for sale. They are divided into townships six miles square, which are subdivided into thirty six sections one mile square, containing each 640 acres; and sold in sections, half sections, quarter sections, and half quarter sections.

Prior to the 1st of July, 1820, sales were made upon credit. But an act was passed on the 24th of April, 1820, which put an end to the system of credit. By that act, all sales after the 1st of July, 1820, are to be made for cash. Complete payment must be made on the day of purchase. Purchasers at private sale must produce a receipt for the money before entry; and the highest bidder at public sale failing to pay, the tract is to be again offered, and the failing bidder is rendered incapable of purchasing at such sales. By the same act the minimum price of lands is fixed at one dollar and twenty five cents per acre, below which they cannot be disposed of. Lands forfeited for non-payment must be ffered at public before private sale. In case of different applications at private sale, for the same tract, the highest bidder is to have preference.

Due notice is given by the commissioner of the General Land Office, of the times and places at which the sales of the public lands are to take place; and all patents for lands sold or granted by the United States are issued by that officer, upon certificates from the several land offices for military land warrants, in pursuance of various laws.

The different titles by which lands are held under the authority of the United States, are,

1. Public and private purchases.
2. Virginia military bounties, for services in the Virginia Line on continental establishment during the revolutionary war.
3. Grant to Connecticut of the Western Reserve.
4. Purchases under grant to John Cleves Symmes.
5. Purchases under grant to the Ohio Company of Associates.
6. Purchases under grant to the United Brethren.
7. Revolutionary military bounties.
8. Military bounties of the war of 1812.
9. Bounty to refugees from Canada and Nova-Scotia during the revolutionary war.
10. Bounty to Canadian volunteers in the war of 1812.
11. Confirmation of British, French, and Spanish grants, as adjusted by Boards of Commissioners appointed for the purpose.
12. Special grants, by particular acts of Congress.

The President of the United States may remove, by force, unauthorized settlers on the public lands.

Salt springs and lead mines are reserved from sale but may be released by the President; and one section of 640 acres, in each township, given as a fund for the perpetual support of schools in the township.

Warrants for Virginia military bounties issue from the Land Office of the State of Virginia, and are checked at the General Land Office of the United States, before the issuing of patents on them.

Warrants for military bounties, both for revolutionary services and services in the war of 1812, issue from the Department of War.

Those Warrants are in the nature of certificates, verifying the claim of the party to a patent for the specified number of acres. The location of the two latter classes of warrants is determined by lot.

THE CUSTOMS.

The principal officer employed in the collection of the duties on imports and tonnage, is the Collector, to whom the Naval Officer is at once an aid and a check. The Surveyor superintends and directs the inferior officers of the customs; and all three are appointed by the President and Senate. They formerly held their offices for an indefinite period; but by an act of the 15th May, 1820, their appointment is now limited to four years. Weighers, Gaugers, Measurers and Inspectors, are appointed by the Collector, with the approbation of the principal officer of the Treasury Department. For the duties of these several officers, see the act of Congress of the 24 of March, 1799. Public appraisers are authorized by an act of the 20th of April, 1818. Their business is to appraise imported goods subject to duty ad valorem, when they are suspected to have been invoiced below the true value. They are appointed by the President and Senate, and hold their commissions during the pleasure of the President. Assistant Appraisers are authorized by the act of 28th May, 1830.

LIGHT HOUSE ESTABLISHMENT.

The erection and support of Light Houses devolves on the government of the United States, as incidental to commerce. They are provided for by an annual and specific appropriation; and are placed under the direction and control of the Secretary of the Treasury; but the regulations which relate to them are more immediately attended to in the office of the Fifth Auditor. For every Light House, or Floating Light there is a Keeper, who receives a stated salary, per annum; each of the Superintendents have, generally, several Light Houses under their direction, and receive, as a compensation for their services, a commission of two and a half per cent. on the amount of their disbursements.

INDIAN TRADE AND INDIAN AFFAIRS.

The Act of the 7th of August, 1769, enjoins on the Secretary of War to execute such duties relative to Indian Affairs as may be confided to him; and, under this authority, he superintends the negotiation of Indian Treaties, and other matters connected with Indian Agencies and Trade, which from the necessary association between the subjection and civilization of the aborigines, within the territorial limits of the United States, intermingle themselves with the Military Establishment

The Act of March 2d, 1811, regulating the trade with Indian Tribes being limited in its duration, to the 3d of June, 1822, and not renewed at the first session of the seventeenth Congress, of course expired. At that session, however, another law, bearing date, May 6th, 1822, was passed which made an entire change in the system. By that law the President was required to cause the Indian trading houses to be closed, and the accounts to be settled.

By another law of the same date, private traders with the Indians are permitted. They receive licences for seven years to trade with remote Indians, and two years with others. Citizens only can obtain licences. The President may cause the stores and packages of goods of the traders to be searched, for ardent spirits, &c. and if any ardent spirits are found, the goods are forfeited. This act also authorizes the President to appoint a Superintendent of Indian Affairs, to reside at St. Louis, with a salary of fifteen hundred dollars per annum; and an Agent for the Tribes in East and West Florida, also with an annual salary of fifteen hundred dollars.

THE ARMY, 1831.

[See Report of the Secretary of War, Appendix, p. 8*]

Extract from the Report of the Commanding General, November 1831.

During the year the post of Chicago has been evacuated, and the garrison, consisting of two companies of the 5th regiment of Infantry, removed to Fort Howard, Green Bay, relieving the four companies of the same regiment stationed at the latter post. The four companies of the 5th regiment thus relieved, were marched to Fort Winnebago, at the portage of the Fox and Wisconsin rivers, and the garrison of that post ordered to the Head Quarters of the 1st regiment of Infantry at the Prairie du Chien. This arrangement, while it strengthened the line between Green Bay and the Mississippi, along which the Indians had evinced among themselves a restless and quarrelsome disposition, it was also expected would have the effect of preventing them from proceeding to open hostilities, which were seriously threatened.

Pursuant to instructions from the War Department, the whole of the 7th regiment of Infantry has been concentrated at Cantonment Gibson on the Arkansas, and the 3d regiment of Infantry has been ordered to occupy the posts on the Red river. A new post has been established on the latter river, near the mouth of the Kiamichie, and garrisoned by four companies of the 3d regiment of Infantry.

The positions of the 3d and 7th regiments are favorable to the affording of facilities to the Indians emigrating, under the provisions of the acts of Congress, to the country marked out for them, west of the boundary of the territory of Arkansas, and at the same time to the protection of them in their new abodes from the attacks of unfriendly tribes, and those wild hordes with whom they are, as yet, unacquainted. The troops there stationed will, also, by their presence and force, exert a beneficial influence over the conduct of the various tribes, and be instrumental in maintaining harmony and peace among them.

In the month of June, a communication was received from the commanding General of the Western Department, dated the 30th of May, stating that the Sac Indians, settled near Rock Island, on the Illinois side of the Mississippi river, who had, for some years past, been extremely restless and insubordinate, had recently become disorderly, and that he had learned from the Governor of the State of Illinois that they had assumed the attitude of open hostility, and, as the Governor conceived, had actually invaded the State; that the Governor had ordered seven hundred mounted militia to be in readiness to march against those Indians; that a conference was had with the Governor, which resulted in an understanding that the Commanding General of the Department should make an effort to repel the supposed invasion, and to remove the offenders to the right bank of the Mississippi, their proper residence; but that, in the mean time, the mounted men were not to be called out, unless the General should find that the hostile band, sustained by any considerable number of the neighbouring Indians, might render it necessary for him to avail himself of the assistance and co-operation offered by the Governor of Illinois.

The General, immediately after, as appears by subsequent report, ordered six companies of Infantry from Jefferson barracks, with the two six-pounders, with a supply of muskets and rifles, and a suitable portion of ammunition, to embark on board a steam-boat, and proceeded with them to Rock Island, at which place they arrived early in June; and, on the 4th of that month, he held a conference with the chiefs and warriors of the Sacs, who disavowed any intention of hostility, but expressed a determination to remain on the Rock river lands. The General notified them that he would not permit them so to remain, and that they must move off as soon as practicable, as they held no right to the lands in question, having sold them to the United States.

The General states that he was informed that the Sacs had invited the friends, the Prophet's band of Winnebagoes, with some Potawatomies and Kickapoos, to join them, but that they were not so disposed; notwithstanding, conceiving it to be the safest course to be prepared against any emergency, he thought it most prudent to call for additional troops from Prairie du Chien, and for the Illinois mounted men. The Sacs having failed to obtain the assistance of the Winnebagoes and Potawatomies, and having been abandoned by many of the friends of one of their principal chiefs, determined to listen to the advice of the Commanding General, and entered in an agreement with him to abandon their position in Illinois, and to re-cross the Mississippi, after which the General discharged the volunteers of Illinois and ordered the regular troops to their respective stations.

Representations were made to the Department of War, by the authorities of Louisiana, that a disposition was manifested by the people of color in the State to revolt, and that the presence of a military force in New Orleans was, in their opinion, necessary to insure order and to allay the apprehensions of the inhabitants. The commanding officer of the troops at Baton Rouge was instructed to proceed to the city of New Orleans and confer with the Governor of the State, and the authorities of the city, in reference to the subject, and to adopt such measures as would be proper and satisfactory. Orders were given to the troops at the contiguous posts to be held in readiness in case of necessity, and two companies of Infantry were stationed in the city with an extra quantity of arms.

In the month of August, a partial but sudden insurrection of the negroes in the county of South Hampton, Va. took place, the intelligence of which being communicated by the Mayor of Norfolk to the commandant of fortress Monroe, a detachment of that garrison, consisting of three companies of artillery, under a field officer, was forthwith ordered to the seat of the disturbances, where they arrived in the course of twenty-four hours, a distance of sixty miles. The insurrection having been quelled, the detachment returned to its quarters at fortress Monroe.

On the application of the authorities of Newbern, in North Carolina, under the excitement which prevailed after the late disturbances in South Hampton, a company was detailed from fortress Monroe to guard that city and its vicinity, and to quiet the apprehensions of the citizens of that quarter generally. The necessity of their remaining any longer at that position having ceased, the company was ordered to Bellona arsenal where it relieved the company of the 1st regiment of artillery, which had been long stationed there. The relieved company was ordered to fortress Monroe.

During the excitement which prevailed, in consequence of the disorderly conduct evinced by the colored population in the States of Delaware, Maryland, Virginia and North Carolina, the garrison of fortress Monroe was augmented by five companies, drawn from the northern posts on the seaboard, with a view of having at hand a disposable force, to afford protection to such parts of the country as might require it—that fortress being so situated as to possess all the requisite facilities for promptly entering into any part of the country, where there was any probability that the presence of a military force might be necessary. The concentration of so large a portion of the artillery at fortress Monroe afforded, at the same time, the advantage of practising their appropriate duties on an enlarged scale, that post being the established school of artillery.

During the year, the troops have been inspected by the Inspectors General. The reports, as far as they have been received, represent the troops in an improving condition. It could not be expected that they could arrive at any great proficiency in general tactics in their present dispersed state, as scarcely a complete regiment has been together during the year; still the elements of instruction are not neglected, and a concentration of any considerable portion of the army would readily bring into practice an harmonious combination of movements, according to the established system of tactics.

The appearance of the troops under arms is creditable ; they are well dressed, armed and accoured ; neat in their persons, clean and comfortable in their quarters, and well supplied with every thing allowed them by the Government. Notwithstanding these favorable appearances, it is with regret that I have to report the continuance of desertion from the rank and file to an unusual extent. This evil can only be attributed to the great prosperity which pervades every class of our citizens. Although the soldier is well paid, fed, clothed, quartered, and treated with kindness by his officers, yet the apparent small amount paid to him in money, as allowed by law, does not offer sufficient inducement to the steady and active citizen to engage in the service in time of peace ; but the unsteady and idle, and frequently the profligate, are willing, for the sake of the bounty in hand, to enlist with a view of remaining until the first payment, and then desert, perhaps to practice again the same fraud on the Government ; and this they are induced to do, from their knowledge of the fact, that no adequate punishment awaits the crime of desertion in time of peace.

The only preventive to desertion that strikes me at this time, is to offer, apparently, a larger sum a month for the service of a soldier ; that is, instead of five dollars in money, and the clothing, rations, and other allowances which are made in hand, and which amount in all to about fifteen dollars a month, it would be better to make the pay of the soldier fifteen dollars in money a month, and supply him at the contract prices with clothing, rations, &c., and to deduct the cost of the articles so supplied out of the fifteen dollars ; besides to retain in hand a certain portion of his pay, say one half, until the termination of his enlistment, when his accounts should be finally closed, and the difference paid him. By this arrangement, it is to be expected that none but good and faithful men will enter the service, such as may intend to fulfil their engagements. The money in hand will be a guarantee to that effect, and will secure the Government against loss, in case of destruction of arms or other property entrusted to the soldier ; and moreover, the fines which may be imposed by the sentences of courts martial for derelictions of duty will, according to our mild system of discipline, be probably the best mode of inflicting punishment. Independently of these advantages, by interesting the soldier in the careful use and proper application of the articles supplied him by the Government, for which he knows he is to pay in cash, or otherwise to suffer a deduction from his pay to the amount of their value, it will induce to economy on his part, and, at the same time, interest him in the service ; for a soldier cannot be expected, under the present system, where he is supplied by the Government with a regulated allowance, whether he require it or not, to possess the same inducements to economise. The bounty which is now offered to a recruit on his enlistment, and which probably has been the sole object of the worthiness to grasp, might, with advantage, be deferred until the close of the period of his enlistment, when its payment will operate as a reward for faithful services.

In connection with this subject, and with a view to the improvement of the condition of the non-commissioned officers, on whose exertions the discipline and well-being of the rank and file in a great measure depend, I would urge, as a matter of great importance, an augmentation of the pay of the sergeants and corporals, and a distinction, as regards pay, in favor of the 1st sergeants of the companies, on whom the details of duty devolve, and whose responsibility is greater than that of the other non-commissioned officers.

The order abolishing the whiskey ration has been in operation since December last, and has, in a degree, fulfilled the favorable anticipations which were indulged in relation to its results. It now only remains in order to accomplish what has been so much desired in reference to the health and moral condition of the army to prohibit entirely the sale of ardent spirits to the troops.

The various movements made by the troops during the present year have tested, to a certain extent, the state of their discipline as well as their capacity for active service, and at the same time have afforded to the several staff departments a practical application of their respective functions. The promptitude and regularity observed in the execution of their instructions have furnished, both on the part of the line and the staff, satisfactory evidences of their efficiency.

Operations of the Engineer Department during the past year.

I. FORTIFICATIONS.

1. Fort Adams, Newport, R. I.—The operations on this fort have been continued in an active and efficient manner. 2. Fort Hamilton, Narrows, N. Y.—This fort has been completed. 3. Fort Lafayette, Narrows, N. Y., has been thoroughly repaired. 4. Governor's Island, N. Y.—In consequence of the arrangements necessary for removing the garrison nothing has been done in repairing the fortifications on this island. 5. Fort Monroe, Hampton Roads, Va.—The operations on this work have been directed to the formations of the ramparts, the excavation of the ditch and embankment of the glacis; the construction of a counterscarp wall, &c. 6. Fort Calhoun, Hampton Roads, Va.—When the walls and piers of this fort had been carried up to the level of the second battery, it was found that the additional weight caused a subsidence of the foundations, which made it prudent to suspend the construction of the masonry, and confine the operations of the past year to the reception of materials, which have been so distributed as to equalize the pressure of the bottom as much as possible, and produce a uniform settling; as this still continues, it is judged best to pursue the same course next year, and to continue it until a weight of materials equal to that which the foundations must finally bear, shall have been accumulated on them, after which the construction may with safety be completed. 7. Fort Macon, Beaufort, N. C.—The operations on this work have been satisfactorily continued, and there is every reason to expect that they will be completed in 1832. 8. Fort at Oak Island, Cape Fear river, N. C.—This fort will also be completed in 1832. 9. Fortifications at Charleston, S. C.—Only 7,000 tons of stone have been added to the foundations of the fort projected to occupy a shoal opposite to fort Moultrie. Castle Pinckney, near the city of Charleston has been thoroughly repaired, and is ready to receive a garrison. 10. Fortifications at Savannah, Georgia.—But little progress has been made in 1831, in the construction of the fort on Cockspar Island, the operations having been, as yet, confined to making the preliminary arrangements, and excavating for the foundations. 11. Fortifications at Pensacola, Florida.—So great a progress has been effected in the construction of the fort on Santa Rosa Island, that it may be completed in 1832. 12. Fort at Mobile Point, Ala.—Satisfactory progress has been made towards the completion of this fort, which will likewise be accomplished in 1832; should means be afforded. 13. Fort Jackson, Plaquemine Bend, Lou., has been completed, and is occupied by a garrison. The wall and embankment designed to preserve the Peapatch Island (the site of fort Delaware) have been completed.

In 1831, the wood work about fort Delaware was consumed by fire, and very extensive injury thereby caused to the other parts of the work. An inspection has been made by a board of officers of the corps of engineers, whose report recommends rebuilding the whole work.

II INTERNAL IMPROVEMENTS.

1. La Plaisance Bay, Michigan.—The piers for protecting this bay were completed in 1829, but those built by contract in 1828, and not faithfully executed, have been so much injured by a storm about the 4th of October, 1831, as to require repairs. 2. Huron river, Ohio.—The extension of the eastern pier has been effected, and a sufficient depth of water thereby ensured. 3. Black river, Ohio.—The construction of 100 yards of pier work will complete the proposed plan for improving the channel of entrance into this river, which has already a depth of 8 feet. 4. Cleveland harbor, Ohio.—The effect of the works for improving the entrance of Cuyahoga river, has been in the highest degree satisfactory, the channel having a depth of not less than 10 feet. 5. Grand River, Ohio.—All that remains to be done at the piers at the mouth of this river, is to raise a part of one of them which has settled.

6. Cunningham creek, O—Nothing has been done to the pier at this point during the past year. 7. Ashtabula creek, O.—The piers at this place have been completed. 8. Conneaut creek Ohio—The depth of water at the mouth of this creek has continued to increase with the extension of the piers, and is now 8 feet. 9. Presque Isle, Pa.—The funds appropriated at the last session of Congress have been well applied to the repairs of the piers at the entrance of this harbor. 10. Dunkirk harbor N. Y.—A new pier for the protection of this harbor has been commenced, and extended 280 yards. 11. Buffalo, N. Y.—The funds available for the works at this harbor have been applied to the extension and security of the southern pier, and to the construction of a foundation for a light-house at its extremity. 12. Black Rock, N. Y.—No appropriation having been made for continuing the works in this harbor, nothing has been done to them. The above mentioned works are all on Lake Erie. 13. Genessee river, N. Y.—Very satisfactory progress has been made, during the past year, in the execution of the plan adopted for improving the entrance into this river. About 150 yards have been added to the piers, which now extend to the distance of 403 yards from the shore, being about three-fifths of the proposed extent. 14. Big Sodus bay N. Y.—The piers designed to form a safe harbor at this point, have been extended about 400 yards, the eastern pier being now 656 yards long, and the western, 620 yards. 15. Oswego, N. Y.—The piers for protecting this harbor have been completed. A pier head, and mole of stone for their security, have also been constructed. 16. Kennebec river, at Lovejoy's Narrows, Me.—A very considerable rise of water in this river has prevented the contractor from fulfilling his engagement to remove the obstructions to its navigation during the past season. 17. Piers at the mouth of Kennebec river, Me.—The new piers at this place have had the desired effect of protecting the channel of entrance into the river. 18. Berwick branch of Piscataqua river Me—The death of the agent caused a suspension of the operations; little remains to be done for completing the work. 19. Merrimack river, Mass.—The pier constructed for the purpose of deepening the channel at the mouth of this river has been repaired and strengthened. 20. Deer Island, Boston harbor, Mass.—Owing to the very exposed situation of this island, which forms the outer barrier to the harbor of Boston, great difficulty has been experienced in constructing a wall sufficiently strong to protect it from the effect of storms; and the operations of the past year have been chiefly confined to the repair of injuries sustained the previous winter, and much remains yet to be done to secure the proposed object. 21. Plymouth beach, Mass.—The fascine work, and the planting of grass for the preservation of this beach, have been in constant progress, as dictated by the circumstances of the case. 22. Provincetown harbor, Mass.—The agents to whom the operations for preserving this harbor were confided, have continued to give great satisfaction by their activity and attention. 23. Hyannis harbor, Mass.—There has been added to the breakwater designed to protect this harbor about 9 000 tons of stone; and the length of the mole is now 552 feet. 24. Nantucket harbor, Mass.—With such interruptions as are unavoidable for repairing machinery, and on account of the weather, the dredging machine has been kept in operation during the season, and the prospect of a permanent improvement continues to be flattering. 25. Stonington harbor, Conn.—The work on the breakwater for the protection of this harbor has been completed. 26. Mill river, Conn.—The work for improving this harbor has been completed. 27. Harbors of New Castle, Marcus Hook, Chester, and Port Penn, Delaware river.—The operations for improving these harbors have been confined, during the past year, to working a dredging machine for deepening them. 28. Ocracoke Inlet, N. C.—The dredging machinery designed to improve the channel of this inlet has been applied to that object, on the part called the Flounderslue, during all the favorable weather since the beginning of August, 1830, and about 10,600 cubic yards have been excavated. Cape Fear river, N. C.—The operations or improving the navigation of this river, below the town of Wilmington, have been confined, during the past year, to the repair of injuries sustained by the jettées, from the effects of a gale last August; and to the working of a dredging machine, which has been employed with success in deepening the channel on the Bulk head shoal. 30. St. Mark's river and harbor Florida—The removal of the logs and trees from the channel and shores of this river, has been continued, though at some disadvantage, from the prevalence of sickness among the laborers. 31. Apalachicola river, Florida.—An experiment made to improve the navigation of this river, by cutting off the points proving some of the most difficult bends, with the expectation that the water could thus find a new and more direct channel, was not successful; further operations will be confined to the removal of obstructions, formed by trees and drift wood, from the present bed of the river. 32. Harbor of Mobile, Ala.—The engagements of the contractor, for deepening the channel through Choctaw pass, in this harbor, have not been complied with. 33. Pass au Meron, Ala.—The operations for deepening this pass have been entirely suspended. 34. Pascagoula river, Miss.—The work at this point has likewise been suspended. 25. Red river, La. On this river also, the work in progress for improving its navigation, about the Great Raft, has been suspended. Previously to the suspension of operations, the improvement of about 50 miles in extent had been effected. 36. Mississippi and Ohio rivers—From the 1st of October, 1830, to the 9th of March, 1831, the steamboat Helepolis removed from the channel of the Mississippi river 1,334 snags or trees, taken from the whole line of the river between Island No. 10, sixty miles below the mouth of the Ohio river, and the mouth of bayou Plaquemine, twenty-nine miles below Baton Rouge, a distance of 330 miles. During the same time, that boat cut a channel through a neck of land near the mouth of Red river, through which the whole channel of the Mississippi river was turned, shortening the distance to the navigators of the Mississippi river, 13 miles; and to those navigating the Red and Mississippi rivers, between the Red river settlements and New Orleans the distance has been shortened six miles. In October, November, and December, 1830, the timber was cut from off the falling in banks of the Mississippi river, a distance of about 538 miles, at the same time all the timber was cut from under the banks and out of the island chutes for the same distance. The steamboat Helepolis was repaired in April and May last, left New Albany, Indiana, on the 3th June, and commenced operations in the Mississippi river, between the Ohio and Missouri rivers, where she continued until the water was too low for her to work in that part of the river to advantage; she then commenced work below the Ohio. Up to the 30th of September last, she has removed from the main channel of the Mississippi river 727 snags, making, together, 2,061 snags removed this year by the steamboat Helepolis. On the 10th of September last, the new steamboat Archimedes commenced work at the mouth of the Ohio, and worked up the Mississippi river. From that time to the 30th of September, she has removed from the lower channels of that river 204 snags, added to those removed by the steamboat Helepolis, making an aggregate of 2,265 snags removed this year from the bed of the Mississippi river. 37. Cumberland road, Ohio.—The progress made in the construction of this road, has not been satisfactory, the operations having been confined to those parts previously contracted for, viz. 26 miles west of Zanesville, and 14 miles west of Columbus. 38. Cumberland road, Indiana—For grading and bridging 10 additional miles east of Indianapolis, and 12 miles west, contracts are to be completed by the 1st of next July. Cumberland road in Illinois, east of Vandalia.—The contracts for opening and grubbing the road between Vandalia, and the east boundary of the State, have been completed, and new ones entered into for the construction of 16 of the principal bridges, 110 culverts, and some parts of the grading, which work is to be finished by the 1st of June next. 40. Road from Detroit to Chicago,

Michigan.—The work contracted for last year, to complete this road as far as the 87th mile from Detroit, has, with some small exceptions, been accomplished; and contracts have been made for the construction of 18 1-4 additional miles, to be finished by the beginning of next May. 41. Road from Detroit to Saganaw, Michigan.—The contracts made for this road, provided for its continuation to the distance of 47 1-4 miles from Detroit; of which 2 miles are completed, and the remainder in fair progress. 42. Road from Detroit to fort Gratiot.—This road has been completed about the same distance as the preceding, viz. 26 miles from Detroit, and contracts made for its continuation as far as the 1st quarter of the 39th mile.

R P Desilver, Clerk's office, Delaware Breakwater,	Philadelphia	45 00	per month

The compensation allowed to the persons employed in connection with the Delaware Breakwater, with the exception of the Engineer and office Clerk, ceases during the winter season—or say from November to April.

Of the works under the direction of the Quarier Master's Department, the road from Alagua to Marianna, in Florida, has been completed as far as the appropriation would permit. The amount appropriated for repairs on the road from Jacksonville to Alachua court-house, in Florida, has been applied to that object as far as it would go; but it was found altogether inadequate to the completion of the work. The road authorized from Washington to Jackson, in Arkansas Territory, has been put under contract, and will be completed early in 1832. There was reason to believe that the military road in the State of Maine, would have been finished in 1831; but the unusual wetness of the season so retarded the operations of the contractors, as to prevent the completion of this work. The barracks authorized at Fortress Monroe and Fort Gratiot, have been completed during the year 1831. Those at Fort Crawford and Fort Winnebago have been advanced as far as the available means would permit. The barracks authorized at Green Bay and Key West are in progress.

Operations were resumed at the Delaware Breakwater early in April, 1831, and on the 30th of September, 81,791 perches of stone had been deposited, which, added to 135,079 perches, deposited in the years 1829 and '30, makes the quantity deposited to that date, 216,870, perches.

The work was estimated by the Commissioners who located it, to cost 2,216,950 dollars.

The appropriations made, to March 2, 1831, amount to - $620,000 00

Of which there has been expended - - - 524,519 26

Leaving a balance, September 30, 1831, of - - - $95,480 74

Operations have been confined, during the whole of the season, to that branch of the work called the Breakwater, in contradistinction of the Ice-breaker; from its western extremity, for a distance of more than two hundred feet, it has been raised nearly to its destined height. For more than six hundred feet in addition, this branch of the work has been raised above the plane of low water, and stone has been deposited on a base extending—feet further. So far as the experience of the two last seasons can be relied on as a test of the stability of the work, there is abundant reason for believing that it will have sufficient strength to resist the action of the ocean, even when agitated by the severest tempests; and its advantages as a harbor may be inferred from the shelter it has already afforded during storms to vessels employed in transporting stone, as well as those engaged in commerce. Instances have occurred of vessels, after parting their cables, at their usual anchoring ground, having been moored behind the Breakwater, where they remained in perfect security during the most violent gales.

DRY DOCKS.

Statement showing the progress which has been made in executing the law for the gradual improvement of the Navy, passed 3d March, 1827, including the condition of the Dry Docks.

The progress of the work on the dock at Boston, during the past year, has been satisfactory, and has not been interrupted by the effect of tides or accidents which impeded the operations during the winter of 1830.

It was necessary to open a communication from the dock to the great wells, by a tunnel at such a depth as to allow the water to flow from the dock chamber to the great pumps; it was concluded best to form this passage in the usual way of tunnelling, without opening the ground from the top, and it was begun in this manner; but the flowing sands, saturated with copious springs at this depth, occasioned so much difficulty, and embarrassed the workmen to such a degree, that it was indispensable to open an excavation from the surface. This of course increased the expense, and caused delay last winter; the work, however, was successfully and well accomplished during the summer.

There has been expended, for the year ending 31st October, on this dock, for materials,	$64,772 01
Labor	59,664 04
Making	$124,236 05

Which, added to the amount paid for labor and materials upon the different branches of expenditure, from its commencement, in June, 1827, to 31st October, 1831, for materials,	$236,617 23½
Labor,	269,692 91½

Making the total expenditure of	$506,340 15
---------------------------------	--------------

In the item of labor is included all the work and services of every kind performed on the dock, or on business connected with it, except the salary of the engineer.

From the great difficulty of procuring timber of the required form and size for the turning gates, the engineer was compelled to resort to a mode of procuring the gate ribs or rails out of planks, not having been able to procure the solid timber: large, straight timber was sawed into plank 18 inches wide and 7 thick: they were steamed and bent over a mould formed to the required curve. Three planks, bent successively one over the other, and well bolted with copper bolts, formed a rib 21 inches thick, and 18 deep. After cooling and being bolted, they were taken from the mould, and it was found that they preserved their curvature remarkably well: thus rails were obtained, made of what was known to be sound timber, which might not be the case if solid timber were used, though at more expense. There are only two or three of the top and bottom rails to prepare, for which good solid timber is expected from Norfolk.

The masonry of the dock may be considered as completed; the beautiful line of coping, three feet wide and fifteen inches thick, is all laid ere this. The top of the rubble wall, behind the coping, remains uncovered: it is proposed to cover this with a course of hammered stones, level with the coping, which seems to be indispensable to protect the backing rubble work from the effects of frost.

The great wells for the pumps are completed, and ready to receive the pumps, the placing of which, and the erection of the great steam engine, will be begun as soon as the engine house is covered, and with the windows in; the stone cornice is all laid, the roof frame partly on, and in two or three weeks the building will be slated.

The jetty walls are to extend from the wing walls of the dock towards the sea, as far as they can be carried with safety to the coffer dam; they will be parallel with, and fifty feet from the axis of the dock on each side, and from the top of which a flight of stone stairs will descend to about low water mark.

These jetty walls are intended as a defence against the washing in of mud or other obstructions to the dock entrance. It was not considered prudent to commence these walls this fall, because the excavation requisite for a good foundation would endanger the coffer dam: it was thought best to leave it till the spring, when the work will be in a situation not to suffer as much, should any accident occur.

The turning gates have been commenced, and will be framed during the winter; and preparations are made for completing and hanging them in the spring.

The drain to discharge the water from the great pumps is about half done, and the sewer on one side of the dock is commenced; these will be prosecuted as fast as the weather and the new filling up of earth will permit. All the earth banking round the dock is brought up as high as required to receive the gravel and paving, which is to extend thirty feet wide round the dock, and this will be begun as early next spring as the season will allow. The dock may be used as soon as the turning gates are finished and in their place. The amount yet to be expended to complete the dock will probably be about $75,000, of which about 14,000 will be paid under existing contracts.

It would seem almost impossible from past experience, to designate the time when the work will be completed; the able engineer, however, to whom its construction has been confided, has no doubt that a ship may be docked for repairs the ensuing summer.

Nearly all the stones required for the masonry of the dock at Norfolk are on hand, the recent supplies having been very great. An increased number of hammerers are also expected from the north, so that it is hoped that the masonry of the dock can be put into a nearly finished state in the course of the winter, should the season be favorable for such work. The sinking of the great wells, and constructing the tunnel, about 165 feet long, from the dock to the wells, were attended with great difficulty. The upper part of the excavation to 12 or 15 feet depth, was in a loose quicksand full of springs; and notwithstanding a strong curbing was used, and great caution exercised, large quantities of this almost fluid mass run in under the curbing, and repeatedly filled in at night what had been dug out during the day; the consequence of this was, that round the curbing on the outside a hollow space was created, increasing the labor of digging, and embarrassing all the operations in and about the wells. After working to within a few feet of the necessary depths, the great spring which underlies this whole district at a depth of 50 to 70 feet, broke up and increased the difficulties. To furnish a drain for the water to the great pumps for draining the dock, the driving the tunnel was hastened, and, a passage being thus effected, the water was discharged so as to render the completion of this part of the work comparatively easy. Much unexpected trouble attended the bricking the tunnel; it was, however, successfully though slowly prosecuted, and is now completed. This part of the work appears to be well and substantially executed, and does credit to the workmen employed upon it.

Notwithstanding all the embarrassments which have been encountered, it will be seen that a vast quantity of business has been effected, and that all the heavy, difficult, and troublesome parts have been accomplished, such as the great wells, the tunnel, the foundation and first story of the engine house; and that the wing and jetty walls, at the entrance of the dock, are nearly done also. All the round oak pieces for the turning gates except two or three pieces, have been procured; the ribs have been dressed and piled up, ready for framing, which will be commenced as soon as the masonry is so far advanced as that the gates can be placed when finished.

The amount expended during the year is, for materials,	-	$112,143 73
		$216,538 01

Which, added to the sums disbursed on this work, since its commencement, in December, 1827, up to October, 1831, will make the sum of		$587,252 07
Of which were expended for materials,	-	284,709 70
		$587 252 07

There is yet due, under existing contracts, $79,229 31, which, with $100,000 additional for labor and materials, making $179,229 31, will complete the dock, which there can be no doubt will be effected during the year 1832. Notwithstanding the unfavorable circumstances which have attended the operations at this dock, the progress, during the year has been satisfactory.

Under this law contracts were made for live oak frame, and promiscuous timber required for 5 ships of the line, 5 frigates, and 5 sloops of war, which it was contemplated to build at the following yards:

VESSELS IN ORDINARY.

State and condition of the vessels of war, belonging to the United States, in ordinary, December 1, 1831; the station at which each is placed, with the cost of repairing and equipping, exclusive of articles belonging to the several vessels, and the materials which have been provided for repairs

BOSTON.—Columbus, ship of the line.—The hull of this ship, sound and in good order, will require to have part of two streaks of wales put on, rudder to finish, masts to be wedged, anchors and stocks to be made, to be caulked throughout, and to be new coppered. ship, bottom plank, gun deck, ceiling between decks, and spar deck, knees and beams, are sound; the outboard plank from light water mark to rail ceiling in hold, orlop and birth decks, magazine platforms, plank on spar deck, &c. &c., are deficient, and require to be new; the head, knight heads, and stem require repairs; the ship requires caulking throughout, and to be new coppered. Cost of materials and labor required, $97,993 10. Peacock, sloop of war.—This vessel has had her spars and rigging altered and repaired; her hull is considered sound and has been caulked, her sails are nearly all made or repaired, her masts rigged, and yards across, her hold thoroughly cleansed and whitewashed, water filled, salt provisions, and wood stowed; some of her sea stores, (not perishable) are provided; she requires her other articles of provisions and sea stores, some running rigging yet to be furnished, and some of her sails to be finished, and hull painted; she could be made ready for sea in ten days. The ships are covered with tight roofs and side hurdles, with their guns and ballast on board, and due attention paid to ventilating, pumping, cleaning, &c. &c.

NEW YORK—Ohio, ship of the line.—Launched in May, 1820, but has never been masted or fitted for sea; her outside plank, from water line to rail, is believed to be decayed, and will require to be replaced, as will also a part of the ceiling, clamps, and waist, on the upper and lower gun decks; her frame, upper and lower gun decks, beams, and knees, are sound, and in good condition; all her bulk heads have been removed to admit a free circulation of air; a tight roof was placed over this ship last winter; she has on board about 700 tons iron ballast; there have been no materials procured for the repairs and equipment of this ship, except guns, shot, anchors, two chain cables, a set of iron tanks, ballast, and canvass, for sails. Cost, $171,072 69. Washington, ship of the line.—Built and launched in 1814, and has made but one cruise, and has been in ordinary since August, 1818: that part of her frame which is live oak is sound; her beams, knees, deck frames, and two-thirds of her gun decks, are sound and good, as well as her bottom plank below the water lines; this ship is without a covering, and is deficient in the decayed state of her upper works; all her bulk heads, state rooms, have been taken down; she is well ventilated, and is daily visited by an officer; she has on board 250 tons of ballast, but no materials have been provided for her repair and equipment. Cost, $186,034 94. Franklin, ship of the line.—Built and launched in 1815, and has made two cruises, one in the Mediterranean, and one to the Pacific; she is in about the same condition as the Washington, and would require the same repairs; she is at present used as a receiving ship, is well ventilated, and well taken care off; she is also without a covering, and does not require one while she is used as a receiving ship; no materials have been provided for the repair and equipment of this ship. Cost, $192,185 16. Hudson, frigate of the first class.—Purchased by the Government in 1826; her frame is of white oak; she is built of green materials, has made one cruise on the coast of Brazil; her upper works are partially decayed; although her state is not positively known, she is believed to be pretty generally sound below her gun deck, and would make a good receiving vessel, although not considered worth repairing. United States, frigate of the first class.—Built and launched in 1797, and has been much employed at sea; she is now undergoing a thorough repair, and will be, when finished, as good as a new ship; sufficient materials are on hand to complete her repairs, and for a part of her outfits.

PHILADELPHIA.—The Cyane is the only vessel in ordinary at this yard; she requires to be rebuilt, which will cost $71,103 61.

NORFOLK—Delaware, ship of the line.—Some of the beams, deck plank, clamps, waterways, and spicketting on all the decks, are defective in spots; defects are also discovered in the ceiling, &c. Before the condition of the bottom can be ascertained, the ship must be hove down or docked; the ship is under cover; it would require sixty days to effect her repairs, which will cost $103,892. North Carolina, ship of the line—A few beams on the spar and orlop decks are decayed, and ail on the decks the clamps, waterway and sperkettig are partially decayed; outside the ship the waies and channels are generally decayed; she will require new main and mizen channels; it will require four months to complete her repairs, which, exclusive of stores, will amount $149,083. This ship is also under cover Congress frigate of the second class.—Requires a thorough repair, which will take nearly one year to complete, at an expense of $148,247.

The Java and Macedonian, frigates, require to be rebuilt; the frame of the latter has already been procured; it will, however, require, to rebuild and equip her, the sum of $207,984.

The frigate Constellation arrived since this report was commenced; her state and condition are such that she could be sent to sea in three weeks; her hull requires little more than caulking to be done to it, and her stores are nearly all complete; only some additional sails and rigging are required to fit her for a cruise of two years.

LIVE OAK

Abstract of instructions to the Agents appointed to superintend the preservation of the live oak belonging to the United States.

The agents are required, in the first place, to procure from the Survey General of the Land Office copies of the surveys of the lands within the respective districts, and within twenty miles of the sea coast, or fifteen miles of the sounds, bays, or creeks of salt water, on which live oak is known to be produced; to obtain from the Register of the Land Office lists of the lands already sold, and which are not to be further noticed, unless so abundant with navy timber as to make it desirable it should belong to the United States; in this case, the fact is to be reported to the Navy Department.

In cases where copies of the surveys cannot be furnished by the Survey General, the agents are authorized to employ a person to make the necessary copies to examine the lands belonging to the United States, and, if bodies of valuable navy timber are discovered on any part of them, to report the same to the Register, that he may withhold the lands from sale until the President of the United States can be informed of the fact, and reserve them if he deems it expedient for the use of the United States' Navy; to note minutely the soil of such tracts, their locality, with respect to the towns, bay, rivers, or creeks within their vicinity, and the facilities or difficulties of making roads, or boating the timber to landings from whence it may be taken to market; if such tracts belong to individuals, to note the same, &c., and report, in detail, to the Department, at least once in three months, and to the Register monthly, a list of all such tracts, &c.

The agents are further required to advertise their appointments in the respective districts, and to publish the provisions of the acts of Congress under which they perform their duties; to keep a steady watch on the sections of United States' land known to contain timber suitable for the navy; to report violations of these acts to the United States' District Attorney; and, generally, in all cases of doubt or difficulty arising under their appointments, to appeal to that officer for instructions; to accompany the United States' surveyors, while they are employed in the agent's district, and to refer to their field notes, &c., for such information as they may afford on the subjects under examination; to report also the form and dimensions of the timber obtainable from the live oak trees, according to diagrams with which the agents have been furnished; to communicate to the commanders of vessels appointed to aid in the preservation of the live oak, information as to the title of lands, necessary to enable them to determine upon the propriety of arresting or permitting the removal of navy timber, &c., and on all such matters as may facilitate the discharge of the duties confided to such commanders.

The commanders of these vessels are instructed to guard diligently the portion of sea coast assigned to each, respectively, against depredations on the navy timber; to examine the bays, rivers, and creeks, for the discovery of such timber; to aid the land agents in exploring such watercourses, bays, &c. as may not be readily accessible without the use of boats, and generally to co-operate with them, as far as may be practicable under their instructions, in the discharge of the duties allotted to them.

The commanders are also required to visit the live oak districts frequently, and especially during the cutting season, if timber is about to be taken from lands which there is good reason to believe belong to the United States, to refer the subject, in the first instance, to the land agents, and finally, if necessary, to the United States' District Attorney. In the mean time they are authorized to forbid the removal of such timber; the agents are directed to note also the localities of any live oak lands they may discover, their proximity to landings from whence the timber may be transported to distant markets; to determine, as accurately as circumstances will permit, the geographical position of the principal capes, entrances into bays, rivers, &c.; to ascertain the depth of the water on the bars, or entrance thereof, distances which they may be navigable, &c., and to communicate the information thus obtained to the Department only.

LIVE OAK AGENTS.

1st District extends from the mouth of the St. Mary's river, Georgia, to Cape Sable, or the southern extremity of the Peninsula of Florida. Thompson Mason, Agent. 2d District extends from Cape Sable to the mouth of the Suwanee river.—Samuel Reed, Agent. 3d District extends from the mouth of the Suwanee to range line between the 5th and 6th ranges east from Tallahassee.—Eli B. Whitaker, Agent. 4th District extends from range line between the 5th and 6th ranges east of Tallahassee to the Appalachicola river.—John E. Frost, Agent. 5th District extends from the Appalachicola river to the range line dividing the 29th and 30th ranges west of Tallahassee; a line passes near Deer Point, 4 miles east of Pensacola.—John Clark, Agent. 6th District extends from the western line last mentioned to the mouth of the Mississippi river.—John Ferrison, Agent. 7th District extends from the mouth of the Mississippi to the mouth of the Sabine river.—George Fair, Agent.

Each Agent receives a compensation at the rate of eighteen hundred dollars per annum, and $1 25 per day for expenses of himself and horse for the time actually employed upon public duty, from home. He is also allowed an attendant who receives $26 per month, including his support while engaged in the service.

PRIVATEER PENSION FUND.

The privateer pension fund consists of stocks of the corporation of Washington, bearing interest of 5 per cent. $1,961 81 of the State of Maryland, bearing interest of 5 per cent. 46.00 00

The dividends on this stock, - - - - $47,961 81

constitute the only means for payment of pensions chargeable upon the fund. The amount of payments during this year (1831) cannot be ascertained until the agents shall have made their returns.

The pensions to widows and orphans, by the limitation of the laws granting them, have expired.

Eighty six persons have been authorized to receive pensions during the continuance of their disability, under the acts of Congress of the 13th of February and 2d of August, 1813.

Of the number entitled, but forty-two have applied for payment within two years; and in making remittances to the agents, it is believed to be necessary to provide for the latter only, as the rest may be presumed to be dead, or have relinquished their claims.

MINT OF THE UNITED STATES.

Samuel Moore, Director, $2,000 00 J. Cloud, Melter & Refiner, $1,500 00
 Wm Findlay, Treasurer, 1,200 00 William Kneass, Engraver, 1,200 00
 Ad. Eckfeldt, Chief Coiner, 1,500 00 John S. Benezet, Clerk, 350 00
 John Richardson, Assayer, 1,500 00 J. Eckfeldt, Assist. Assayer, 600 00

The Mint of the United States, for the purpose of a National coinage, was established by the act of 2d April, 1792, in the city of Philadelphia, where it has since been continued. For conducting the business of the Mint, the same act directed that the following officers should be appointed: a Director, an Assayer, a Chief Coiner, an Engraver, and a Treasurer. By the act of 3d March, 1795, an additional officer, by the name of the Melter and Refiner, was authorised.

The Director of the Mint has the chief management of the business thereof, and superintends all other officers and persons employed therein. It is the duty of the Treasurer to receive and give receipts for all metals which may be lawfully brought to the Mint to be coined; and for the purpose of ascertaining their respective qualities, he shall deliver from every parcel so received, a sufficient number of grains to the Assayer, who shall assay a such of them as require it. It is also the duty of the Treasurer to deliver such metals to the Chief Coiner, to be coined, in such quantities as the Director may prescribe. The Engraver is required to sink and prepare the necessary dies for the coinage, with proper devices and inscriptions. The Melter and Refiner is required to take charge of all copper and silver or gold bullion, delivered out by the Treasurer, after it has been assayed, and to reduce the same into bars or ingots fit for the rolling mills, and then deliver them to the Coiner or Treasurer, as the Director shall judge expedient. The Assayer, the Chief Coiner, and the Melter and Refiner are required to give bonds to the Secretary of the Treasury for the faithful and diligent performance of their several duties.

It is lawful for any person or persons to bring to the Mint gold and silver bullion to be coined; and the bullion so brought is there assayed and coined, as speedily as may be after the receipt thereof; and if of the standard of the United States, free of expense to the person or persons by whom it shall have been brought. But the Treasurer of the Mint is not obliged to receive, for the purpose of refining and coining, any silver bullion below the standard of the United States, in a smaller quantity than two hundred ounces, nor gold bullion below the said standard, in a smaller quantity than twenty ounces. And there must be retained from every deposit of bullion below the standard, such sum as shall be equivalent to the expense incurred in refining the same; an accurate account of which expense, on every deposit, is kept, and of the sums retained on account of the same, which is accounted for by the Treasurer of the Mint, with the Treasurer of the United States.

Operations of the Mint.

The coinage effected within the year 1830 amounts to $3155,620, comprising $643,105 in gold coins, $2,495,400 in silver, $17,115 in copper, and consisting of 8,357,191 pieces of coin, viz:

Half eagles,	126,351 pieces, making	$631,755
Quarter eagles,	4,540 " "	11,350
Half dollars,	4,764,800 " "	2,382,400
Dimes,	510,000 " "	51,000
Half dimes,	1,240,000 " "	62,000
Cents,	1,711,500 " "	17,115
	8,357,191	$3,155,620

the coinage effected within the year 1831, amounts to $3,923,473 60, comprising $714,270 in gold coins, $3,175,600 in silver, and $33,603 60 in copper, and consisting of 11,792,284 pieces of coin, viz :

Half eagles,	14,594 pieces, making	$702 970 00
Quarter eagles,	4,520 " "	11,300 00
Half dollars,	5,873,660 " "	2,936,830 00
Quarter dollars,	393,000 " "	99,500 00
Dimes,	771,350 " "	77,135 00
Half dimes,	1,242,700 " "	62,135 00
Cents,	3,359,260 " "	33,592 60
Half cents,	2,200 " "	11 00
11,792,284		$3,923,473 60

Of the amount of gold coined within 1831, about 130,000 dollars were derived from Mexico, South America, and the West Indies, 27,000 dollars from Africa, 518,000 dollars from the gold region of the United States, and about 39,000 dollars from sources not ascertained.

Of the amount of gold of the United States, above mentioned, about 26,000 dollars may be stated to have been received from Virginia, 294,000 dollars from North Carolina, 22,000 dollars from South Carolina, and 176,000 from Georgia. Gold has also been received within the past year from Tennessee and Alabama, not exceeding, however, 1000 dollars from each of those states; an amount meriting little regard, except as indicating the progressive development of the gold region.

The first notice of gold of the United States on the records of the Mint, occurs in the transactions of the year 1804. From that year to 1823 inclusive, the average annual amount received at the Mint, did not exceed 2,500 dollars. Since the latter period, the progressive increase has been remarkable. The amount received within the succeeding years, to the present time may be stated as follows, viz :

In 1824	- - - $5,000	In 1828	- - - $46,000
1825	- - - 17,000	1829	- - - 134,000
1826	- - - 20,000	1830	- - - 466,000
1827	- - - 21,000	1831	- - - 518,000

Previously to the year 1829, the State of North Carolina alone, had furnished gold to the Mint. Within that year it was received also from Virginia and South Carolina; from the former, 2,500 dollars, and from the latter 3,500 dollars. Early in 1830, gold began to be received from Georgia. The amount received during that year from the various sections of the gold region, was as follows, viz : From Virginia, 24,000 dollars, North Carolina, 204,000 dollars, South Carolina, 26,000 dollars, and from Georgia, 212,000 dollars.

Silver bullion has been supplied, throughout the year, in quantities amply sufficient for the present power of the Mint. The coinage of silver alone has exceeded the whole amount of coinage in any former year, and the coinage of gold, silver and copper, has exceeded that of any previous year by nearly one million of dollars.

The employment of copper coins in circulation is becoming obviously more general than heretofore. They are transmitted, at the public expense and risk to all parts of the United States, within the range of ordinary means of transportation, and their use and value are becoming familiar and acknowledged, where, until recently, they have been in little estimation.

The profit on the copper coinage of the past year will somewhat exceed 10,000 dollars. This profit is regularly accounted for to the Treasury of the United States, thereby refunding so much of the sum appropriated for the expenses of the Mint establishment. The whole effective expense of the Mint for the past year, will thus be reduced to less than 28,000 dollars.

Convention between the United States and his Majesty, the King of the French, concluded at Paris, the fourth day of July, 1831 Ratified by the Senate of the United States, January 27th. 1832; and the ratifications were exchanged, agreeably to the eighth article at the City of Washington, by the Secretary of State of the United States, and the Minister from France, on the second day of February, 1832.

The United States of America and His Majesty the King of the French, animated with an equal desire to adjust amicably and in a manner conformable to equity, as well as to the relations of good intelligence and sincere friendship which unite the two countries, the reclamation formed by the respective Governments, have, for this purpose, named for their plenipotentiaries, to wit: the President of the United States, by and with the advice and consent of the Senate, William C. Rives. Envoy Extraordinary and Minister Plenipotentiary of the said United States, near His Majesty, the King of the French, and His Majesty, the King of the French, the Count Horace Sebastiani, Lieutenant General of his Armies, his Minister Secretary of State for the Department of Foreign Affairs, &c. &c. who, after having exchanged their full powers, found in good and due form, have agreed upon the following articles

ART. I. The French Government, in order to liberate itself completely from all the reclamations preferred against it by Citizens of the United States, for unlawful seizures, captures, sequestrations, confiscations, or destructions of their vessels, cargoes, or other property, engages to pay a sum of twenty-five millions of francs to the Government of the United States, who shall distribute it among those entitled, in the manner and according to the rules which it shall determine.

ART. II. The sum of twenty-five millions of francs, above stipulated, shall be paid at Paris, in six annual instalments, of four millions one hundred and sixty-six thousand six hundred and sixty-six francs sixty-six centimes each, into the hands of such person or persons as shall be authorized by the Government of the United States to receive it.

The first instalment shall be paid at the expiration of one year next following the exchange of the ratifications of this convention, and the others at successive intervals of a year, one after another, till the whole shall be paid.

To the amount of each of the said instalments shall be added interest at four per cent. thereupon, as upon the other instalments then remaining unpaid; the said interest to be computed from the day of the exchange of the ratifications of the present convention.

ART. III. The Government of the United States, on its part, for the purpose of being liberated completely from all the reclamations presented by France, on behalf of its citizens, or of the Royal Treasury, (either for ancient supplies or accounts, the liquidation of which had been reserved, for unlawful seizures, captures, detentions, arrests or destructions of French vessels, cargoes, or other property,) engages to pay to the Government of His Majesty (which shall make distribution of the same in the manner awarded to the rules to be determined by it) the sum of one million five hundred thousand francs.

ART. IV The sum of one million five hundred thousand francs, stipulated in the preceding article, shall be payable in six annual instalments, two hundred and fifty thousand francs; and the payment of each of the said instalments shall be effected by a reservation of so much out of the annuities which the French Government is bound, by the second article above, to pay to the Government of the United States.

To the amount of each of these instalments shall be added interest at four per cent upon the instalment then paid, as well as upon those still due; which payments of interest shall be effected by means of a reservation, similar to that already indicated for the payment of the principal. The said interest shall be computed from the day of the exchange of the ratification of the present convention.

ART. V As to the reclamations of French citizens against the Government of the United States, and the reclamations of citizens of the United States against the French Government, which are of a different nature from those which it is the object of the present convention to adjust, it is understood that the citizens of the two nations may prosecute them in their respective countries before the competent judicial or administrative authorities in complying with the laws and regulations of the country the dispositions at benefit of which shall be applied to them in like manner as to native citizens.

ART. VI The French Government and the Government of the United States reciprocally engage to communicate to each other, by the intermediary of the respective legations, the documents, titles, or other information proper to facilitate the examination and liquidation of the reclamations comprised in the stipulations of the present convention.

ART. VII The wines of France, from and after the exchange of the ratifications of the present convention shall be admitted to consumption in the States of the Union at duties which shall not exceed the following rates: the gallon, (such as it is used at present for wines in the United States,) with six cents for red wines in casks; ten cents for white wines in casks; and twenty-two cents for wines of all sorts in bottles. The proportion existing between the duties on French wines thus reduced, and the general rates of the tariff which went into operation the first of January, 1829, shall be maintained in case the Government of the United States should think proper to diminish those general rates in a new tariff.

In consideration of this stipulation, which shall be binding on the United States for ten years, the French Government abandons the reclamation which it had formed in relation to the 8th article of the treaty of cession of Louisiana. It engages, moreover, to establish on the long staple cottons of the United States, which after the exchange of the ratifications of the present convention, shall be brought directly thence to France by the vessels of the United States, or by French vessels, the same duties as on short staple cottons.

ART. VIII The present convention shall be ratified, and the ratification shall be exchanged at Washington in the space of eight months, or sooner if possible.

IN FAITH of which the respective Plenipotentiaries have signed these articles, and thereto set their seals. Done at Paris, the fourth day of the month of July, one thousand eight hundred and thirty-one.

PUBLIC BUILDINGS IN THE CITY OF WASHINGTON.

Joseph Elgar, Commissioner $2,000 per annum.

The numerous and responsible duties required by law to be performed by the Commissioner of the Public Buildings, who has no clerk, are described in the several acts of Congress here cited.

By the act of July 16, 1790 "for establishing the temporary and permanent seat of the Government of the United States," the President of the United States was authorized to appoint three Commissioners, to survey, define, and limit a territory, not exceeding ten miles square, and to provide suitable buildings for the accommodation of Congress, and of the President, and of the Public Offices.

By the act of May 1, 1802 "for abolishing the board of Commissioners in the City of Washington," provision was made for the appointment of a Superintendent, to be invested with all the powers, and perform all the duties which the Commissioners were invested with or required to perform "by or in virtue of any act of Congress, or any act of the General Assembly of Maryland, or any Deed of trust from the original proprietors of the lots in the said city, or in any other manner whatsoever."

By the act of April 29, 1816, the office of Superintendent was abolished, and authority given to appoint one Commissioner, to be vested with all the powers, and perform all the duties of the Superintendent.

These duties are to ascertain the value of the lots belonging to the United States in the City of Washington, and sell the same; to make Deed to the purchasers, and account for the proceeds at the Treasury—to make streets and foot-ways in front of the public grounds—to remove nuisances from those grounds—to appoint the architects and other agents employed on the public buildings, and fix their compensation—to determine the number of workmen to be employed, and their pay—to examine the plans and execution of the work—to provide all the materials—to make all payments on account of both materials and labor, and present to the Treasury regular vouchers for the same. And the act of May 2d, 1828, makes it the duty of the Commissioner to obey such rules and regulations as may from time to time be prescribed jointly by the presiding officers of the two Houses, for the care, preservation, orderly keeping, and police of all such parts of the Capitol, and the appurtenances about it, and the public buildings and property in the immediate vicinity, as are not in the exclusive use and occupation of either House of Congress; that it shall also be his duty to obey such rules and regulations as may be from time to time prescribed by the presiding officer of either House of Congress, for the care, preservation, orderly keeping, and police of those portions of the Capitol which are in the exclusive use and occupation of either House of Congress; and that it shall be his duty to obey such rules and regulations as may from time to time be prescribed by the President of the United States, for the care, preservation, orderly keeping, and police of the other public buildings and public property in the City of Washington.

CITY OF WASHINGTON.

The following description, and statistics of the City of Washington, were prepared for this work, by Mr. John Sessford.

Washington is situated in the District of Columbia, on the left bank of the Potomac and right bank of the Anacostia, by which rivers it is embraced; it is in Lat 38 deg 52 min. 45.3. Lon O, being intended for a first meridian; the Longitude west from Greenwich is 76 deg 55 min 30 sec. The city "comprehends all the lands beginning on the east side of Rock Creek, at a stone standing in the middle of the road leading from Georgetown to Bladensburg, thence along the middle of the said road to a stone standing on the east side of the Reedy branch of the Tiber, thence south easterly, making an angle of 61 deg. 20 min. with the meridian, to a stone standing in the east road leading from Bladensburg to the Eastern Branch ferry, thence east, parallel to the said east and west line, to the Eastern Branch, then with the waters of the Eastern Branch, Potomac and Rock Creek, to the place of beginning." It was planned under the direction of George Washington, then President of the United States, from whom it takes its name, by Pierre C. L'Enfant, in the year 1791.

The positions for the different edifices and for the several squares and areas, as laid down by Andrew Ellicott, were first determined on the most advantageous ground, commanding the most extensive prospects, and the better susceptible of such improvements as either use or ornament may require.

Lines or avenues of direct communication have been devised to connect the most distant objects with the principal by a direct communication, and to preserve through the whole a reciprocity of sight, over ground the most favorable for prospect. North and south lines, crossed by others running east and west, divide the city into streets and squares, and at intervals, squares and open spaces, &c., to be laid out into walks, &c., or planted with trees as Pennsylvania Avenue is from the Capitol to the President's House.

The Avenues are named after the respective States, and the Capitol is the point from which the streets are named; those running north and south are designated by the letters of the alphabet—A north. A south, and both extend to the letter W; those running east and west of it are numbered—1st st. east, 1st st. west; those to the east extend to 31, and those to the west to 28.

The avenues and streets leading to public places are from 120 to 160 feet wide, divided into footways, walks of trees, and carriage ways; and the other streets are from 70 to 110 feet wide; the avenues and streets of 160 feet and upwards have footways of 20 feet, under 100 and over 80 have footways of 17 feet; streets under 80 feet have 12 feet footways; and the centre of the pumps, hydrants, and trees, on all the streets, must be placed four feet outside of the curb-stone. The principal part of the city was graduated by the surveyors, and recorded before any buildings were erected; there is now a City Surveyor, whose duty it is to give the proper graduations and outlines of lots, as recorded, to persons desirous of building, and give a certificate thereof, for which he is allowed a fee.

The buildings belonging to the United States are: 1st. The Capitol, a large and massy building of the Corinthian order, is situated near the western extremity of the Capitol square, 73 feet above tide; it is of free stone, composed of a central edifice and two wings, and is of the following dimensions, viz:

Length of front,	-	feet	350.5	Length of Representatives Hall,	95
Depth of wings,	-	-	121.6	Height do	60
East projection,	-	-	65	Length of Senate Chamber,	74
West do.	-	-	83	Height do	42
H't of wings to top of balustrade,	-	-	70	Height of Rotundo,	90
" " centre dome,	-	-	120	Diameter do	9

The wings were nearly completed, when the British army, under Gen. Ross, (who was afterwards slain in battle near Baltimore,) in August, 1814, made a sudden incursion, after defeating the American troops at Bladensburg, gained possession of the city, setting fire to the Capitol, President's House, Public Offices, &c, unconnected with the operations of war, reducing the whole to ashes, together with the valuable library of Congress. The foundation of the north wing was laid, in the presence of Gen. Washington, on the 16th Sept. 1793, and that of the centre on the 24th of May, 1818, being the anniversary of its destruction by the British. The building covers one and a half acres, and 1820 square feet, exclusive of its circular enclosure for fuel, and elegant area and glacier on the west front. The square contains  $22\frac{1}{2}$  acres, embracing a circumference of  $\frac{3}{4}$  of a mile and 185 feet, enclosed by a substantial iron railing, with very neat gateways, gravel walks, and a beautiful bordering of shrubbery and flowers, forming a delightful promenade for the use of the citizens. Opposite to the west front is the botanic garden ground, well adapted for the purpose intended; it is under the care of the Columbian Institute. At the west front of the Capitol is placed the beautiful marble monument (which lately stood in the Navy Yard) erected by the American officers to the memory of their brethren who fell before Tripoli in the year 1804.

2d. The President's House is two stories high, with a lofty basement, and is 180 feet long by 85 wide; from each end there is attached the necessary offices, stables, coal and ice houses, &c, with a colonade front, and rising to a level with the main floor of the house; the roofs being flat, afford a promenade; it is built of freestone, is crowned with a balustrade, the roof covered with copper, the entrance from the north is through a lofty portico, which is projected from the front so as to leave room for carriages to pass under between the platform and outer columns; the house stands on an elevation in the centre of a large reservation of ground; the view to the south is extremely beautiful and picturesque.

3d. Four buildings, erected 300 feet east and west of the President's House, for the accommodation of the principal departments and subordinate offices of the government. They are each two stories high, with freestone basements, and covered with slate; the two new ones, facing north, are each 130 feet long by 60 wide, with handsome porticoes of the Ionic order; the two south ones are 150 feet long, by 57 wide.

4th. The General Post Office, on E street North, occupies the whole of the south front of square 430, being 200 feet long; it is 3 stories high, and in it are the General Post Office, City Post Office, and Patent Office; it is a very neat and commodious edifice, well adapted to the purposes for which it is used, on high ground, about equi-distant from the Capitol and the President's House.

5th. A very extensive Navy Yard, enclosed on the North and East by a lofty wall, with a handsome gateway and guard-rooms, a large and commodious dwelling for the commandant, and others for different officers attached to the yard; extensive timber sheds, warehouses, shops for blacksmiths, coopers, turners, plumbers, joiners, sail-makers, boat-builders, &c., a steam engine, which works two sets of saws, drives a tilt hammer, turners' lathes, &c; there are also 2 very large ship houses. The Columbus 74, Potomac and Brandywine frigates, of 44 guns each, and several other vessels of war have been built at this yard; there is also a neat and tastefully arranged armory; and there is a vast quantity of naval stores, and cannon of every size, deposited in the yard.

6th. Marine Barracks, situated north of the Navy Yard, occupies the whole of square 927; the building is upwards of 700 feet in length, with a colonade facing into the square; in the centre of the square are the officers' quarters; at the north of the square is the commandant's house, which is very large and commodious; and at the south is an armory and workshops; the yard is neat, and kept in excellent order.

7th. A substantial Navy Magazine, with a house for the keeper and wharf for convenience of receiving and sending off powder, &c.; it is situated at the east end of the city, on the Anacostia branch of the Potomac.

8th. At the southern extremity of the city stands the extensive Army Arsenal and Laboratories for arms and manufacture of military stores, with large sheds and houses for the storage of caissons, cannon, carriages, &c., and a magazine, occupying a large space of ground, in a beautiful and commanding situation.

9th. The Penitentiary is situated on the public ground north of the arsenal; it is a lofty building, of brick, enclosing within it the cells for the convicts, four tier high; built of freestone, and properly secured by strong iron doors; attached to it are spacious buildings for the warden and keepers; the warden's house faces the Potomac, and in front of it is a substantial wharf for the convenience of the establishment; the ground is enclosed by a lofty brick wall extending from near the Potomac to James' Creek.

The ground on which the city stands was ceded by the State of Maryland to the United States. The proprietors of the soil surrendered their lands, to be laid out as a city, and gave up one half thereof to the United States, to be sold to raise funds for the erection of the public buildings.

There is a pile bridge across the Potomac, a mile long, built in 1809, leading to Alexandria, and 3 over the Anacostia; 4 turnpikes, viz: to Alexandria, to Montgomery C. H., to Baltimore, to the Little River Turnpike, Virginia.

The canal which connects the two rivers is now under the management of the City, and contracts have been made and the work commenced to enlarge it, both in width and depth, so as to admit four feet water at low tide, and, when completed, as contemplated, will afford sufficient depth of water for a lively trade, in steamboats and small craft, through the centre of the city.

The Anacostia branch has a sufficient depth of water for frigates to ascend above the Navy Yard without lighting, and vessels drawing 14 feet can come to the Potomac bridge, and from thence to the mouth of the Tiber, 9 feet at ordinary high tide; the Tiber itself is shallow, with a soft, muddy bottom, which will be removed and deepened under the canal contract, and from 17th to 14th streets will form a spacious basin of 6 or 700 feet in width by upwards of 1500 in length, to where the canal commences, which is to be 150 wide to 6th street, the whole forming a spacious outlet to the Potomac, and uniting with the Chesapeake and Ohio Canal, which is to be continued from the basin at the mouth of Rock Creek.

The Tiber runs through the middle of the city, and its waters may be conveyed to the Capitol and the President's House.

There are four market houses, in each of which market is held tri-weekly; the centre one is large and well supplied, and when finished will form three sides of an oblong square, the south front being open to the waters of the Tiber; a large infirmary, in a commanding situation, with two squares of ground enclosed; a Female Orphan Asylum; a Jail; a neat and handsome Theatre; an Assembly Room; a Circus; a City Hall, commenced in August, 1820, the south half of which is erected without its outside finish, of porticoes and stuccoing, and presents a front of 251 feet; a Tobacco Warehouse; two handsome Masonic Halls; 10 Public Schools, on the Lancasterian plan, supported by the corporation, open for all poor children; 19 places of worship, viz: 3 Episcopalian, 4 Presbyterian, 2 Catholic, 3 Methodist, 3 Baptist, 1 Unitarian, 1 Friends, and two African, which are generally well attended; a City Library, incorporated by Congress, and containing upwards of 5,000 volumes; Medical, Botanical, Clerks' Benevolent, Masonic, Orphan, Dorcas, Howard, Bible, Missionary, Tract, Colonization, societies; Columbian Institute; and measures taken to establish a Lyceum on liberal principles; a Museum, Gallery of Paintings, Baths, Glass House, Foundry, and two extensive Breweries, four very extensive Taverns, with accommodations equal to any of a similar nature; 3 Banks, and a Branch of the United States Bank; a Fire Insurance Company; 12 printing offices; 4 daily, 4 tri-weekly.

and 2 weekly papers; 6 steamboats, viz: 2 to Baltimore, 1 to Norfolk, 1 to Potomac Creek, and 2 to Alexandria; 8 stages daily to Baltimore, and 1 to the west, and several in other directions.

The City is well supplied with good water; the Pennsylvania Avenue is supplied from copious springs, by wooden and iron pipes. West of the Navy Yard are several extensive wharves and warehouses, and others near the Potomac bridge.

There is perhaps no city in the Union that has so many pleasant heights adjoining to it as this—being surrounded by them in the shape of a horse-shoe, the Potomac, of more than a mile in width, forming the opening to the south. These heights form delightful sites for country seats—a number are already erected. The city combines in a high degree the requisites so desirable for the metropolis of the Union. Situated near the head of tide water navigation, near the centre of the sea-board line, and a ready communication with the ocean, convenient for intercourse with every section of the republic, ample as to territory, with the most beautiful situations for public and private edifices; markets well supplied with every necessary at reasonable prices. The Potomac furnishes full supplies of shad, herring, and other fish, and the adjoining country, meats, fruits and vegetables, in abundance.

In the vicinity are many valuable improvements, the most conspicuous of which is the Columbian College, incorporated by Congress in 1821, Feb. 9th the land was purchased in Dec. 1819, and the building completed in Sept. 1821; the premises contain 47 acres. It is situated north of the city, and, according to Mr. Lambert, is 7.970 west longitude, and about  $1\frac{1}{2}$  miles north of the President's House; commands a view of the city, Alexandria, Fort Washington, and the heights of Mount Vernon; the southern boundary of the college grounds is the boundary of the city, and 14th street west runs in a right south line, to the east end of the Potomac bridge; the edifice has a north and south front, 117 feet by 47 wide, and four stories high; besides this, there are two neat dwellings, with out-houses and gardens for the Professors and the College.

The seat of government was removed here in 1800, during the Presidency of John Adams. Legal jurisdiction was assumed by Congress, on the 27th Feb. 1801, and the laws of Maryland and Virginia then existing declared to be in force, which is the case at present, with but few exceptions. The Judges of the Circuit Court compose a tribunal for the trial of civil and criminal cases. There is also an Orphans' Court and a Register of Wills. There is no tribunal for the trial of city causes but Justices of the Peace, who are appointed by the President; they can give judgment for all sums under $50, and perform such other duties as are usual.

The city was incorporated by act of Congress on the 3d May, 1802, by which act the appointment of Mayor was vested in the President, yearly, and the two branches of Council by the people, in general ticket. By a supplement, of May 4, 1812, the corporation was made to consist of Mayor, Aldermen, and Board of Common Council; the Board of Aldermen to consist of 8 members, chosen for two years, and the Council of 12 members, for one year—being two from each ward of the former, and three from each ward of the latter; and the Mayor by joint ballot of the two boards, yearly.

By the present charter, of May 15, 1820, the Mayor is elected by the people, every two years, on the first Monday in June; the Board of Aldermen for two years, and the Council for one year. The Mayor and Aldermen are Justices of the Peace ex officio. Each ward elects two Aldermen and three Councilmen, and every free white male citizen of the United States, of lawful age, having resided in the city one year previous to the election, being a resident of the ward in which he offers to vote, and who shall have been assessed on the books of the corporation for the year ending on 31st December, preceding the election, and shall have paid all taxes legally assessed and due on personal property, when legally required to pay the same, shall be entitled to vote for Mayor and members of the two Boards.

The foregoing statement of expenditures, includes the entire expense of rebuilding the public edifices, which were destroyed by fire in 1814, the building of Jails for Alexandria County and Washington County, purchase of a Court House for Washington County, the erection of the United States Penitentiary, and a variety of other items not chargeable to the sales of City Lots.

For the improvements made in the City, opening and graduating the streets and avenues, according to the plan of the United States adopted by General Washington, the support of the Poor, and all other expenses of the City, the money has been raised by assessments upon the private property within its limits; the City Lots owned by the United States, the public reservations and all other property of the government, having never been assessed, nor subject to any charge whatever.

Sources from which the above was raised, and value of remaining property.

The City is, by an act of the Council, divided into six wards, viz: "All that part to the west of 15th street west shall constitute the first ward; that part to the east of 15th and west of 10th, the 2d ward; that part east of 10th west of 1st, and north of south E, the 3d ward; that part to the east of 1st street west, to the west of 8th street east, and to the north of E street south; the 4th ward; that part to the east of 10th street west, south of E street, south, and to the west of 4th street east, the 5th ward; and the residue east, the 6th ward.

The expenses of the City are borne by assessments upon real and personal property, other than the property of the United States, which assessments are, in conformity with an Act of Congress, levied according to the actual cash valuation of the property, at the time of the assessment; which is made once in five years. After the payment of the general expenses of the City, the taxes raised in each ward are to be expended upon improvements therein, and in no other.

The following is a statement of the assessments in 1830, with the additions made in 1831.

MESSAGE

From the President of the United States, transmitted to both Houses of Congress, at the commencement of the first Session, twenty-second Congress, on Tuesday 6th of December, 1831.

Fellow Citizens of the Senate, and House of Representatives:

The representation of the people has been renewed for the twenty-second time since the constitution they formed has been in force. For near half a century, the chief magistrates, who have been successively chosen, have made their annual communications of the state of the nation to its representatives. Generally, these communications have been of the most gratifying nature, testifying an advance in all the improvements of social, and all the securities of political life. But frequently, and justly, as you have been called on to be grateful for the bounties of Providence, at few periods have they been more abundantly or extensively bestowed than at the present: rarely, if ever, have we had greater reason to congratulate each other on the continued and increasing prosperity of our beloved country.

Agriculture, the first and most important occupation of man, has compensated the labors of the husbandman with plentiful crops of all the varied products of our extensive country. Manufactures have been established, in which the funds of the capitalist find a profitable investment, and which give employment and subsistence to a numerous and increasing body of industrious and dexterous mechanics. The laborer is rewarded by high wages, in the construction of works of internal improvement, which are extending with unprecedented rapidity. Science is steadily penetrating the recesses of nature and disclosing her secrets, while the ingenuity of free minds is subjecting the elements to the power of man, and making each new conquest auxiliary to his comfort. By our mails, whose speed is regularly increased, and whose routes are every year extended, the communication of public intelligence and private business is rendered frequent and safe—the intercourse between distant cities, which it formerly required weeks to accomplish, is now effected in a few days; and in the construction of rail roads, and the application of steam power, we have a reasonable prospect that the extreme parts of our country will be so much approximated, and those most isolated by the obstacles of nature rendered so accessible, as to remove an apprehension sometimes entertained, that the great extent of the Union would endanger its permanent existence.

If, from the satisfactory view of our agriculture, manufactures, and internal improvements, we turn to the state of our navigation and trade with foreign nations and between the States, we shall scarcely find less cause for gratulation. A beneficent Providence has provided, for their exercise and encouragement, an extensive coast indented by capacious bays, noble rivers, inland seas; with a country productive of every material for ship building, and very commodious for gainful commerce, and filled with a population, active, intelligent, well informed, and fearless of danger. These advantages are not neglected; and an impulse has lately been given to commercial enterprise, which fills our ship yards with new constructions, encourages all the arts and branches of industry connected with them, crowds the wharves of our cities with vessels, and covers the most distant seas with our canvasses.

Let us be grateful for these blessings to the beneficent Being who has conferred them, and who suffers us to indulge a reasonable hope of their continuance and extension, while we neglect not the means by which they may be preserved. If we may dare to judge of His future designs by the manner in which his past favours have been bestowed, he has made our national prosperity to depend on the preservation of our liberties—our national force on our federal union—and our individual happiness on the maintenance of our State rights and wise institutions. If we are prosperous at home, and respected abroad, it is because we are united, industrious and obedient to the laws. While we continue so, we shall, by the blessing of Heaven, go on in the happy career we have begun, and which has brought us, in the short period of our political existence, from a population of three to thirteen millions—on thirteen separate Colonies to twenty-four United States—from weakness to strength—on a rank scarcely marked in the scale of Nations to a high place in their respect.

This last advantage is one that has resulted, in a great degree, from the principles which have guided our intercourse with foreign powers, since we have assumed an equal station among them; and hence, the annual account which the executive renders to the country, of the manner in which that branch of his duties has been fulfilled, proves instructive and salutary.

The pacific and wise policy of our Government kept us in a state of neutrality during the wars that have, at different periods since our political existence, been carried on by other powers: but this policy, while it gave activity and extent to our commerce, exposed it in the same proportion to injuries from the belligerent nations. Hence have arisen claims of indemnity for those injuries. England, France, Spain, Holland, Sweden, Denmark, Naples, and lately Portugal, had all in a greater or less degree infringed our neutral rights:

Demands for reparation were made upon all. They have had in all, and continue to have in some cases, a leading influence on the nature of our relations with the powers on whom they were made.

Of the claims upon England it is unnecessary to speak, further than to say, that the state of things to which their prosecution and denial gave rise has been succeeded by arrangements, productive of mutual good feeling and amicable relations between the two countries, which it is hoped will not be interrupted. One of these arrangements is that relating to the colonial trade, which was communicated to Congress at the last session; and although the short period during which it has been in force will not enable me to form an accurate judgment of its operation, there is every reason to believe that it will prove highly beneficial. The trade thereby authorized has employed, to the 30th September last, upwards of 30,000 tons of American, and 15,000 tons of foreign shipping in the outward voyages; and, in the inward, nearly an equal amount of American, and 20,000 only, of foreign tonnage. Advantages, too, have resulted to agricultural interests from the state of the trade between Canada and our Territories and States bordering on the St. Lawrence and the Lakes, which may prove more than equivalent to the loss sustained by the discrimination made to favor the trade of the Northern colonies with the West Indies.

After our transition from the state of colonies to that of an independent nation, many points were found necessary to be settled between us and Great Britain. Among them was the demarcation of boundaries, not described with sufficient precision in the treaty of peace. Some of the lines that divide the States and Territories of the United States from the British provinces, have been definitively fixed. That, however, which separates us from the provinces of Canada and New Brunswick to the north and east, was still in dispute when I came into office. But I found arrangements made for its settlement, over which I had no control. The commissioners who had been appointed under the provisions of the treaty of Ghent, having been unable to agree, a convention was made with Great Britain by my immediate predecessor in office, with the advice and consent of the Senate, by which it was agreed "that the points of difference which have arisen in the settlement of the boundary line between the American and British dominions, as described in the 5th article of the Treaty of Ghent, shall be referred, as therein provided, to some friendly sovereign or state who shall be invited to investigate, and make a decision upon such points of difference;" and the King of the Netherlands having, by the late President, and his Britannic Majesty, been designated as such friendly sovereign, it became my duty to carry, with good faith, the agreement so made, into full effect. To this end I caused all the measures to be taken which were necessary to a full exposition of our case, to the sovereign arbiter; and nominated as Minister Plenipotentiary to his court, a distinguished citizen of the State most interested in the question, and who had been one of the agents previously employed for settling the controversy. On the 10th day of January last, his Majesty the King of the Netherlands delivered to the Plenipotentiaries of the United States, and of Great Britain, his written opinion on the case referred to him. The papers in relation to the subject will be communicated by a special message to the proper branch of the Government, with the perfect confidence that its wisdom will adopt such measures as will secure an amicable settlement of the controversy without infringing any constitutional right of the States immediately interested.

It affords me satisfaction to inform you that suggestions, made by my direction, to the Chargé d'Affaires of his Britannic Majesty to this Government, have had their desired effect in producing the release of certain American citizens, who were imprisoned for setting up the authority of the State of Maine, at a place in the disputed Territory under the actual jurisdiction of his Britannic Majesty. From this, and the assurance I have received, and of the desire of the local authorities to avoid any cause of collision, I have the best hope that a good understanding will be kept up until it is confirmed by the final disposition of the subject.

The amicable relations which now subsist between the United States and Great Britain the increasing intercourse between their citizens, and the rapid obliteration of unfriendly prejudices to which former events naturally gave rise, concurred to present this as a fit period for renewing our endeavours to provide against the recurrence of causes of irritation which, in the event of war between Great Britain and any other power, would inevitably endanger our peace. Animated by the sincerest desire to avoid such a state of things, and peacefully to secure, under all possible circumstances, the rights and honor of the country, I have given such instructions to the Minister lately sent to the Court of London, as will evince that desire; and if met by a correspondent disposition, which we cannot doubt will put an end to causes of collision, which, without advantage to either, tend to estrange from each other two nations who have every motive to preserve, not only peace, but an intercourse of the most amicable nature.

In my message at the opening of the last session of Congress, I expressed a confident hope that the justice of our claims upon France, urged as they were with perseverance and signal ability by our Minister there, would finally be acknowledged. This hope has been realized. A treaty has been signed which will immediately be laid before the Senate for its approbation; and which, containing stipulations that require legislative acts, must have the concurrence of both Houses before it can be carried into effect. By it, the French Government engage to pay a sum which, if not quite equal to that which may be found due to our citizens, will yet, it is believed, under all circumstances, be deemed satisfactory by those interested. The offer of a gross sum, instead of the satisfaction of each individual claim, was accepted, because the only alternatives were a rigorous exaction of the whole amount stated to be due on each claim, which might, in some instances, be exaggerated by design, in others overrated through error, and which therefore it would have been both ungracious and unjust to have insisted on, or a settlement by a mixed commission, to which the French negotiators were very averse, and which experience in other cases had shown to be dilatory, and often wholly inadequate to the end. A comparatively small sum is stipulated on our part, to go to the extinction of all claims by French citizens on our Government: and a reduction of duties on our cotton and their wines has been agreed on, as a consideration for the renunciation of an important claim for commercial privileges, under the construction they gave to the treaty for the cession of Louisiana.

Should this treaty receive the proper sanction, a source of irritation will be stopped, that has for so many years, in some degree alienated from each other two nations, who from interest, as well as the remembrance of early associations, ought to cherish the most friendly relations: an encouragement will be given for perseverance in the demands of justice, by this new proof, that if steadily pursued, they will be listened to: and admonition will be offered to those Powers, if any, which may be inclined to evade them, that they will never be abandoned. Above all, a just confidence will be inspired in our fellow citizens, that their Government will exert all the powers with which they have invested it, in support of their just claims upon foreign nations; at the same time that the frank acknowledgment and provision for the payment of those which were addressed to our equity, although unsupported by legal proof, affords a practical illustration of our submission to the divine rule of doing to others what we desire they should do unto us.

Sweden and Denmark having made compensation for the irregularities committed by their vessels, or in their ports, to the perfect satisfaction of the parties concerned; and having renewed the Treaties of Commerce entered into with them, our political and commercial relations with those Powers continue to be on the most friendly footing.

With Spain our differences, up to the 22d of February, 1819, were settled by the treaty of Washington of that date; but, at a subsequent period, our commerce with the states, formerly colonies of Spain, on the continent of America, was annoyed and frequently interrupted by her public and private armed ships; they captured many of our vessels prosecuting a lawful commerce, and sold them and their cargoes; and, at one time, to our demands for restoration and indemnity, opposed the allegation, that they were taken in the violation of a blockade of all the ports of those states. This blockade was declaratory only, and the inadequacy of the force to maintain it was so manifest, that this allegation was varied to a charge of trade in contraband of war. This, in its turn, was also found untenable; and the minister, whom I sent with instructions to press for the reparation that was due to our injured fellow citizens, has transmitted an answer to his demand, by which the captures are declared to have been legal, and are justified, because the independence of the states of America never having been acknowledged by Spain, she had a right to prohibit trade with them under her old colonial laws. This ground of defence was contradictory, not only to those which had been formerly alleged, but to the uniform practice and established laws of nations, and had been abandoned by Spain herself in the convention which granted indemnity to British subjects for captures made at the same time, under the same circumstances, and for the same allegations with those of which we complain.

I however indulge the hope that further reflection will lead to other views, and I feel confident that when his Catholic Majesty shall be convinced of the justice of the claim, his desire to preserve friendly relations between the two countries, which it is my earnest endeavour to maintain, will induce him to accede to our demand. I have therefore despatched a special messenger with instructions to our Minister to bring the case once more to his consideration; to the end that if, which I cannot bring myself to believe, the same decision, that cannot but be deemed an unfriendly denial of justice, should be persisted in, the matter may, before your adjournment, be laid before you, the constitutional judges of what is proper to be done when negotiation for redress of injury fails.

The conclusion of a treaty for indemnity with France, seemed to present a favourable opportunity to renew our claims of a similar nature on other powers; and particularly in the case of those upon Naples, more especially as in the course of former negotiations with that power, our failure to induce France to render us justice was used as an argument against us. The desires of the merchants, who were the principal sufferers, have, therefore, been acceded to, and a mission has been instituted for the special purpose of obtaining for them a reparation already too long delayed. This measure having been resolved on, it was put in execution without waiting for the meeting of Congress, because the state of Europe created an apprehension of events that might have rendered our application ineffectual.

Our demands upon the Government of the Two Sicilies are of a peculiar nature. The injuries on which they are founded, are not denied, nor are the atrocity and perfidy, under which those injuries were perpetrated, attempted to be extenuated. The sole ground on which indemnity has been refused, is the alleged illegality of the tenure by which the monarch who made the seizures, held his crown. This defence, always unfounded in any principle of the law of nations—now universally abandoned, even by those powers upon whom the responsibility, for acts of past rulers, bore the most heavily, will unquestionably be given up by his Sicilian Majesty, whose counsels will receive an impulse from that high sense of honor and regard to justice, which are said to characterize him; and I feel the fullest confidence that the talents of the citizen commissioned for that purpose, will place before him the just claims of our injured citizens in such a light as will enable me, before your adjournment, to announce that they have been adjusted and secured. Precise instructions, to the effect of bringing the negotiation to a speedy issue, have been given, and will be obeyed.

In the late blockade of Terceira, some of the Portuguese fleet captured several of our vessels and committed other excesses, for which reparation was demanded; and I was on the point of despatching an armed force, to prevent any recurrence of a similar violence, and protect our citizens in the prosecution of their lawful commerce, when official assurances on which I relied made the sailing of the ships unnecessary. Since that period frequent promises have been made that full indemnity shall be given for the injuries inflicted and the losses sustained. In the performance there has been some, perhaps unavoidable, delay; but I have the fullest confidence that my earnest desire that this business may at once be closed which our Minister has been instructed strongly to express, will very soon be gratified. I have the better ground for this hope, from the evidence of a friendly disposition which that Government has shown by an actual reduction in the duty on rice, the produce of our Southern States, authorizing the anticipation that this important article of our export will soon be admitted on the same footing with that produced by the most favored nation.

With the other powers of Europe, we have fortunately had no cause of discussions for the redress of injuries. With the Empire of the Russians, our political connexion is of the most friendly, and our commercial of the most liberal kind. We enjoy the advantages of navigation and trade, given to the most favoured nation; but it has not yet suited their policy, or perhaps has not been found convenient from other considerations, to give stability and reciprocity to those privileges, by a commercial treaty. The ill health of the Minister last year, charged with making a proposition for that arrangement, did not permit him to remain at St. Petersburg; and the attention of that Government, during the whole of the period since his departure, having been occupied by the war in which it was engaged, we have been assured that nothing could have been effected by his presence. A Minister will soon be nominated, as well to effect this important object, as to keep up the relations of amity and good understanding of which we have received so many assurances and proofs from his Imperial Majesty, and the Emperor, his predecessor.

The Treaty with Austria is opening to us an important trade with the hereditary dominions of the Emperor, the value of which has been hitherto little known, and, of course, not sufficiently appreciated. While our commerce finds an entrance into the South of Germany by means of this Treaty, those we have formed with the Hanseatic Towns and Prussia, and others now in negotiation, will open that vast country to the enterprising spirit of our merchants, on the north: a country abounding in all the materials for a mutually beneficial commerce, filled with enlightened and industrious inhabitants, holding an important place in the politics of Europe, and to which we owe so many valuable citizens. The ratification of the Treaty with the Porte was sent to be exchanged by the gentleman appointed our Charge d'Affaires to that Court. Some difficulties occurred on his arrival; but at the date of his last official despatch, he supposed they had been obviated, and that there was every prospect of the exchange being speedily effected.

This finishes the connected view I have thought it proper to give of our political and commercial relations in Europe. Every effort in my power will be continued to strengthen and extend them by treaties founded on principles of the most perfect reciprocity of interest, neither asking nor conceding any exclusive advantage, but liberating, as far as it lies in my power, the activity and industry of our fellow citizens from the shackles which foreign restrictions may impose.

To China and the East Indies our commerce continues in its usual extent and with increased facilities, which the credit and capital of our merchants afford, by substituting bills for payments in specie. A daring outrage having been committed in those seas by the plunder of one of our merchantmen engaged in the pepper trade at a port in Sumatra, and the piratical perpetrators belonging to tribes in such a state of society that the usual course of proceedings between civilized nations could not be pursued, I forthwith despatched a frigate with orders to require immediate satisfaction for the injury and indemnity to the sufferers.

Few changes have taken place in our connexions with the independent states of America since my last communication to Congress. The ratification of a commercial Treaty with the United Republics of Mexico, has been for some time under deliberation in their Congress, but was still undecided at the date of our last despatches. The unhappy civil commotions that have prevailed there were undoubtedly the cause of the delay; but as the Government is now said to be tranquilized, we may hope soon to receive the ratification of the treaty, and an arrangement for the demarcation of the boundaries between us. In the meantime an important trade has been opened, with mutual benefit, from St. Louis, in the State of Missouri, by caravans to the interior provinces of Mexico. This commerce is protected in its progress through the Indian countries by the troops of the United States, which have been permitted to escort the caravans beyond our boundaries to the settled part of the Mexican territory.

From Central America, I have received assurances of the most friendly kind, and a gratifying application for our good offices to remove a supposed indisposition towards that Government in a neighbouring state: this application was immediately and successfully complied with. They gave us also the pleasing intelligence that differences which had prevailed in their internal affairs, had been peaceably adjusted. Our treaty with this Republic continues to be faithfully observed, and promises a great and beneficial commerce between the two countries: a commerce of the greatest importance, if the magnificent project of a ship canal through the dominions of that state, from the Atlantic to the Pacific Ocean, now in serious contemplation, shall be executed.

I have great satisfaction in communicating the success which has attended the exertions of our Minister in Colombia, to procure a very considerable reduction in the duties on our flour in that Republic. Indemnity also has been stipulated for injuries received by our merchants from illegal seizures; and renewed assurances are given that the treaty between the two countries shall be faithfully observed.

Chili and Peru seem to be still threatened with civil commotions; and until they shall be settled, disorders may naturally be apprehended, requiring the constant presence of a Naval force in the Pacific Ocean, to protect our fisheries and guard our commerce.

The disturbances that took place in the Empire of Brazil, previously to, and immediately consequent upon, the abdication of the late Emperor, necessarily suspended any effectual application for the redress of some past injuries suffered by our citizens from that Government, while they have been the cause of others, in which all foreigners seem to have participated. Instructions have been given to our Minister there, to press for indemnity due for losses occasioned by these irregularities; and to take care that our fellow citizens shall enjoy all the privileges stipulated in their favour, by the Treaty lately made between the two powers, all which, the good intelligence that prevails between our Minister at Rio Janeiro and the Regency, gives us the best reason to expect.

I should have placed Buenos Ayres in the list of South American powers in respect to which nothing of importance affecting us was to be communicated; but for occurrences which have lately taken place at the Falkland Islands, in which the name of that republic has been used to cover with a show of authority, acts injurious to our commerce, and to the property and liberty of our fellow citizens. In the course of the present year, one of our vessels engaged in the pursuit of a trade which we have always enjoyed without molestation, has been captured by a band acting, as they pretend, under the authority of the Government of Buenos Ayres. I have therefore given orders for the despatch of an armed vessel, to join our squadron in those seas, and aid in affording all lawful protection to our trade which shall be necessary; and shall without delay send a Minister to inquire into the nature of the circumstances, and also of the claim, if any, that is set up by that Government to those Islands. In the mean time I submit the case to the consideration of Congress, to the end that they may clothe the Executive with such authority and means as they may deem necessary for providing a force adequate to the complete protection of our fellow citizens sailing and trading in those seas.

This rapid sketch of our foreign relations it is hoped, fellow citizens, may be of some use to so much of your legislation as may bear on that important subject; while it affords to the country at large a source of high gratification in the contemplation of our political and commercial connexion with the rest of the world. At peace with all—having subjects of future interference with few, and those susceptible of easy adjustment—extending our commerce gradually on all sides, and on none by any but the most liberal and mutually beneficial means, we may, by the blessing of Providence, hope for all that national prosperity which can be derived from an intercourse with foreign nations, guided by those eternal principles of justice and reciprocal good will, which are binding as well upon States, as the individuals of whom they are composed.

I have great satisfaction in making this statement of our affairs, because the course of our national policy enables me to do it without any indiscreet exposure of what in other governments is usually concealed from the people. Having none but a straightforward open course to pursue—guided by a single principle that will bear the strongest light—we have happily no political combinations to form, no alliances to entangle us, no complicated interests to consult; and in subjecting all we have done to the consideration of our citizens, and to the inspection of the world, we give no advantage to other nations, and lay ourselves open to no injury.

It may not be improper to add, that to preserve this state of things, and give confidence to the world in the integrity of our designs, all our consular and diplomatic agents are strictly enjoined to examine well every cause of complaint preferred by our citizens; and, while they urge with proper earnestness those that are well founded, to countenance none that are unreasonable or unjust, and to enjoin on our merchants and navigators the strictest obedience to the laws of the countries to which they resort, and a course of conduct in their dealings that may support the character of our nation, and render us respected abroad.

Connected with this subject, I must recommend a revival of our consular laws. Defects and omissions have been discovered in their operation that ought to be remedied and supplied. For your further information on this subject I have directed a report to be made by the Secretary of State, which I shall hereafter submit to your consideration.

The internal peace and security of our confederated States is the next principal object of the General Government. Time and experience have proved that the abode of the native Indian within their limits is dangerous to their peace, and injurious to himself. In accordance with my recommendation at a former session of Congress, an appropriation of half a million of dollars was made to aid the voluntary removal of the various tribes beyond the limits of the States. At the last session, I had the happiness to announce that the Chickasaws and Choctaws had accepted the generous offer of the Government, and agreed to remove beyond the Mississippi river, by which the whole of the State Mississippi and the western part of Alabama will be freed from Indian occupancy, as opened to a civilized population. The treaties with these tribes are in a course of execution, and their removal, it is hoped, will be completed in the course of 1832.

At the request of the authorities of Georgia, the registration of Cherokee Indians for emigration has been resumed, and it is confidently expected that one half, if not two-thirds of that tribe, will follow the wise example of their more westerly brethren. Those who prefer remaining at their present homes will hereafter be governed by the laws of Georgia as all her citizens are, and cease to be the objects of peculiar care on the part of the General Government.

During the present year, the attention of the Government has been particularly directed to those tribes in the powerful and growing State of Ohio, where considerable tracts of the finest lands were still occupied by the aboriginal proprietors. Treaties, either absolute or conditional, have been made, extinguishing the whole Indian title to the reservations in that State; and the time is not distant, it is hoped, when Ohio will be no longer embarrassed with the Indian population. The same measure will be extended to Indian as soon as there is reason to anticipate success.

It is confidently believed that perseverance for a few years in the present policy of the Government, will extinguish the Indian title to all lands lying within the States composing our Federal Union, and remove beyond their limits every Indian who is not willing to submit to their laws. Thus will all conflicting claims to jurisdiction between the State and the Indian tribes be put to rest. It is pleasing to reflect that results so beneficial, not only to the States immediately concerned, but to the harmony of the Union, will have been accomplished by measures equally advantageous to the Indians. What the native savages become when surrounded by a dense population, and by mixing with the white may be seen in the miserable remnants of a few eastern tribes, deprived of political and civil rights, forbidden to make contracts and subjected to guardians, dragging out a wretched existence, without excitement, without hope, and almost without thought.

But the removal of the Indians beyond the limits and jurisdiction of the States does not place them beyond the reach of philanthropic aid and Christian instruction. On the contrary, those whom philanthropy or religion may induce to live among them in their new abode, will be more free in the exercise of their benevolent functions, than if they had remained within the limits of the States, embarrassed by their internal regulations. Now, subject to no control but the superintending agency of the General Government exercised with the sole view of preserving peace, they may proceed unmolested in the interesting experiment of gradually advancing a community of American Indians from barbarism to the habits and enjoyments of civilized life.

Among the happiest effects of the improved relations of our republic, has been an increase of trade, producing a corresponding increase of revenue, beyond the most sanguine anticipations of the Treasury Department.

The state of the public finances will be fully shown by the Secretary of the Treasury, in the report which he will presently lay before you. I will here however congratulate you upon their prosperous condition. The revenue received in the present year will not fall short of twenty-seven millions seven hundred thousand dollars; and the expenditures for all objects other than the public debt, will not exceed fourteen millions seven hundred thousand. The payment on account of the principal and interest of the debt, during the year, will exceed sixteen millions and a half of dollars, a greater sum than has been applied to that object, out of the revenue, in any year since the enlargement of the sinking fund, except the two years following immediately thereafter. The amount which will have been applied to the public debt from the fourth of March, 1829, to the first of January next, which is less than three years since the administration has been placed in my hands will exceed forty millions of dollars.

From the large importations of the present year, it may be safely estimated that the revenue which will be received into the Treasury from that source during the next year, with the aid of that received from the public lands, will considerably exceed the amount of the receipts of the present year; and it is believed that with the means which the Government will have at its disposal, from various sources, which will be fully stated by the proper Department, the whole of the public debt may be extinguished, either by redemption or purchase, within the four years of my administration. We shall then exhibit the rare example of a great nation, abounding in all the means of happiness and security, altogether free from debt.

The confidence with which the extinguishment of the public debt may be anticipated, presents an opportunity for carrying into effect more fully the policy in relation to import duties, which has been recommended in my former message. A modification of the Tariff, which shall produce a reduction of our revenue to the wants of the Government, and an adjustment of the duties on imports with a view to equal justice in relation to all our national interests, and to the counteraction of foreign policy, so far as it may be injurious to those interests, is deemed to be one of the principal objects which demand the consideration of the present Congress. Justice to the interests of the merchant as well as the manufacturer, requires that material reductions in the import duties be prospective, and unless the present Congress shall dispose of the subject, the proposed reductions cannot properly be made to take effect at the period when the necessity for the revenue arising from present rates shall cease. It is therefore desirable, that arrangements be adopted at your present session, to relieve the people from unnecessary taxation, after the extinguishment of the public debt. In the exercise of that spirit of concession and conciliation which has distinguished the friends of our Union in all great emergencies, it is believed that this object may be effected without injury to any national interest.

In my annual message of December, 1829, I had the honor to recommend the adoption of a more liberal policy than that which then prevailed towards unfortunate debtors to the Government; and I deem it my duty again to invite your attention to this subject.

Actuated by similar views, Congress, at their last session, passed an act for the relief of certain insolvent debtors of the United States; but the provisions of that law have not been deemed such as were adequate to that relief to this unfortunate class of our fellow citizens, which may be safely extended to them. The points in which the law appears to be defective will be particularly communicated by the Secretary of the Treasury; and I take pleasure in recommending such an extension of its provisions as will unfetter the enterprise of a valuable portion of our citizens, and restore to them the means of usefulness to themselves and the community. While deliberating upon this subject, I would also recommend to your consideration, the propriety of so modifying the laws for enforcing the payment of debts due either to the public or to individuals suing in the courts of the United States, as to restrict the imprisonment of the person to cases of fraudulent concealment of property. The personal liberty of the citizen seems too sacred to be held, as in many cases it now is, at the will of a creditor to whom he is willing to surrender all the means he has of discharging his debt.

The reports from the Secretaries of the War and Navy Departments, and from the Postmaster General, which accompany this message, present satisfactory views of the operations of the Departments respectively under their charge; and suggest improvements which are worthy of, and to which I invite the serious attention of Congress. Certain defects and omissions having been discovered in the operation of the laws respecting Patents, they are pointed out in the accompanying report from the Secretary of State.

I have heretofore recommended amendments of the Federal Constitution, giving the election of President and Vice President to the people, and limiting the service of the former to a single term. So important do I consider these changes in our fundamental law, that I cannot, in accordance with my sense of duty, omit to press them upon the consideration of a new Congress. For my views more at large, as well in relation to these points as to the disqualification of Members of Congress to receive an office from a President in whose election they have had an official agency, which I proposed as a substitute, I refer you to my former messages.

Our system of public accounts is extremely complicated, and it is believed, may be much improved. Much of the present machinery, and a considerable portion of the expenditure of public money may be dispensed with, while greater facilities can be afforded to the liquidation of claims upon the Government, and an examination into their justice and legality, quite as efficient as the present, secured. With a view to a general reform in the system, I recommend the subject to the attention of Congress.

I deem it my duty again to call your attention to the condition of the District of Columbia. It was doubtless wise in the framers of our Constitution, to place the people of this District under the jurisdiction of the General Government; but, to accomplish the objects they had in view, it is not necessary that this people should be deprived of all the privileges of self-government. Independently of the difficulty of inducing the Representatives of distant States to turn their attention to projects of laws which are not of the highest interest to their constituents, they are not individually, nor in Congress collectively, well qualified to legislate over the local concerns of this District. Consequently, its interests are much neglected, and the people are almost afraid to present their grievances, lest a body, in which they are not represented, and which feels little sympathy in their local relations, should, in its attempt to make laws for them, do more harm than good. Governed by the laws of the States whence they were severed, the two shores of the Potomac within the ten miles square have different penal codes: not the present codes of Virginia and Maryland, but such as existed in those States at the time of the cession to the United States. As Congress will not form a new code, and as the people of the District cannot make one for themselves, they are virtually under two Governments. Is it not just to allow them at least a delegate in Congress, if not a local Legislature to make laws for the District, subject to the approval or rejection of Congress? I earnestly recommend the extension to them of every political right which their interests require, and which may be compatible with the Constitution.

The extension of the Judiciary system of the United States is deemed to be one of the duties of Government. One fourth of the States in the Union do not participate in the benefits of a Circuit Court. To the States of Indiana, Illinois, Missouri, Alabama, Mississippi, and Louisiana, admitted into the Union since the present Judicial system was organized, only a District Court has been allowed. If this be sufficient, then the Circuit Courts, already existing in eighteen States, ought to be abolished; if it be not sufficient, the defect ought to be remedied, and these States placed on the same footing with the other members of the Union. It was on this condition, and on this footing, that they entered the Union; and they may demand Circuit Courts as a matter, not of concession, but of right. I trust that Congress will not adjourn, leaving this anomaly in our system.

Entertaining the opinions heretofore expressed in relation to the Bank of the United States, as at present organized, I felt it my duty, in my former messages, frankly to disclose them, in order that the attention of the legislature and the people should be seasonably directed to that important subject, and that it might be considered and finally disposed of in a manner best calculated to promote the ends of the Constitution and subserve the public interests. Having thus conscientiously discharged a constitutional duty, I deem it proper, on this occasion, without a more particular reference to the views of the subject then expressed, to leave it for the present to the investigation of an enlightened people and their representatives.

In conclusion, permit me to invoke that Power which superintends all Governments, to infuse into your deliberations, at this important crisis of our history, a spirit of mutual forbearance and conciliation. In that spirit was our Union formed, and in that spirit must it be preserved.

ANDREW JACKSON.

REPORT OF THE SECRETARY OF WAR.

Department of War, November 21, 1831.

Sir: In obedience to your instructions, I have the honor to submit herewith a general view of the operations of this Department, and of the various branches of its administration together with the accompanying reports of the officers in charge of the different bureaus for the past year.

The plan of organization by which the great objects of public concern, committed to the War Department, are divided into different classes, and placed under the more immediate control of respectable and responsible officers is well calculated to promote fidelity, promptitude, and economy in the management of these important interests. By assigning to each office a particular branch of the service, experience in the general administration is acquired at the Department, and in the practical details at the places of execution. On this subject I have only to remark, that the importance of our Indian relations, both present and prospective, demands a similar arrangement for this portion of the public affairs. The existing organization rests upon executive authority, but the efficiency and responsibility of that department would be greatly promoted, if its duties were regulated by a legislative act. This measure has more than once been recommended in the reports of my predecessors, and I beg leave to add my conviction to theirs of its necessity.

The condition of the army is satisfactory in its materiel, and so far in its morale as depends upon the exertions of the officers. Its appropriate functions are performed honorably for itself, and usefully for the country. Although some of the details of the service are susceptible of improvement in their administration, and some in their legislation, still, in the general result, whether viewed as an arm of national defence, or as a depository of military knowledge and experience, it has attained the great objects for which it was raised and is maintained. It is efficient without being expensive, and adequate to the exigencies of our service without being dangerous. I refer to the report of the Major General commanding, for the detailed operations of the year.

The annual reports of this Department have already brought before the Government the subject of desertion; and I regret to state, that this serious evil not only continues but increases. Inquiries have been instituted into the causes of this offence, and the most efficient remedy, and much valuable information is contained in a report from the War Department of February 17, 1830. But no measures have been adopted to check a practice, which, from its extent and impunity, not only materially injures the service by the loss of the men and the consequent expense, but threatens in its progress, and by its example, to destroy that principle of fidelity which is, the only safe bond of connexion between the soldier and his country. In the present state of our martial law, and of its necessary administration there is in fact no adequate punishment for the crime of desertion. Confinement and employment at hard labor are the only efficient sentences, which military tribunals can inflict; and where a soldier is confined in a guard-house, and his companions stationed without to secure him, and with all the facilities of constant communication, we may well doubt whether his situation is so much more unpleasant than theirs, as to give to this mode of punishment any salutary effect upon the discipline of the army; and at all our posts, and particularly at those upon the inland border, the soldiers are generally employed either in the line of their duty or upon fatigue, and a sentence to hard labor subjects them to little more than the ordinary demands of the service.

Whether any system of moderate rewards will prevent this practice, may be doubted; but certainly the abolition of all efficient punishment, without providing any substitute to operate upon the pride and hopes of the soldier, is in fact to invite him to abandon his colors whenever the restraints of discipline cause temporary dissatisfaction.

To retain a part of the bounty and pay, and thereby to provide a fund for the use of a soldier when discharged, to reduce the period of service, and to increase the pay of the rank and file of the army, and particularly of the non-commissioned officers, are among the most prominent suggestions, which have been offered upon this subject.

The number of desertions in 1826, were 636; in 1827, 848; in 1828, 820; in 1829, 1,115; in 1830, 1,251. And in 1831 they will probably amount to 1,450.

An estimate has been prepared at the Adjutant General's office founded upon a minute examination and comparison of the various expenses incident to the maintenance of a soldier; and exhibiting the actual pecuniary loss of the Government arising from this cause.

The loss was for 1826, $54,393; for 1827, $61,344; for 1828, $63,137; for 1829, $98,345; for 1830, $102,087; and for 1831 probably $118,321.

The tabular statement* accompanying the report of the commanding general shows, that the pay of the non-commissioned officers, musicians, and privates, may be increased so as materially to improve their condition, and not exceed the aggregate amount of $85,920. The non-commissioned officers particularly are, in our service inadequately paid. Every military man is sensible of their importance to the character and efficiency of an army; and such inducements should be offered, as would ensure the engagement of competent men, qualified, by their principles, habits, and intelligence, to acquire the confidence and to command the respect of the soldiers. That this additional compensation would have a tendency to diminish the mischief of desertion, there is no doubt—whether in so great a degree as to save the whole sum proposed to be given, experience only can determine.

A very large proportion of all the crimes committed in the army may be traced to habits of intemperance. This vice is in fact the prevalent one of our soldiery. I am satisfied that ardent spirits should not form a component part of the ration. By issuing it, we furnish to those already accustomed to its use the means of vicious indulgence, and we invite those who are yet temperate, to acquire this destructive habit. It is certainly sufficient for all useful purposes, if there be in truth any utility in the consumption of ardent spirits, that the officers be authorized to grant permission for its purchase, in proper quantities, to those whose situation may require it, without the direct agency of the Government in allowing and providing it.

There were issued to the army, in 1830, 72,537 gallons of whiskey, at the cost of $22,132. If this sum were applied to the purchase of tea, coffee, and sugar, for the use of soldiers, their habits and morals would be greatly improved, and the discipline and respectability of the army promoted. The regulation of this Department, by which an offer is made to the soldier of commuting the whiskey ration by the payment of one cent, is productive of little advantage. In the estimate of the value of this part of the ration, reference has been made only to the actual average cost of the article, delivered in large quantities at the various posts. But this is unjust to the soldier. He estimates it very naturally at the retail price, averaging probably five cents, and the present offer of commutation is in fact to ask him to sell his whiskey for one fifth of its value. It is far better to leave the troops no choice, but to allow them a liberal compensation, and in such articles as will be most useful.

Extract from the remarks of the Adjutant General. "The aggregate amount lost by desertion for eight years, inclusive of December 31, 1830, amount to the sum of $515,866; the loss in 1829 is $98,345; and in 1830, $102,087. The average loss by desertion for the last two years is rather upwards of $100,000; the loss during the present year, (1831) will considerably exceed any previous year.

If $85,920 of the average annual amount, lost by desertion, were distributed to the enlistment of the army, by way of additional pay, it would be an annual expenditure less, by $15,000, than the sum now annually lost by the government by desertion.

"If the sum lost by desertion in 1830, ($102,087) be divided among the non-commissioned officers and privates of the army, (5,642) it will give to each, $1.80 per month; or $18.00 per annum.

"The average loss by each desertion for the year 1830, is estimated to be $81.60."

The American soldier is well paid, fed, and clothed; and, in the event of sickness or disability, ample provision is made for his support. But his moral culture is wholly neglected. There is no arrangement in our service for his mental or religious improvement. And there is perhaps no similar service, in which such a measure is more necessary. Many of the positions occupied by our troops are upon the verge of civilization, or beyond it. There, they are retained for years, and under circumstances, which, if not counteracted, almost necessarily lead to great demoralization. None of the ordinary means of instruction are within their reach, and neither their habits or principles can be improved or fortified by those institutions which are elsewhere so generally established, and so useful. Independently any obligation which may be supposed to exist on the part of the Government, to provide for the moral as well as the physical wants of a class of men, who, in devoting themselves to the service of the country, become unable to provide for their own wants, it is certain, that as a question of expediency, this measure is recommended by powerful considerations. Where moral and religious principles are practically acknowledged, their sanctions would add validity to the obligations voluntarily assumed by the soldier, and his duties will be performed with more fidelity and alacrity. As he becomes a better man, he will become a better soldier. Discipline and subordination will be promoted, punishments diminished, and all the details of the service will feel the spirit of improvement. I am satisfied that the appointment of chaplains, and their employment at such of our military posts, as from their position and the strength of the garrisons may seem to call for such a measure, would be productive of great advantages to the service; and to the soldiers individually the measure would be equally beneficial. Reproofs and exhortations in life, and the consolation religion in death, would be freely offered to them. The experiment, I think, is worthy trial; and the expense can scarcely be placed in fair competition with an object, which promises such useful results for the present improvement and future happiness of the soldiers.

The various departments of the staff of the army have performed with fidelity their accustomed routine of duties. In the three great divisions of efficiency, economy, and accountability, the present mode of administration seems well adapted to the nature of our service. The several tabular statements accompanying this report exhibit the satisfactory manner in which the public funds have been expended and accounted for. Nor is there any reason to believe, that the slightest loss will occur from the fiscal operations of the year. A system, whose effects are thus beneficial, must be not only safe in itself, but safely administered. And for this administration we are indebted to the superintending care of the several bureaus, and to the various officers employed under them, throughout the country. It is evident, that a fund of knowledge has been provided, which cannot fail to be useful in any future exigency. Armies may be suddenly raised, and discipline in some measure introduced, by great exertions, and in great emergencies. The experience of other nations and of our own, too, has demonstrated, that the peculiar information, upon which depends the subsistence, the health, and the movement of troops, and the supply of their necessary matériel can only be acquired by time and experience. The disasters and prodigal expenditures in the beginning of the late war furnished a memorable lesson upon this subject, which it is hoped will not be forgotten, as we recede from the period of their occurrence. Our present organization is small enough for the wants of the service, and yet such is its nature, that it may be indefinitely extended, as the pressure of circumstances may require, ensuring in every branch of the service a judicious system of administration, and experienced officers to direct and apply it.

The Military Academy has existed sufficiently long, under its present mode of instruction, to enable the Government and the country to form a correct estimate of its value, both with relation to the cadets themselves, and the character of the army. Of 560 officers, having rank in the line, and now in service, 404 were educated at that institution. These young men have been prepared by a rigid and judicious course of instruction and discipline for the various duties of their profession. Six hundred and sixty have entered the army, of whom but thirteen have been dismissed; and during the present year only two have been brought before courts martial, and they upon charges not affecting their moral character.

These facts are honorable and decisive proofs of general good conduct, when the high state of discipline and the course of vigilant inspection in our service are taken into view. In the annual reports of the Visitors at West Point, is exhibited the result of the most careful observations, made by persons competent to estimate, and prepared to scrutinize the claim and condition of the institution. For some years these reports have borne unequivocal evidence to the fidelity and ability of the superintendent, and the academic staff generally, and to the proficiency and correct deportment of the pupils. The record which is kept of their progress and conduct, the spirit of emulation necessarily excited, and the judicious plan of rewards, which are offered, by the publication of the names of the most distinguished individuals, and by their admission into the army in the order of merit, are powerful incentives to exertion, and, when combined with the strict and impartial examinations to which all must submit, can scarcely fail to secure for the service of their country such, and such only, as are qualified to be useful.

The science of war is an advancing one. In Europe, where peace is seldom long maintained, a large portion of the talent and intelligence of the community is devoted to the study, and to the consideration and suggestion of changes and improvements in all the branches of their military establishments, whether they relate to the operations in the field, to the various supplies, or to the necessary course of administration. We must look to those tations for the benefit of their experience. And our progress in the elements of military knowledge will depend, in a great measure, upon the careful preparation and education of the young men, who are annually appointed in our service. Our local position, as well as our free institutions, may delay, but we have no right to expect they will prevent, the occurrence of war. As this event may happen, it is the part of true wisdom to be prepared for it, as far as preparation can be made without too great a sacrifice. Our army is barely sufficient to furnish small garrisons for the fortifications upon the seaboard, and to hold in check the numerous and restless Indian tribes upon our inland frontier. Under these circumstances, the practical duties of the profession are acquired; and as long as the officers enter the service, with a well grounded knowledge of its principles, we may look to be army as the depository of a fund of information upon this important subject, which will enable the Government to diffuse it among the community upon the approach of danger. By assigning a portion of the officers, previously in service, to new regiments and corps, these will soon acquire a competent knowledge of their duties, both in subordination and discipline. The great objects of present economy and future security can in no other mode be so certainly attained. When we advert to the comparative effects of training young men for the course of life before them, or of selecting them indiscriminately for the army, without reference to previous pursuits, it will be manifest, that the present system alone ensure the attainment of the important objects, connected with our military establishment.

It has been stated, that the number of cadets allowed at the Military Academy is 250. There are in the line of the army 512 officers of all descriptions. Of these, on the first day of November, there were present for duty 303, of whom 19 were field and 284 company officers. There were 66 sick and on furlough. And 143 were detached upon various staff duties, including the regular staff departments of the army, objects of internal improvement, and the emigration of the Indians. The number of companies being 106, there were not three officers to each company. Taking into view the casualties of the service, there ought not to be less than that number at all times with their companies. The law provides, that there shall be three to each company of infantry, and five to each company of artillery. In addition to these, the act of April 29th, 1832, allows one supernumerary brevet 2d lieutenant to be attached to each company. Of these, there are in service 93, leaving 13 vacancies to be filled from the graduates of the Military Academy for 1832. The number of the average annual vacancies in the army for five years has been 23, and of the graduates to fill these, 40. There may, therefore, at the next examination, be forty cad to candidates, for appointment, and but 35 vacancies to be filled. I would suggest the expediency of adding 34 to the number of brevet 2d lieutenants, and leaving them unattached to do duty whenever required. Every company may thus have three officers at all times present, to the great advantage of the service.

The suggestions he has made, appear to me worthy of consideration: and I particularly recommend to your notice the proposition for a new organization of the corps of engineers. The views of this Department upon that subject, were expressed in a report of January 13th, 1831, in answer to a call of the House of Representatives, and in those views I fully concur. The measure is required by the public interest.

Unless provision is soon made for the repair and preservation of the road constructed by the United States from Cumberland to the Ohio river, that expensive and useful work will be ruined. Many parts of it are now so seriously injured as to render travelling difficult, and sometimes dangerous. The destruction of this great connecting link between the Atlantic and the western States, which with a light transit duty and a proper system of administration, would last for ages, cannot be anticipated without great concern. The continuation of this road in the State of Ohio is free from this danger. With the assent of the General Government, that State has established toll gates, and levies a moderate duty upon that part of the road within her jurisdiction, which is finished.

I consider it my duty to bring this matter before you, in the hope that it will engage the attention of Congress, and that a similar system for the preservation of the road from Cumberland to the Ohio river will be adopted. If it were placed by the General Government in proper repair, and then surrendered to the States respectively, through whose territories it passes, under the same conditions, as were annexed to the cession of the road in Ohio, there is reason to believe, that the arrangement would receive the sanction of those States, and that a permanent system and adequate means would be provided for the preservation of this work, and in a manner not burthensome to the communication upon it. If this be not done, or some other expedient adopted, the road will soon fall into a state of entire disrepair.

By an executive regulation of the 21st of June, 1831, the topographical corps was separated from the Engineer Department, and now constitutes a distinct bureau. The duties of this corps are important to the country: and if its organization be rendered commensurate, a mass of valuable materials, exhibiting a general and accurate view of the geographical outlines of the Union, will be collected, to be used for any of the great purposes of peace or war. In a report from this Department, of January, 1831, this subject was considered, and the necessity of the measure stated and enforced. To that report, containing valuable suggestions, I take the liberty of referring.

A minute knowledge of the features of a country is essential to any plan of military operations; and this knowledge should be gathered in a season of leisure, and deposited in archives. In Europe, it is considered one of the most important elements of military science, and upon its contributions have often depended the efforts of a whole campaign. All the surveys made by the topographical corps are returned to the depot in this Department, where they can be detached or combined, as it may become necessary to exhibit views more or less general. These surveys dissecting the country in all directions, and particularly along its streams or routes, where roads already are, or probably will be established, present those features, which are most important to the operations of armies. A general survey of our coasts, both Atlantic and interior, is demanded by considerations of national interest as well as of character. Arrangements for the former were made some years since and expensive instruments procured, which are yet in the possession of the Government. The work was actually commenced, but was abandoned before much progress had been made. If this operation were resumed, and committed to one of the scientific corps of the army, its constitution would prevent the recurrence of those circumstances, by which the abandonment of the project may be attributed. Our own lakes are but imperfectly known to us, and the advance of the settlement and the extension of commerce require, that this defect should be supplied. Labors of this nature have engaged the attention of the most enlightened Governments, and the materials become a part of the general stock of public knowledge. The necessity of peculiar instruction for officers devoted to these duties, both in the scientific principles and in the practical details, is well illustrated in the report from the Topographical Office. Some of the operations require an intimate knowledge of the most abstruse investigations of the present day, in mathematical and physical science; and we shall in vain look for their accomplishment, unless the Government make provision for the measure.

To the Ordnance Department is committed the duty of providing and preserving the necessary armament for the land service of the United States. The trust is a responsible one, requiring fidelity in the administration, and practical as well as scientific knowledge in the execution. The expenditure for these objects exceeds $900,000 annually, and the value of the accumulated property equals twelve and a half millions. But the nature of the service gives it a still deeper interest, than the pecuniary considerations connected with it. Unless our arms are well fabricated and preserved, and in sufficient abundance, and unless we keep pace with the improvements, which modern science and ingenuity are making, the consequences may hereafter prove disastrous. The necessary provision for these objects cannot be made without much time and experience, and that they may be ready for war they must be procured in peace. A stable and efficient organization is therefore essential to the Ordnance Corps; and in the report of the officer at the head of it, will be found his views of its present condition. I recommend the subject to your favorable notice. The suggestions are the result of much experience, and present in a feasible manner the defects of the existing system, and the meliorations that are required. I am satisfied, that the adoption of the measures proposed would give renewed efficiency to the operations of this section of the public interest, and more economy in its expenditures.

A commission of experienced officers will be directed to investigate the subject; and to report their views concerning the various matters connected with it; and particularly with respect to the patterns and construction of the small arms and cannon, and any alterations which experience may have indicated. Their report, when received, will be laid before you. There have been some examinations into the condition of this branch of the national defense, with the view of ascertaining the supplies in service and in depot, and determining the quantity yet required to meet the demands of a prudent forecast. The result I shall submit for your consideration.

The United States have now in serviceable condition about 465,000 muskets. The annual demand to supply the necessary loss in the army and the militia, and to furnish the issues to the respective States, is 18,300. The number manufactured in the public armories is about 25,000, and at private works about 11,000, making a total of 36,000, at the average cost of twelve dollars each. We had at the commencement of the late war 240,000 muskets in depot, and during its progress 60,000 were made and purchased. At its termination, there were but 20,000 at the various arsenals, and many of those in the hands of the troops were unserviceable. Eight years were then required to replace the number lost during the war.

From 1802 to 1814 there were 3,956,257 small arms of all descriptions, procured for the French service.

The average number of small arms annually fabricated in the French arsenals from 1805 to 1814, was 219,372.

In the British arsenals, from 1802 to 1814, 261,947.

The stock on hand in Great Britain, in 1817, in depot, was 818,282

Total, 1,019,256

The number in depot in France, in 1811, was 600,000, not including the great number in service.

These statements may be useful in determining the proper number of small arms, which ought to be provided in this country. Being almost imperishable, when properly secured and preserved, their accumulation occasions no actual loss, as the time must, in all probability, come when they will be wanted.

Considering the nature of our service, requiring, as it does, an unusual expenditure of these articles, in consequence of the great proportion of militia we employ, and the system of rotation by which their services are regulated, and great losses consequently occasioned, and also the necessity of large deposits in different sections of such an extensive country, each of which should be adequate to any probable emergency, it is evident that our stock of small arms should at all times be large. Whether the quantity now on hand be sufficiently so, is for Congress to determine.

There are now 623 cannon of various calibres, for field service. And there are at the arsenals and in the old fortifications 1,165. But these cannon are all of antiquated patterns, and, with the exception of the six-pounders, amounting to 344, and a few of the heavier pieces, are considered unserviceable. There have been procured for the armament of the new fortifications 1,214 cannon of the improved pattern.

The old fortifications will require, (probably.) - - - - - 646

The new, already completed. - - - - - 2,587

Those contemplated by the board of engineers, a part of which are now constructing, 4,045
Besides these, proper field trains, deposited in different sections of the Union, and sufficiently large to meet probable contingencies, may be estimated at - - - 850.

The average cost of our cannon is $5 94 per hundred pounds, which gives the following prices for those of different calibres. For 42-pounders, $520; for 32-pounders, $450; for 24-pounders, $330; for 18-pounders, $245; for 12-pounders, $150; for 6-pounders, $70.

It is estimated that an iron cannon will not safely bear more than 1,200 discharges with the service charge, after which it should be broken up.

The United States have no armories for the fabrication of cannon. The practice for some years has been to make contracts with the owners of the four foundries at Richmond, Georgetown, Pittsburg, and West Point, to the amount of the annual appropriation, allowing about an equal proportion to each, and paying such price as the Ordnance Department, on the best information, judge reasonable.

This procedure has been repeatedly stated in the annual reports to Congress, together with the reasons which led to it. These are founded in the capital and experience required to conduct this business; in the necessity of depending, in some degree, upon the integrity and character of the manufacturers, as there may be defects in the piece not easily discoverable, owing to the necessity of mixing together iron of different qualities; and in the belief, that if a general competition for these supplies were excited, the existing establishments would be broken down, and others endeavour to take their places, which would either fail from similar causes, or furnish cannon unfit for service, and thus leave the Government, at some critical period, without the means of procuring this indispensable arm of defence. The provisions of the acts of Congress of March 3d, 1809, seem, however, to present serious objections to this course; and I bring the subject before you at this time, that it may be fully considered.

It appears to me, that a public armory for the fabrication of cannon is required by obvious considerations. By forming such an establishment, the necessary experience and artisans would be provided, and such supplies of heavy ordnance manufactured as the Government might direct. The actual value of the article would be ascertained, and contracts with individuals could be formed with a full knowledge of the circumstances. There would be no danger of combinations, nor would any injury result from fair competition. The supplies might be so controlled as to leave no fear of a deficiency in the quality or quantity of this essential arm of defence.

In a report of the Surgeon General will be found a review of the operations of the medical department, and the propositions submitted by him for its better organization. Fourteen thousand dollars are annually expended for the employment of private physicians, because the corps is not sufficiently numerous to discharge the duties demanded of it. We have sixty-four military stations and recruiting rendezvous requiring surgeons, and we have in service but fifty-three surgeons and assistants. There is no economy in the present arrangement, nor is it advantageous to the public interest. An increase of the corps, as recommended by the surgeon general, is evidently required.

The considerations urged by him for an addition to the pay of surgeons and assistants, are certainly forcible. There is no portion of the army, whose compensation is so inadequate, nor is there any, which presents less prospects of reward. There are but two grades of rank in our medical service, and the emolument of the highest is but little superior to that of a captain.

It is due to the army, that the subject of brevet commissions should be placed before you. So far as respects the services and compensation of officers holding those commissions, the present regulations are just, and well calculated to prevent any injury to the public service. No officer can receive the pay of his brevet rank unless serving in that capacity when on duty and having a command according to his brevet rank. There are twenty-nine officers in the army now drawing brevet pay.

These brevet commissions presuppose experience in the officer, and are founded upon the presumption, that circumstances may arise when his services may be useful in a more extensive sphere than that in which, by his lineal commission, he is required to act; and these circumstances will oftener be found in our service, than in any other. Our regular troops and militia must frequently act together. When thus co-operating, the officers of the regular army take rank of all militia officers of the same grade, whatever may be the date of their respective commissions. This rule is highly beneficial to the public interest, because, without creating invidious distinctions, it gives to experience its proper weight. By granting brevet commissions, after ten years' service in one grade, agreeably to the present rule, experienced officers will be provided for command upon detachment, or at posts where the objects are important or the danger imminent.

The construction, which has been given to the law upon this subject, has restricted the granting of brevet commissions upon prior ones to those cases only where ten years' services have been rendered under such prior commissions. There may be some doubt respecting the correctness of this view, and also the expediency of the restriction.

These commissions, except in a few instances stated, and those very proper, occasion no expense to the Government. They are in their operation rewards for past good conduct, and incentives to future. They cannot be abused, for ten years' services certainly qualify an officer for a higher grade; and to attain by brevet promotion the rank of brigadier general from the commencement of the term of a captain, requires a period of forty years. And if to this be added the necessary progress through the two lower grades of first and second lieutenant, the prospect of a young man, on entering our service, is not very flattering. Nor has he much to hope from his pay. It is barely sufficient to enable the officers, with rigid economy, to live respectably; and few of them leave for their children any inheritance but a good name.

It is important that a just pride of character, personal and professional, should be encouraged in a class of men, whose usefulness depends essentially upon the cultivation of such a feeling. This system of promotion, so useful in war and economical in peace, offers honorable objects of ambition, and cannot fail to stimulate the exertions of the officers of the army.

The situation of the militia demands the attention of the Government. Owing to defects in the system itself, or in the mode of its administration, public confidence has been impaired in the efficacy of that great branch of the national defence. This is to be regretted; for, although this force cannot be regarded as our most important means of safety in the event of war, it is still a valuable auxiliary, and one which the nature of our institutions, opposed as they are to a large standing army, renders indispensable. The power of organizing, arming, and disciplining the militia is granted by the Constitution to Congress; and if the laws upon this subject are inadequate, or inadequately executed, it is for the wisdom of that body to apply the remedy.

If this great defensive force be called out under proper circumstances, it may contribute, essentially, to the security of the country. In recurring to our own experience, we find many instances of the courage and devotedness of our militia; and the two battles that opened and closed our military history furnish practical illustrations of the value of this institution, and of its powerful effects in situations favorable to its operation. The National Guard of France, upon which the fate of that interesting country seems to depend, is but a local militia, constituted like our volunteer companies, but with a more efficient organization. By anticipating too much, however, from our militia force, we prepare the way for disappointment; and this was the error of the late war: in consequence of which, our attention has been probably withdrawn from the value of the system itself. A regular force is indispensable to the vigorous prosecution of any permanent military operations, offensive or defensive. But it may be aided by irregular troops, and its place also supplied, until measures for providing it can be adopted. We cannot expect, that the militia drill, upon the present system, will give much instruction. The time and attention devoted to it are utterly insufficient for such a purpose. Nor is it probable, that enough of either will be granted in time of peace, to convey much military knowledge to the great body of our citizens. It is still important, however, that a due organization should be preserved, and a portion of time devoted to this duty. In the most unexpected and serious emergency, the national strength could not be called into action, unless individuals were assigned to particular classes, either local or personal, and knew their situation; and unless there were officers to direct the movements. And this arrangement has also a tendency to preserve and diffuse much military knowledge; for many will always direct their attention to the subject, led by inclination as well as duty to acquire information, and to qualify themselves for the various functions required to be performed. Our countrymen, generally, are accustomed to the use of fire arms from early youth; and in the management of these they have little need of instruction. In devoting the field days, therefore, to the simpler evolutions, some knowledge will be gained, and the whole community will be practically reminded of the claim, which may be made upon their services. They will feel that his civil relations are not the only ones which exist between the citizen and his country, but that he is bound by other obligations, and that the defence of all is entrusted to all.

In 1826, a board of officers, selected from the regular army and the militia, was convened at the seat of Government, and instructed to take into consideration the militia system generally, and to suggest such alterations as might appear to them useful. This board combined much intelligence and experience; and their report is an able and interesting one. I advert to it, in the hope, that this subject may engage the attention of Congress, and in the conviction, that the plan of organization recommended by that board is the only one, which offers any real prospect of improvement or efficiency.

The condition and prospects of the aboriginal tribes within the limits of the United States are yet the subjects of anxious solicitude to the Government. Circumstances have occurred within a few years, which have produced important changes in the intercourse between them and us. In some of the States, they have been brought within the operation of the ordinary municipal laws, and their regulations have been abrogated by legislative enactments. This procedure renders most of the provisions of the various acts of Congress upon this subject inoperative; and a crisis in our Indian affairs has evidently arrived, which calls for the establishment of a system of policy adapted to the existing state of things, and calculated to fix upon a permanent basis the future destiny of the Indians. Whatever change may be contemplated in their condition or situation, no one will advocate the employment of force or improper influence in effecting it. It is due to the character of the Government and the feelings of the country, not less than to the moral and physical imbecility of this unhappy race, that a spirit of kindness and forbearance should mark the whole course of our intercommunication with them. The great object, after satisfying ourselves what would best ensure their permanent welfare, should be to satisfy them of the integrity of our views, and of the wisdom of the course recommended to them. There is enough in the retrospect for serious reflection on our part, and for unpleasant recollection on theirs; and it is only by a dispassionate examination of the subject, and by prudent and timely measures, that we can hope to repair the errors of the past by the exertions of the future.

The Indians, who are placed in immediate contact with the settled portions of the United States, have now the alternative presented to them, of remaining in their present positions, or of migrating to the country west of the Mississippi. If they are induced to prefer the former, their political condition becomes a subject of serious consideration. They must either retain all those institutions, which constitute them a peculiar people, both socially and politically, or they must become a portion of that great community which is gathering round them, responsible to its laws, and looking to them for protection.

Can they expect to maintain that quasi independence they have heretofore enjoyed? and could they so maintain it, would the privilege be beneficial to them?

The right to extend their laws over all persons, living within their boundaries, has been claimed and exercised by many of the States. The Executive of the United States has, on full consideration, decided that there is no power in that department to interpose any obstacle to the assumption of this authority. As upon this co-ordinate branch of the Government devolves the execution of the laws, and particularly many of the most important provisions in the various acts regulating intercourse with the Indians, it is difficult to conceive how these provisions can be enforced, after the President has determined they have been abrogated by a state of things inconsistent with their obligations. How prosecutions can be conducted, trespassers removed by military power, and other acts performed, which require the co-operation of the Executive, either in their initiation or progress.

I do not presume to discuss this question. I find it determined, and the settled policy of the Government already in operation. Whatever diversity of opinion there may be upon the subject, those who are most opposed to these views will probably admit, that the question is a doubtful one, complicated in its relations, and pregnant with serious consequences. The claim of exemption from the operation of the State laws, which is presented in favor of the Indians, must rest upon the Constitution of the United States, upon natural right, or upon conventional engagements. If upon the former, it may be doubted whether that instrument contain any grant of authority to the General Government, which necessarily divests the State Legislatures of their jurisdiction over any class of people, living within their respective limits. The two provisions, which can alone bear upon the subject, seem so have far different objects in view. If the claim rest upon natural right, it may be doubted whether the condition and institutions of this rude people do not give to the civilized communities around whom and among whom they live, the right of guardianship over them; and whether this view is not fortified by the practice of all other civilized nations under similar circumstances—a practice, which, in its extent and exercise, has varied from time to time, as the relative circumstances of the parties have varied, but of whose limitations the civilized communities have been and must be the judges. And, besides, if the Indian tribes are independent of the State authorities, on account of the natural and relative rights of both, these tribes are equally independent of the authorities of the United States. The claim, upon this ground, places the parties in the attitude of entire independence; for the question then is not how we have divided our political power between the confederated Government and its members, and to which we have entrusted the exercise of this supervisory authority, but whether the laws of nature give to either any authority upon the subject. But, if the claim rest upon alleged conventional engagements, it may then be doubted whether in all our treaties with the Indian tribes there is any stipulation, incompatible with the exercise of the power of legislation over them. For if there were, the legislative power of Congress, as well as that of the respective States, would be annihilated, and the treaties alone would regulate the intercourse between the parties. But on a careful investigation, it will probably be found, that, in none of our treaties with the Indian tribes, is there any guaranty of political rights incompatible with the exercise of the power of legislation. These instruments are generally either treaties of peace or of cession. The former restore and secure to the Indians interests of which they were deprived by conquest, and the latter define the boundaries of cessions or reservations, and prescribe the terms and consideration, and regulate generally the principles of the new compact. In both, every sound rule of construction requires, that the terms used should be expounded agreeably to the nature of the subject-matter, and to the relations previously subsisting between the parties. If general expressions are not controlled by these principles, then the term "their land," or, as it is elsewhere called, "their hunting grounds," instead of meaning what our own negotiators and the Indians themselves understood, that possessory right, which they have heretofore enjoyed, would at once change our whole system of policy, and leave them as free to sell, as it would individuals or nations to buy, those large unappropriated districts, which are rather visited than possessed by the Indians.

It may be remarked that all rights secured by treaty stipulations are wholly independent of this question of jurisdiction. If the Indians are subject to the legislative authority of the United States, that authority will no doubt be exercised so as not to contravene those rights. If they are subject to the respective States, such, too, will be the course of legislation over them. And if, unadvisedly, any right should be impaired, the Indians have the same resort as our own citizens to the tribunals of justice for redress; for the law, while it claims their obedience, provides for their security. The supremacy of the State Governments is neither inconsistent with our obligations to the Indians, nor are these necessarily impaired by it. It may be difficult to define precisely the nature of their possessory right, but no one will contend that it gives them the absolute title of the land with all its attributes; and every one will probably concede that they are entitled to as much as is necessary to their comfortable subsistence. If we have entered into any stipulations with them, of which, however, I am not aware, inconsistent with the limited powers of the Government, or interfering with paramount obligations, the remedy is obvious. Let ample compensation be made to them by the United States, in a spirit of good faith and liberality. The question would be one, not of pecuniary amount, but of national character and national obligations.

That we may neither deceive ourselves nor the Indians, it becomes us to examine the actual state of things, and to view these as they are, and as they are likely to be. Looking at the circumstances attending this claim of exemption on the one side, and of supremacy on the other, is it probable that the Indians can succeed in the establishment of their pretensions? The nature of the question, doubtful, to say the least of it; the opinion of the Executive; the practice of the older States, and the claims of the younger ones; the difficulties which would attend the introduction into our system of a third government, complicated in its relations, and indefinite in its principles; public sentiment, naturally opposed to any reduction of territorial extent or political power; and the obvious difficulties inseparable from the consideration of such a great political question, with regard to the tribunal, and the trial, the judgment and the process; present obstacles which must all be overcome before this claim can be enforced.

But could the tribes, and the remnants of tribes, east of the Mississippi succeed in the prosecution of this claim, would the issue be beneficial to them, immediately or remotely?

We have every reason to believe it would not; and this conclusion is founded on the condition and character of the Indians, and on the result of the efforts, which have been made by them, and for them, to resist the operation of the causes that yet threaten their destruction.

I need not stop to illustrate these positions. They are connected with the views, which will be found in the sequel of this report. And it is not necessary to embarrass a subject already too comprehensive.

A change of residence, therefore from their present positions to the regions west of the Mississippi, presents the only hope of permanent establishment and improvement. That it will be attended with inconveniences and sacrifices, no one can doubt. The associations, which bind the Indians to the land of their forefathers are strong and enduring; and these must be broken by their migration. But they are also broken by our citizens, who every day encounter all the difficulties of similar changes in the pursuit of the means of support. And the experiments, which have been made, satisfactorily show, that, by proper precautions and liberal appropriations, the removal and establishment of the Indians can be effected with little comparative trouble to them or us. Why, then, should the policy of this measure be disputed, or its adoption opposed? The whole subject has materially changed, even within a few years; and the imposing considerations it now presents, and which are every day gaining new force, call upon the Government and the country to determine what is required on our part, and what course shall be recommended to the Indians. If they remain, they must decline, and eventually disappear. Such is the result of all experience. If they remove, they may be comfortably established, and their moral and physical condition meliorated. It is certainly better for them to meet the difficulties of removal, with the probability of an adequate and final reward, than, yielding to their constitutional apathy, to sit still and perish.

The great moral debt we owe to this unhappy race is universally felt and acknowledged. Diversities of opinion exist respecting the proper mode of discharging this obligation, but its validity is not denied. And there certainly are difficulties which may well call for discussion and consideration.

For more than two centuries we have been placed in contact with the Indians. And if this long period has been fruitless in useful results, it has not been so in experiments, having in view their improvement. Able men have been investigating their condition, and good men attempting to improve it. But all these labors have been as unsuccessful in the issue as many of them were laborious and expensive in their progress.

The work has been aided by Governments and communities, by public opinion, by the obligations of the law, and by the sanction of religion. But its history furnishes abundant evidence of entire failure, and every thing around us upon the frontiers confirms its truth. The Indians have either receded as our settlements advanced, and united their fragments with some kindred tribe, or they have attempted to establish themselves upon reservations, in the vain hope of resisting the pressure upon them, and of preserving their peculiar institutions. Those, who are nearest to us, have generally suffered most severely by the debasing effects of ardent spirits, and by the loss of their own principles of restraint, few as these are without the acquisition of ours; and almost all of them have disappeared, crushed by the onward course of events, or driven before them. Not one instance can be produced in the whole history of the intercourse between the Indians and the white men, where the former have been able, in districts surrounded by the latter, to withstand successfully the progress of those causes, which have elevated one of these races and depressed the other. Such a monument of former successful exertion does not exist.

These remarks apply to the efforts, which have been heretofore made, and whose history and failure are known to us. But the subject has been lately revived with additional interest, and is now prosecuted with great zeal and exertion; whether with equal effect, time must show. That most of those engaged in this labour are actuated by pure and disinterested motives, I do not question. And, if in their estimate of success, they place too high a value upon appearances, the error is natural to persons zealously engaged in a task calculated to enlist their sympathies, and awaken their feelings, and has been common to all, who have preceded them in this labor of philanthropy, and who, from time to time, have indulged in anticipations of the most signal success, only to be succeeded by disappointment and despondency.

That these exertions have recently been productive of some advantage, may well be admitted. A few have probably been reclaimed from abandoned habits, and some, perhaps, have really appreciated the inestimable value of the doctrines which have been taught them. I can speak from personal observation only of the northern and northwestern tribes. Among them, I am apprehensive the benefits will be found but few and temporary. Of the condition of the Cherokees, who are said to have made greater advances than any of their kindred race, I must judge from such information as I have been able to procure. Owing to the prevalence of slavery and other peculiar causes among them, a number of the half-breeds and their connexions, and perhaps a few others, have acquired property, and with it some education and information. But I believe the great mass of the tribe is living in ignorance and poverty, subject to the influence of the principal men, and submitting to a state of things, with which they are dissatisfied, and which offers them no rational prospect of stability and improvement.

The failure, which has attended the efforts heretofore made, and which will probably attend all conducted upon similar principles, may be attributed partly to the inherent difficulty of the undertaking, resulting from characteristics peculiar to the Indians, and partly from the mode in which the operations have been conducted.

Without entering into a question which opens a wide field for inquiry, it is sufficient to observe that our primitive people, as well in their habits and opinions as in their customs and pursuits, offer obstacles almost insurmountable to any considerable and immediate change. Indolent in his habits, the Indian is opposed to labor; improvident in his mode of life, he has little foresight in providing, or care in preserving. Taught from infancy to reverence his own traditions and institutions, he is satisfied of their value, and dreads the anger of the Great Spirit, if he should depart from the customs of his fathers. Devoted to use of ardent spirits, he abandons himself to its indulgence without restraint. War and hunting are his only occupations. He can endure, without complaining, the extremity of human suffering; and if he cannot overcome the evils of his situation, he submits to them without repining. He attributes all the misfortunes of his race to the white man, and looks with suspicion upon the offers of assistance that are made to him. These traits of character, though not universal, are yet general; and the practical difficulty they present, in changing the condition of such a people, is to satisfy them of our sincerity and the value of the aid we offer; to hold out to them motives for exertion; to call into action some powerful feeling, which shall counteract the tendency of previous impressions. It is under such circumstances, and with these difficulties in view, that the Government has been called upon to determine what arrangements shall be made for the permanent establishment of the Indians. Shall they be advised to remain or remove? If the former, their fate is written in the annals of their race; if the latter, we may yet hope to see them renovated in character and condition by our example and instruction, and by their exertions.

But, to accomplish this, they must first be placed beyond the reach of our settlements, with such checks upon their disposition to hostility as may be found necessary, and with such aid, moral, intellectual, and pecuniary, as may teach them the value of our improvements, and the reality of our friendship. With these salutary precautions, much should then be left to themselves, to follow such occupations in the forest or the field as they may choose, without too much interference. Time and prosperity must be the great agents in their melioration. Nor have we any reason to doubt but that such a condition would be attended with its full share of happiness; nor that their exertions would be stimulated by the securty of their position, and by the new prospects before them. By encouraging the severity of soil, sufficient tracts might be assigned to all disposed to cultivate them; and, by timely assistance, the younger class might be brought to seek in their farms a less precarious subsistence than is furnished by the chase. Their physical comforts being increased, and the desire of acquisition brought into action, a moral stimulus would be felt by the youthful portion of the community. New wants would appear, and new means of gratifying them; and the great work of improvement would thus commence, and, commencing, would go on.

To its aid, the truth of religion, together with a knowledge of the simple mechanic arts and the rudiments of science, should then be brought: but if our dependence be first placed upon these, we must fail, as all others have failed, who have gone before us in this field of labor. And we have already fallen into this error of adapting our efforts to a state of society, which is probably remote among the Indians, in withdrawing so many of the young men from their friends, and educating them at our schools. They are there taught various branches of learning, and, at some of these institutions, a partial knowledge of the mechanic arts, and of the principles of agriculture. But after this course of instruction is completed, what are these young men to do? If they remain among the whites, they find themselves the members of a peculiar caste, and look round them in vain for employment and encouragement; if they return to their countrymen, their acquirements are useless: these are neither understood nor valued; and, with the exception of a few articles of iron, which they procure from the traders, the common work of our mechanics is useless to them. I repeat, what is a young man, who has been thus educated, to do? He has no means of support, no instruments of agriculture, no domestic animals, no improved farm. Taken in early life from his own people, he is no hunter; he cannot find in the chase the means of support or exchange: and, that under such circumstances, he should abandon himself to a life of intemperance, can scarcely excite our surprise, however it must our regret. I have been earnestly asked by these young men, how they were to live; and I have felt that a satisfactory answer was beyond my reach. To the Government only can they look for relief, and if this should be furnished, though in a moderate degree, they might still become useful and respectable; their example would be encouraging to others, and they would form the best instructors for their brethren.

The general details of a plan for the permanent establishment of the Indians west of the Mississippi, and for their proper security, would require much deliberation; but there are some fundamental principles, obviously arising out of the nature of the subject, which, when once adopted, would constitute the best foundation for our exertions, and the hopes of the Indians.

1. A solemn declaration, similar to that already inserted in some of the treaties, that the country assigned to the Indians shall be theirs as long as they or their descendants may occupy it, and a corresponding determination that our settlements shall not spread over it; and every effort should be used to satisfy the Indians of our sincerity and of their security. Without this indispensable preliminary, and without full confidence on their part in our intentions, and in our abilities to give these effect, their change of position would bring no change of circumstances.

2. A determination to exclude all ardent spirits from their new country. This will no doubt be difficult; but a system of surveillance upon the borders, and of proper police and penalties, will do much towards the extermination of an evil, which, where it exists to any considerable extent, is equally destructive of their present comfort and their future happiness.

3. The employment of an adequate force in their immediate vicinity, and a fixed determination to suppress, at all hazards, the slightest attempt at hostilities among themselves.

So long as a passion for war, fostered and encouraged, as it is, by their opinions and habits is allowed free scope for exercise, it will prove the master spirit, controlling, if not absorbing, all other considerations. And if in checking this evil some examples should become necessary, they would be sacrifices to humanity, and not to severity.

4. Encouragement to the severity of property, and such provision for its security, as their own regulations do not afford, and as may be necessary to its enjoyment.

5. Assistance to all who may require it in the opening of farms, and in procuring domestic animals and instruments of agriculture.

6. Leaving them in the enjoyment of their peculiar institutions, as far as may be compatible with their own safety and ours, and with the great objects of their prosperity and improvement.

7. The eventual employment of persons competent to instruct them, as far and as fast as their progress may require, and in such manner as may be most useful to them.

Arrangements have been made on fair and equitable terms with the Shawnees and Senecas of Lewistown, with the Shawnees of Wapaghkonetta, and with the Ottowas of Blanchard's fork, and the Maunee, all within the State of Ohio, for the cession of their reservations in that State, and for their migration to the region assigned for the permanent residence of the Indians. A similar arrangement was made with the Senecas in the early part of the year, and they are already upon their journey to their new country. A deputation from the Wyandots has gone to examine the district offered to them; and the general outlines of an arrangement for a cession have been agreed upon, to be formally executed, if the report of the exploring party should prove satisfactory.

It has been suggested that a considerable portion of the Cherokees in Georgia are desirous of availing themselves of the provisions of the treaty, May 6th, 1828, for their removal. With a view to ascertain this fact, and to afford them the aid offered by that treaty, if they are inclined to accept it, a system of operations has been adopted, and persons appointed to carry it into effect. Sufficient time to form a judgment of the result of this measure has not yet elapsed.

But in all the efforts, which may be made, the subject will be fully and fairly explained to the Indians, and they will be left to judge for themselves. The agents are prohibited from the exertion of any improper influence, but are directed to communicate to the Indians the views of the President, and his decided convictions, that their speedy removal can only preserve them from the serious evils which environ them. It is to be hoped, that they will accept this salutary advice, and proceed to join their countrymen in the district appropriated for their permanent residence.

If the seeds of improvement are sown among them, as many good men assert and believe they will ripen into an abundant harvest—profitable to themselves in the enjoyment, and to all the members of this dispersed family in the example.

The details of an outrage committed by a party of Fox Indians upon a number of Menomonicies at Prairie du Chien, while encamped under the protection of our flag, will be found in the report of the officer having charge of the bureau of Indian affairs. The alleged motive for the wanton aggression was some previous injury of a similar nature, stated to have been committed by the Menomonicies upon the Fox Indians—a justification, which can never be wanting, where neither time nor treaties, as in this case, are permitted to cancel the offence.

This aggression together with the difficulties at Rock Island with the Sae Indians, of which the same report furnishes the particulars, shows the necessity of employing upon the frontiers a corps of mounted men, to be stationed at the most exposed points, and to be always prepared to follow every party, that may attempt to interrupt the peace of the border by attacking either our citizens, or other Indians. These predatory bands strike a stroke, and disappear. And there is in the institutions of the Indians such a strong tendency to war, that we shall long be liable to these outrages. Military prowess and success form their principal road to distinction. And the interminable forests and prairies of the West offer them the means of shelter and escape. No infantry force can expect to overtake them; and if we are not provided with mounted troops, who can prevent or punish these aggressions, we shall frequently be compelled to adopt measures more expensive and inconvenient to us, and more injurious to the Indians.

Very respectfully, sir, I have the honor to be, your obedient servant,

LEWIS CASS.

To the President of the United States.

REPORT OF THE SECRETARY OF THE NAVY.

Navy Department, December 3, 1831.

To the President of the United States :

Sir: The Secretary of the Navy respectfully submits a report of the transactions of this Department during the past year.

Under its general superintendence of the employment of the public vessels for the protection of our commerce, the erection of dry docks, the improvement of the navy yards, the purchase of timber and stores for future use, and the preservation of live oak, have been the most prominent objects of attention.

Many minor subjects connected with the interests of the service have received due care; and the results of the whole will be presented to your consideration with all practicable brevity.

The naval force in commission has consisted of five frigates, eleven sloops, and seven schooners; but, of these, four small schooners, purchased, and temporarily used in guarding our live oak, and in making surveys of the coast, can hardly be considered as a permanent portion of the establishment, while the relieving vessels necessary to keep up a compliment in the different squadrons, have, in this, and former years, by going out before others returned, added somewhat to the number and expense of those actually enumerated as in commission.

Our force abroad has been divided between the Mediterranean, the West Indies, Brazil, and the Pacific. From the first station, the Java, the Fairfield, and the Constellation have returned, the former taking the Cape de Verd islands and Liberia in her way homeward. An account of her cruise is annexed, as it may be interesting to those specially engaged in African colonization. (A.)*

* Extract of a letter from Captain E. Kennedy, in relation to his visit to Liberia, dated United States' Frigate Java, Hampton Roads, 11th May, 1831.

Sir: I have the honor to report my arrival here from Mahon via the Cape de Verds, Mesurado, and the West Indies. I left Mahon on the 8th January, arrived at Porto Praia on the 2d February, watered ship and sailed the 9th, and arrived at Mesurado the 18th same month. I am happy to inform you that I found the colony at Monrovia in a flourishing and happy

The Java, on a minute survey, was found to be very defective; and, having been built of inferior materials, expensive repairs on her are not deemed judicious. As she bears the name of one of our trophies during the late war, it is recommended that an appropriation be made for purchasing timber to rebuild her, and another for a similar reason, to rebuild the Cyane. A frame has heretofore been obtained for the Macedonian; and an appropriation to finish one of these vessels, whose names are so intimately associated with our naval glory could be expended with much advantage the two ensuing years. (B.)†

Last August the Constellation was ordered home from the Mediterranean after the close of the cruising season, as the usual term of absence would expire next spring, and a large saving of expense would be made by her wintering in this country. She recently arrived a few weeks earlier than anticipated, and in excellent condition, and, after the discharge of her crew, was immediately placed in ordinary.

The John Adams is the only vessel which has been added to that station.

The squadron there has been usefully employed in its ordinary duties. At this time part of it having lately been engaged in transporting of our former Consul at Algiers to his new situation as Charge to Constantinople, is supposed to be in the Archipelago, waiting the result of the chief object of that mission, and watching the consequences to our commerce of the late disturbances in Greece; another part is under orders to carry from Gibraltar our diplomatic agent to Naples; and a part of it, as recently directed, is presumed to be on new cruising ground, extending into the Atlantic along the coast of Portugal and her neighbouring dependencies. In consequence of this last increase of duty, and the novel state of our relations with the Ottoman Porte, as well as the agitated condition of other portions of Europe, it would seem expedient immediately to increase our naval force in that quarter of the world. To effect that object, and others hereafter mentioned, and at the same time to ensure in our navy a continuance of the requisite skill and experience in navigating ships of the line, a sum sufficient to put one in commission is included in the general estimate for the ensuing year, (C. Nos. 1 to 15.)†

The squadron employed in the West Indies has discharged its accustomed service with fidelity and success; no piracies whatever having been there perpetrated on our commerce; the slight disturbances near Porto Cabello, Hayti, and Havana, having been promptly looked after; and the health of the crews and officers in our public vessels having been, with a few lamented exceptions, uncommonly good. The only changes in this squadron have been the substitution of the Vincennes for the Peacock, and the Fairfield for the Natchez, on account of a greater despatch and economy in preparing the relief vessels.

state. I have no doubt but it will be the foundation of a great empire. I furnished the Governor such articles as he required, with the exception of gun carriages, theirs being in a state of decay. I think iron carriages would suit them better than wood, the dry worm being very destructive there. The small schooner they have as a guard vessel, I think badly fitted and too small. A fast schooner of 80 or 90 tons, mounting one long nine-pounder on a pivot and two 12 or 18-pound carronades, with 30 men, would, I think, be sufficient to guard the coast against the piratical slave vessels. One of our man-of-war schooners would give great protection by cruising between the northern boundary of the colony and Cape Palma.

The Brazilian station, notwithstanding the political commotions in its neighborhood, has presented little active employment for the squadron. The utmost security to our navigation at that quarter has existed, except a recent, and, it is believed, unprecedented claim, which has been made to disturb our vessels engaged in seal-catching at the Falkland islands. To guard against the ill consequences of this claim to our commercial interests, prompt measures have been taken, so far as the subject comes within the purview of this Department. From that station the Hudson has returned home; and not having been built of live oak, she is in a condition rendering the expediency of repairing her very doubtful. The Vandalia is now expected here; and both the Lexington and Warren, sent to relieve them, have probably ere this reached their destination. Our force in that region will soon be strengthened by one of the schooners now building, and whose small draught of water will render her employment on that coast highly beneficial. Preparations are making to send more vessels in that direction, should circumstances require and justify the measure; visiting among other places on their way out, Para and the principal ports on the northern coast of Brazil, where the amount of our commerce, and the agitated condition of the country, make the presence of some of our public vessels judicious, and where none have shown themselves since the late war.

In the Pacific no occurrence of much interest has happened since the last annual report. The Falmouth has been ordered to join that squadron instead of the St. Louis, and the Potomac in place of the Guerriere; and which last vessel, it is gratifying to announce, arrived a few days since, safely, in Hampton roads. Directions have been given to the new commander on that station to keep one of his vessels constantly employed in cruising among those lands in the Pacific to which our whalers and merchantmen resort for either supplies or trade. Unfortunately for the credit of our bills of exchange in that quarter, the Department, early in the year, felt compelled to refuse payment of some of the drafts by its former agents, and an attempt was made to improve the forms of transacting business there, and to lessen the expenses of providing for the squadron, by sending out a purser to make purchases, and to take charge of the stores and provisions for the whole. Sufficient time is not yet elapsed to test fully the success of this experiment, though the arrangement has required and recently received some modifications to promote its efficiency.

In consequence of a most wanton outrage upon the American ship Friendship, on the N. E. coast of Sumatra, the Potomac was ordered to proceed to the Pacific by the way of the Cape of Good Hope; and from the caution used in her instructions and from the energy of her commander, favorable hopes are entertained of procuring some indemnity for that barbarous and piratical injury. She has also been ordered, after leaving Sumatra, to touch at Jacao, and communicate with Canton. The great value of our commerce in India and China, exceeding five millions annually, and its constant exposure, with many valuable vessels, to insult and rapine, furnish a strong appeal to the Government for the protection of a rival force. Should appropriations be made for the ensuing year, in conformity to the estimates, it will enable the Department not only to strengthen the squadron in the Mediterranean, and extend its cruising ground with success, as before suggested; but to guard more efficiently our navigation on the coast of South America, and provide a sufficient force to visit occasionally the Indian and Chinese seas. Another beneficial change can also be accomplished, by thus having it in our power to keep one vessel of war fit for active service the shortest notice, within our own waters, ready to be despatched to any weak or endangered point of our relations in any quarter of the world; and, when not so wanted, to be employed on the home station for purposes of protection to commerce or of discipline to the navy, as the interests of the country may appear to require.

A list of the different vessels now in commission, with their several stations and commanders, is subjoined. It is due to those having special charge of the ministerial duties of this Department, to add, that the strictest attention appears to have been paid to the prompt and thorough repairs of all our force destined to foreign stations; and that, in point of strength and perfect equipment for useful service, the vessels of the United States in commission were probably never in superior condition.

The construction of the two Dry Docks has advanced with great rapidity during the past year. Both are now mostly completed, except the removal of the coffer dams, and the finishing of some of the gates and steam machinery. They present to the eye specimens of fine masonry seldom rivalled in beauty and solidity. The expenditures on each have been about $500,000; and, by the 4th of next July, it is hoped that some of the public vessels requiring repairs may be safely docked in these useful, economical, and splendid conveniences of our naval establishment.

For greater detail on this subject, and on the purchase of materials under the act of Congress for the gradual improvement of the navy, reference can be had to the report annexed. A personal inspection, during the past season, not only of the Dry Docks, but of all the navy yards except that near Pensacola, has caused, to the head of this Department, high satisfaction at the prosperous condition of most of them. The building of storehouses and sheds for the reception of materials, collected formerly for the gradual increase, and now collecting under the appropriation for the gradual improvement of the navy, seems connected with a great regard to durability and convenience.

Experiments have been recently commenced, with a view to settle beyond further controversy the best mode and places in this country for depositing, seasoning, and preserving the different kinds of timber in most general use here in naval architecture. Whatever differences of opinion may once have existed in Europe, or may now prevail in America on the subject, it is believed we possess the means of removing them so far as regards our own service.

The buildings for accommodation to the officers of yards, reported in the surveys and plans of A. D. 1828, are in progress where most needed, and, in connection with the storehouse sheds, wharves, walls, and ship-ways, require, annually, such appropriations as can be expended without a neglect of more urgent duties. An increased estimate to advance all the improvements, is presented for the ensuing year. (C. No. 9.)

The discontinuance of some, and the establishment of other navy yards, have been subjects of previous communications from this Department. But no sufficient reasons can be discovered by me to warrant the former measure at this time; and the latter measure should, in my opinion, depend much, though not entirely, on the future increase of our naval power.

Among other contemplated improvements in those plans were rope-walks at some of our present yards. All observation and experience in the navy show, that in nothing does suffer more at this time than from bad cordage. The impositions in the quality of the hemp, in the manufacture, and in the tar, are numerous, are difficult of detection, productive of injurious delays when detected, and when not detected, exceedingly hazardous to the safety of both crews and vessels. Indeed, the reasons seem more powerful in favor of making our own cordage, than of building our own vessels, or manufacturing our own blocks and anchors. An estimate is presented for the erection of two rope-walks at appropriate sites. [$140,000 00.]

The vessels in ordinary have been, at most of the yards, covered, so as to shelter them effectually from sunshine and storms, and to render their security from decay much greater than heretofore. It is a gratifying circumstance, that most of these vessels, as well as all those upon the stocks, are in a condition highly creditable to the persons who planned and executed the present mode of preserving them; and that, by proper care in future, until put on commission, no probability whatever exists of much further decay in the important portions of their expensive works, or of any decay in those portions composed of the invaluable material of live oak.

The three new schooners, authorized to be built under the act of Congress of February 3, 1831, were commenced, one at the yard in this city, one at New York, and one at Charleston. They are all nearly finished, and the first named on a plan seldom before attempted. If successful, it may prove a source of much economy and utility in the construction of vessels of the lower classes. She has been called the Experiment, and the others the Enterprise and Boxer.

The whole purchases of timber and stores, under the act for the gradual increase of the navy, and which remain in deposit at the yards, are over a million and a half in value.

The amount of purchases, under the act for the gradual improvement of the navy, in deposit, is nearly half a million.

The amount of property on hand for repairs, is almost a million.

The ordnance, provisions, &c. amount to upwards of a million and a half more.

The paper annexed* will present any further detail desirable on this subject. By this it will likewise be seen, that the property belonging to the navy has rapidly increased, and is increasing. Some new regulations in respect to the accounts for property, which exceed in amount the moneyed accounts of the navy, will probably be introduced into the rules for the service now undergoing a revision. The object will be to ensure ample security to the Government, strict care of its interests, and the greatest precautions against waste from accident or neglect.

The real estate, as well as the personal property, belonging to the navy establishment, is very valuable, including navy yards, hospital grounds, sites for magazines, and their respective buildings. The titles to some of these, and to parts of others, are in dispute: and the evidences of the titles to some are not collected and preserved together. It would be very conducive to the security of this estate, and render the transaction of business concerning more expeditious and satisfactory if the examination of the titles, and the various controversies about the estate, and if the collection and preservation of all the documentary evidence of those titles, were devolved upon one of the law officers of the Government.

The act of Congress of March 27th, A. D. 1804, makes the commander of the yard

Washington the navy agent for this Department. In the changes since adopted respecting navy agents, no separate and permanent one has been appointed at this yard; but the duties have been performed by the commander without giving any security by bonds, and without the usual check of an approval of his purchases by another officer. The duties of agent to the Department were never specially imposed on him in practice, till the past summer. His last change has been made in compliance with both the letter and spirit of the act of Congress, and has contributed to public convenience, by the saving of time and labor to the officers of the Government, and to those having business to transact with it. It is recommended, for the obvious reasons before suggested, that the duties of navy agent to the yard and to his Department be hereafter separated from those of the commander of the yard; and the usual responsibility, and a just compensation, be annexed to the former office. (C, No. 7.) Indeed, the whole system of compensation to navy agents, whether permanent or temporary, has for many years depended so much upon large and arbitrary allowances, very questionable in some particulars in point of principle, that further legislation on the entire subject is highly proper. A new arrangement in respect to the draughts by our agents on two foreign stations, and in respect to the payment of the draughts drawn on all of our foreign stations, when payable in London, has lately been concluded on terms much more advantageous to the Government.

As a part of the plan for the gradual improvement of the navy, the attention of this Department has, for some years, been turned to the rearing of live oak, and to its preservation, when found growing on the public lands. About a quarter of a century ago it was estimated that the full growth of between four and five hundred acres of timber trees was annually requisite to keep the British navy in its condition at that time; and such is the rise in value, as well as scarcity, of good building materials in the progress of high agricultural cultivation, that the royal forests of England, preserved for public purposes, have sometimes been considered one great foundation of her naval greatness.

The plantation of trees, commenced a few years since in Florida, was not deemed a proper subject of further attention by my immediate predecessor, more, however, it is presumed, from doubts about the legality and necessity of that particular measure, than about the utility of careful attention to either the growth or safety of our live oak generally. No expense in respect to the plantation has yet been authorized by me, except such as seemed indispensable to secure the benefits of previous expenditures. A more extended plan of agents and vessels for the discovery and preservation of such live oak as is now growing on the public lands, was devised last winter, dividing the seaboard from the St. Mary's to the Sabine into seven districts, with an agent in each, and stationing three small vessels at proper distances on the coast, to aid in the same object, and in the survey of the bays, navigable creeks, and rivers of that region. This plan had advanced so far in May, that it could not be at once discontinued without much loss. The measures necessary for a fair test of its merits have therefore been completed; its benefits, if answering original expectations will soon be developed, and, whether failing or successful, the trial, it is hoped, will lay the foundation for all information as to the quantity and location of this kind of timber, will assist the Government in the preservation of those public lands where it abounds, and enable the Department hereafter to recommend a substitute less expensive and equally efficacious.

Intimately connected with the interests of the service, are the purchase and use of iron tanks in all our vessels in commission; they are now prepared only for ships of the line and frigates built out of the fund for the gradual increase of the navy. The convenience derived from them in ballasting, the increased capacity they leave for stores, the greater security to health in the quality of the water—all conspire to render a specific appropriation for this object very desirable, and in the end economical.*

The building of steam batteries is another subject of much interest. While such astonishing improvements are making in the application of steam, it would be imprudent to overlook its probable importance hereafter in maritime warfare, or fail to keep pace with her naval nations in any new means of attack or defence. The experiment made here on after the successful introduction of this power, in the building of a steam frigate, was, perhaps, equal to the state of skill in the use of the power at that period. As that frigate however has been destroyed by accident, and as the machinery since obtained for other steam vessels of war is not the best now extant for such purposes, it is recommended that an appropriation be made, to enable the Department to exchange it, or to purchase new and more appropriate machinery, and to erect, soon as may be, two steam batteries of twelve navy guns each, on the most modern and approved models. [§111,794.]

The improvement of the navy depends so much on the character of its officers and seamen, as well as on its vessels, docks, yards, and building materials, that your attention is invited to some circumstances calculated to exercise, in that respect, a favorable influence. I would hardly be useful or decorous to dwell on former recommendations from this Department in respect to many important changes, chiefly as regards rank and pay, a limited peace establishment, a naval academy, further discriminations in favor of sea service, additional provision for hospitals, the abolition of such a large and vexatious system of discretionary allowances, a division of the duties of the naval board, a change in the powers of pursers, and in the mode of making purchases for the medical department. Most of these recommendations have my decided approbation. In addition to them, the state of the service imperatively requires the adoption of a few alterations connected with the instruction on shipboard to young officers, and with the welfare of some, who are highly useful in their stations, though acting in subordinate capacities. Thus, it is believed that greater benefit of education to the youthful midshipman, while at sea, could be obtained by a more liberal compensation to schoolmasters, and sedulous attention to the purchase and preservation of nautical books and instruments; that the important class of sailing masters, as they are not in the line of promotion, will soon become extinct without emoluments more nearly equal to what can be commanded by them in the merchant service; that the carpenters and sail makers are paid much less than those not in commission; and that the wages of gunners and boatswains are entirely insufficient. It happens that the moral and religious benefits anticipated from the employment of chaplains, in our vessels abroad, though earnestly desired cannot be fully obtained by the Department, in the present condition of that class of officers. This misfortune occurs, in part, from the bodily infirmities of a majority of them; but so far as it springs from the smallness of their number, and the inadequacy of their compensation, it is hoped that Congress will furnish a remedy.

It gives me much pleasure to observe that the occurrence of courts martial is becoming less frequent; that your resolution to protect the oppressed, whether seamen or officers, and at the same time to carry sentences into full and final effect against those clearly convicted, and that the salutary alterations in punishments recommended during the past year are beginning to produce a beneficial influence.

Notwithstanding the high wages and great demand for seamen in merchant vessels, the naval service continues popular. No difficulty has been experienced in obtaining crew seasonably; indeed, the recruiting rendezvous were closed some months ago, and in the mean time, till more men were wanted, they made repeated applications for the rendezvous to be re-opened. Much care has been exerted to promote the welfare of our seamen. When ever their terms of service expire abroad, they have, for some years, if not consenting to re-enlist, been sent home at the public expense. But the latter course is attended by inconvenience and cost, arising mostly from short differences in the periods of service in a large crew, and for which the most effectual remedy would be found in Congress authorizing men to be enlisted not only for three years, but, if sailing to a foreign station within the first year, then to extend three years from the time of sailing. Two orders are annexed,* which

LEVI WOODBURY.

Navy Department, 26th Sep'tember, 1831. Sir: In consequence of recent occurrences in the service, your attention is invited to two subjects, where the laws now regulate the right and power of ail concerned, but where there is still vested in officers a discretion, in the exercise of which it may be desirable to them to know distinctly the wishes of the President and of this Department.

One of those subjects, and our wishes upon it are, that when any portion of the navy furnishes relief to American vessels, whether wrecked or otherwise in distress, to yield which relief promptly ought to be, and long has been, one great object of its gallant exertions, no compensation of any kind should either be asked or received.

The other subject, and our wishes upon it are, that till Congress deem it proper to alter the existing laws concerning punishments in the navy, and whenever those laws allow a discretion in the choice of punishments, the first resort, in the case of offences by seamen is recommended to be always had to pecuniary fines, badges of disgrace, and other mild corrections, rather than to the humiliating practice of whipping; and that never on the same day, by punishing, under an officer's own authority, two offences at once, should the stripes limited by law, be exceeded in number, or be inflicted otherwise than in the presence and under the sanction of the commanding officer of the vessel or station.

And that, in the case of offences by officers, which it is hoped their well known high sense of duty and honor will prevent from becoming frequent, a system more remedial should be adopted, by sentencing to a reduction of rank and pay, or to suspension from promotion, rather than to suspension from active service; as persons, unfortunately guilty of any misbehavior, need most the constant discipline of active service, and, when suspended therefrom, are left without employment, under greater temptations and opportunities for injurious indulgencies.

To all Captains and Masters Commandant, Navy U. S.

this class of men. Besides these, other attentions, of late years, to comfort in their dress, to greater dryness and warmth in their apartments at sea, to new securities against disease, and better accommodations while sick, appear to have excited increased and permanent attachment on their part to that service in which they have helped to cover the country with such durable glory.

Many useful changes in the naval code, as to the punishment of offences, have before been urged; and, in addition to them, the power to order courts in yards and vessels within the limits of the United States, in the same way as on board public vessels at sea, would be a great convenience.

The discontinuance of the marine corps, or its transfer entirely to either the army or the navy, has been the subject of former recommendations from this Department. In its present fluctuating condition, without any imputation on the character of the officers of the corps, frequent difficulties in relation to pay, allowances, trials, and orders, are necessarily happening; and part of which proceeded to such an extent as to require a special resolution of Congress in 1830, and a particular provision in the appropriation bill of 1831. But by placing this establishment, as in former years has been proposed, wholly under navy discipline and laws most of these difficulties might in my opinion, be obviated, all the present benefits of it to the service retained, its increase in numbers rendered unnecessary, its old associations preserved, and much greater economy, harmony, and energy infused into its operations without derogating at all from the respectability and usefulness of the corps. Should the system recommended in the document annexed (C, No. 12) be fully adopted, the saving is estimated at over $40,000 annually. But, in that event, the officers not needed should in justice, be transferred to the army, and the saving to the Government would then fall short of that amount. In its hospital and staff departments alone, a change of less extent as to officers would save to the public more than $10,000 annually; and a portion of the expensive call for new barracks, presented in the estimates of the present year, would be rendered unnecessary. The appropriation at the last session, for those at Philadelphia, was so expressed, that the officers of the Treasury did not feel authorized to allow the expenditure.

The condition of the navy pension and navy hospital funds, they being under the charge of other officers in connexion with the Secretary of the Navy, will be made the subject of a distinct report by the commissioners, with a view to great, and, in my opinion, very salutary changes in their future management. The state of the privateer pension fund the past year is disclosed in the annexed report.

The large supply of lead in the hands of the Government, as rents from the public mines, being three or four millions of pounds beyond what has been used by the War Department, and the great quantity needed in the navy being annually, for ten years past, about fifty thousand pounds, induce me to recommend that from those rents a quantity equal to our naval wants be yearly set apart, and placed at the disposal of this Department.

The deaths, dismissals, and resignations, the past year, are detailed in the list annexed.

The general estimates for the ensuing year are presented in the document before referred to, and marked (C, No. 1 to 15.) In these an attempt has been made, in conformity to what is believed to be the true spirit of our institutions and the repeated wishes of Congress, to enable the legislative authorities to render the appropriations more specific, and to place the enumerated contingent fund in a condition to meet more nearly and promptly those demands upon it, so indispensable to the efficient operations of the navy. Although the whole expenses of the last year may not equal the whole appropriations and balances in hand for the naval service, yet the enumerated contingent, as in former years, has proved insufficient. The remedy, hereafter suggested to supply all past deficiencies, is considered preferable to any former practice of resorting to other specific appropriations.

In the mode of keeping accounts with persons responsible to this Department, so great latitude was, at one time, indulged in the transfer of appropriations from one object to another, that the disbursing officers stand charged with large and almost incredible sums under some heads, and credited with almost equal sums under other heads; but which balances cannot be legally settled without the authority of Congress. As this difficulty has generally originated more from carelessness than dishonesty, and, though censurable in principle, has probably caused no essential injury to the public, it seems judicious to allow under the usual guards against imposition and loss, the privilege of an adjustment to the persons interested. No other course is perceived which will enable the accounting officers connected with this Department ever to close these transactions on their books, and to introduce, with full effect, an accurate and improved system. These unsettled balances now exceed seven millions of dollars. Again, by carrying the balances not expended from the contingent appropriations to the surplus fund, instead of reserving them, as in the case of pay, provisions, &c. to meet future claims, (and in the necessities of the service abroad these claims cannot always be early received and adjusted,) the demands on those contingent appropriations in some former years have not only exceeded their amount, but cannot now be discharged from any surplus of other years. Nor should the deficiency be taken, as done at some prior periods from different heads of appropriation, without an express legal provision: nor can it be taken from any existing appropriation for arrearages, as none has been made the last few years. To settle these just demands, it will therefore be necessary to appropriate to the object the balances of all former years carried to the surplus fund, or to make a new appropriation of about $80,000. This latter course is the more definite, and seems due to all the claimants, and especially to the meritorious officers of the navy. To obviate this difficulty in future, it will only be necessary that the appropriations for contingencies should assume the form of those for pay and subsistence, without any increase of their whole amount; that these appropriations in other respects should correspond with the estimates of the present year, by throwing some of the enumerated items upon other and specific heads, and thus lessening the gross nominal sum for contingencies over $100,000; and that due vigilance be exercised in the Department to confine the demands on these appropriations within the limits of the sums provided. There will probably be on the 1st of January next an unexpended balance from all the appropriations of the last year to the navy of nearly twenty times this $80,000; but it may all be required when the whole accounts for the year are closed; and if not, as before remarked, it would seem, on any correct principles of legal construction and of administering specific appropriations, not to be applicable to these old arrearages, or to different heads from those particularized, without the special authority of Congress.

If the system of making surveys of our coast by naval officers at great exposure and toil continues to meet public approbation, a specific appropriation to reward the extra services in that employment the last year, as well as any in future, to the amount of $2,000 annually, will be necessary.

It would conduce much to the convenience of officers in the navy, without incurring any great risk to the public, if this Department were empowered to advance the allowance for travel and transportation when orders are given for duty within the United States—the authority to do it now being confined to the case of orders for service abroad.

Under an appropriation made at the last session, the naval monument has been removed from the navy yard, in this city, to a site west of the Capitol. The expense has not exceeded the estimate, although, in addition to the repairs, about two hundred dollars' worth of labor not included in the estimate, will be required fully to compensate the contractor, if he proceeds to renew the inscriptions, besides giving uniformity of color to the statues. But this, as the appropriation is already exhausted, must depend solely on the liberality of Congress.

The general appropriation for the suppression of the slave trade has had but small demands upon it, in addition to the special charges imposed by Congress in favor of Armstrong and of Livingston's heirs. For information in relation to the expenditures the past year, and to the property of the United States in Africa, acquired by former expenditures on this subject, a document is annexed.* This property may require some new legislation concerning its sale or preservation. Though an agent is still maintained at Liberia, the report from the commander of the Java, before named, contains all the intelligence received from the establishment at that place during the year, except a letter announcing the loss by piracy of a vessel in the employ of the colonists. From the nature of the transaction it may be questionable whether any hostile designs are meditated against the commerce of the United States by those who committed that outrage. But measures were immediately taken to obtain full information on the subject; and the earliest opportunity will be embraced to have that region of country again visited by one of our public vessels.

With a view to a more uniform and satisfactory administration of both the naval and civil branches of this Department, the rules and regulations, published in A. D. 1818, have been carefully revised, and enlarged as to naval duties; and the different orders, circulars, and decisions, now in force in relation to the transaction of business between this Department and the officers of the navy, with other useful rules of a civil character in relation to the service, have been collected: in some cases amended; and in all condensed. The whole of these will soon be submitted for your approbation, and, if receiving it, will be afterwards laid before Congress. Their distribution and strict enforcement hereafter will, it is hoped, contribute to system in business, harmony in the service, and economy in the public disbursements. This last kind of economy, and not a diminution in the gross amount of naval expenditures, is all which probably may be expected under the gradual increase of our navy, the great improvements going forward in our docks and yards, the wider range and exposure of our navigation, and the present flourishing resources of the country so well adapted to make due preparation in peace for the exigencies of future wars.

In this enviable state of the confederation, the estimates for the navy have been in some degree conformed to what is supposed to be the wishes of the people in respect to so important an establishment; and without any augmentation of officers not before sanctioned, and without the recommendation of any doubtful novelties in our expenditures, every thing has been attempted, which promises to ensure, with frugality, promptitude and vigor, the promotion of the great ends of naval protection and defence. With much respect,

LEVI WOODBURY.

REPORT OF THE POSTMASTER GENERAL.

Post Office Department, 28th November, 1831.

To the President of the United States:—Sir: The following report of the progress and condition of this Department is respectfully submitted.

The revenues of the Department, being the amount of postage within the year, commencing on the 1st of July, 1830, and ending the 30th of June, 1831, were $1,997,811 54

The expenditures of the Department, within the same period, were 1,935,559 36

Being for compensation to postmasters $635,028 48

For transportation of the mail 1,252,226 44

For incidental expenses 48,304 44

Leaving an excess of revenue beyond the expenses of the Department, amounting to 62,252 18

Of this sum there have been paid into the Treasury (being irregularly deposited by collecting officers) 563 51

Showing a balance in favor of the Department, of 61,688 67

The surplus of revenue on the 1st of July, 1830, as stated in the report of last year, amounted to 148,724 22

Thus the surplus revenue at the disposal of the Department on the 1st of July, 1831, was $210,412 89

This surplus, reported as available, and at the disposal of the Department, is founded on a statement in the report of the late Postmaster General, of 1828, and on the assumption that all the postages which have accrued since my first report in 1829, will have been collected. Of the postages returned within that time, it is confidently believed the losses, in collection will not amount to one-fourth of one per centum.

The whole amount of postage from July 1st, 1828, to July 1st, 1829, was $1,707,418 42

From July 1st, 1829, to July 1st, 1830 1,850,583 10

From July 1st, 1830, to July 1st, 1831 1,997,811 54

The increase of postage within the year ending July 1st, 1829, above the amount of the year preceding, was $108,540 47

The increase of the year ending July 1st, 1830, above the amount of the year preceding, was 143,164 58

The increase of the year ending July 1st, 1831, above the amount of the year preceding, was 147,228 44

The expenses of the Department for the year preceding July 1st, 1828, exceeded its revenues in the sum of $25,015 80

For the year preceding July 1st, 1829 74,714 15

For the year preceding July 1st, 1830 82,124 85

But for the year preceding July 1st, 1831, the revenues of the Department have exceeded its expenditures in the sum of 62,252 18

The favorable terms upon which the contracts were last year made for the transportation of the mail in the southern division, commencing on the 1st day of January last, have assisted in producing the result exhibited by the following fact: The revenue of the Department for the half year beginning with the 1st of January last, exceeded the expenditure for the same period in the sum of $75,475 91

Whereas for the half year preceding the 1st January, 1831, the expenditure exceeded the revenue in the sum of 13,223 73

The difference in which results constitutes the excess of revenue over disbursement for the year now reported, of 62,252 18

From the 1st of July 1830, to the 1st July 1831, the transportation of the mail was increased in stages, equal to 834,450 miles a year.

On horseback, and in sulkies 134,252 miles a year.

Making an annual increase of transportation equal to 968,702 miles beyond the amount of any former period.

Many routes have also been improved, by substituting stages for horse miles, to the annual amount of 362,321 miles.

The total annual increase of stage transportation from July 1, 1830, to July 1, 1831, was 1,196,781 miles.

The annual decrease of transportation, on horseback, within the same time, by substituting stages, was 228,069 miles.

Making the annual increase a above, equal to 968,702 miles.

On the 1st of July, 1831, the annual transportation of the mail was, in stages and Steamboats 10,728,348 miles.

On horseback and in sulkies 4,740,344 miles.

Making the whole annual transportation equal to 15,468,692 miles.

Other improvements are also determined on, in which remote parts of the country are immediately interested; among them are, the establishment of a regular steamboat mail on the river Ohio, between Guyandotte, in Virginia, Cincinnati, in Ohio, and Louisville, in Kentucky; to form a daily connexion with the line of post coaches from this place, and from Richmond, in Virginia, to Guyandotte; and the improvement of a route to a daily line between Macon, in Georgia, Mobile, in Alabama, and New Orleans, so as to constitute a daily intercourse between New Orleans and the Atlantic cities, and with a despatch of twelve days between New Orleans and this city.

These two improvements are already in a state of progress, and it is expected will soon be in complete operation.

The contracts for transporting the mails in the middle division of the Union, comprising the States of New Jersey, Pennsylvania, Delaware, Maryland, Kentucky, and Ohio, and the Territory of Michigan, will end with the present year. In renewing the contracts for this division, provision has been made for stage accommodation over 560 miles of post roads, on which the mail had been before carried on horseback, and on which the annual transportation in stages will, from the 1st of January next, amount to 62,365 miles. On 1,803 miles of post roads, where the mail is already carried in stages, the frequency of trips will also be increased to the annual amount of 407,524 miles. By these arrangements, an annual increase of stage transportation is secured, from the 1st of January next, of 469,889 miles on that section. The value of these improvements, at the lowest estimate, is as follows:

Nett value of the improvements	$39,795 41
--------------------------------	-------------

The acceptances for the new contracts, besides the securing of these improvements are not so great as the amount now paid for the transportation on that division, by $51,787 18. The renewal of the contracts, therefore, saves in money, to the Department, the sum of

--	-------------

Other improvements, highly important in their character, are proposed, the decisions on which have been deferred for further consideration. It is, however, anticipated, from the saving which has been effected in renewing the contracts, that the Department will possess the ability to make some further improvements in this division of mail routes.

There were, on the 1st of July last, 8,686 post offices. To the plan adopted for their supervision, and the vigilance with which it is observed together with the system of finance which is strictly adhered to, may be attributed, in no small degree the increasing prosperity of the Department. I have the honor to be, with high regard, your obedient servant,

W. T. BARRY.

Which, however, include the funds, estimated at $1,400,000, heretofore reported by this department as not effective.

The appropriations remaining unsatisfied at the close of the year are estimated at $4,139,823 13; but, of this amount, it is estimated by the proper Departments—

1. That the sum of $3,423,525 87, only, will be required for the objects for which they were appropriated.
2. That the sum of $501,102 78 will not be required, and may therefore be considered as an excess of appropriation, and is proposed to be applied, without being re-appropriated, in aid of the service of the year 1832, as will more fully appear when the estimates for the appropriations for that year are presented.
3. That the sum of $215,194 48 will be carried to the surplus fund, either because the objects for which it was appropriated are completed, or because these moneys will not be required for, or will be no longer applicable to, them.

II. OF THE PUBLIC DEBT.

The payments on account of the public debt, during the first three quarters of the year, have amounted, as has been already stated, to		$9,983,479 46

And of interest	297,000 000

This sum will be increased by purchases of stock which have been authorized, but which have not yet been fully reported.

Of the amount disbursed for the debt, $10,000,000 were applied from the appropriation made for the year under the 2d section of the sinking fund act of 1817, and the remaining

$6,189,289 67 were applied with the sanction of the President, under the authority of the section of the act of 24th May, 1830.

III. OF THE ESTIMATES OF THE PUBLIC REVENUE AND EXPENDITURES FOR THE YEAR 1832.

The great commercial activity prevailing in the United States has contributed not only to enlarge the revenue from customs for the present year beyond the estimates, but will probably carry that of the next year to a still higher amount.

The importations for the year ending on the 30th of September last are estimated at $97,032,858, and the exports at $80,372,566, of which $62,048,233 were domestic, and $18,324,333 foreign products.

The duties which accrued during the first three quarters of the present year are estimated at $27,319,000, and those for the fourth quarter at $6,009,000; some deduction, however, will be made from these before they can reach the Treasury, on account of the reduction in the duties on coffee, tea, cocoa, and salt, by the acts of the 20th and 29th May, 1830, and which may be estimated to affect the duties on those articles remaining in store on the 1st of January, 1832, to the amount of about $750,000.

The receipts from the public lands during the present year, it will be perceived, have likewise exceeded the estimates, and, indeed, have gone beyond all former example. It is believed that, notwithstanding the large amount of scrip and forfeited land stock that may still be absorbed in payments for lands, yet, if the surveys now projected be completed, the receipts from this source of revenue will not fall greatly below those of the present year. From all the information which the Department has been able to obtain, the receipts into the Treasury during the year 1832 may be estimated at	$30,100,000 00

Viz. Customs	$26,500,000 00
Public lands	3,000,000 00
Bank dividends	490,000 00

Incidental receipts, including arrears of internal duties and direct taxes	110,000 00
The expenditures for the year 1832, for all objects other than the public debt, are estimated at	$13,365,202 16
Viz: Civil, foreign intercourse, and miscellaneous	$2,809,434 26
Military service, including fortifications, ordnance, Indian affairs, arming the militia, and internal improvements	6,649,999 19
Naval service, including the gradual improvement of the navy	3,907,619 71

Which, being deducted from the estimated receipts, will leave a balance of $16,734,797 84

An exhibition of the transactions of the Treasury will show that this Department has endeavoured to carry into effect the policy indicated by the laws, and the views of the President in regard to the early extinguishment of the public debt. Upwards of forty millions will have been applied to that object from the 4th of March, 1829, to the 2d of January, 1832, inclusive; of which about sixteen millions and a half will have been drawn from the Treasury during the present year.

The occasion is deemed a propitious one, to bring before the Legislature the subject of the debt, with a view to its redemption at a period not only earlier than has been heretofore anticipated, but before the termination of the present Congress.

The entire public debt on the 2d of January next, as has been already shown, will amount to $24,322,235 18

The amount of the receipts into the Treasury during the year 1832, after satisfying all the demands of the year, other than on account of the public debt, are estimated as above at $16,734,797 84

To this may be added the balance in the Treasury on the 1st of January, 1832, estimated (exclusive of the ineffective funds and the Danish indemnity) at 1,208,276 24

From this aggregate of 17,943,074 08

There will remain a surplus in the year 1832, of 14,519,548 21

Which, unless Congress should enlarge the appropriations for other objects, may be applied to the public debt.

The interest on the debt during the year 1832 may be estimated at 500,000 00

Leaving for the principal in that year $14,901,548 21

Which, being applied to that object, will leave the total amount of the public debt at the close of the year 1832 10,302,686 97

The Government, however, has other means, which, if Congress see proper, may be applied towards the payment of the debt: viz. the shares in the Bank of the United States, amounting at par to $7,000,000, but which as will be presently explained, may be estimated at not less than 8,000,000 00

In that event, the amount of the debt on the 1st January, 1833, would be but $2,302,686 97

Which sum, together with a fair allowance for the cost of purchasing at the market price the stocks not redeemable in the course of the proposed operation, might be supplied in the months of January and February, 1833, by the application from the revenues of that year of a sum equal to two-twelfths of the amount applied from the ordinary revenues to the debt in the year 1832, say $2,503,258 02

It will be further observed, that, should any diminution take place in the estimated revenue, or should the expenditure exceed the estimated amount, the deficiency which either event might produce in the means of the Treasury applicable to the debt, would be supplied by the amount reserved in this estimate for the unsatisfied balances of appropriations. For although that sum constitutes a legal charge on the Treasury, to be met as occasion requires, yet, in any estimate of present means, it may be considered rather as a nominal than a real charge.

It will be thus perceived that the Government has the means, if properly employed, of reimbursing the whole of the public debt, by purchase or otherwise, on or before the 3d of March, 1833.

The moral influence which such an example would necessarily produce throughout the world, in removing apprehension, and inspiring new confidence in our free institutions, cannot be questioned. Seventeen years ago, the country emerged from an expensive war, encumbered with a debt of more than one hundred and twenty seven millions, and in a comparatively deersless state. In this short period it has promptly repealed all the direct and internal taxes which were imposed during the war, relying mainly upon revenue derived from imports and sales of the public domain. From these sources, besides providing for the general expenditure, the frontier has been extensively fortified, the naval and maritime resources strengthened, and part of the debt of gratitude to the survivors of the revolutionary war discharged. We have, moreover, contributed a large share to the general improvement added to the extent of the Union by the purchase of the valuable territory of Florida, and finally acquired the means of extinguishing the heavy debt incurred in sustaining the late war, and all that remained of the debt of the revolution.

The anxious hope with which the people have looked forward to this period, not less than the present state of the public mind, and the real interest of the community at large recommend the prompt application of these means to that great object, if it can be done consistently with a proper regard for other important considerations.

Of these means, as has already been shown, the shares owned by the Government in the Bank of the United States are an indispensable part; and for the reimbursement of the debt within the period contemplated, it will be necessary to effect a sale of them for a sum not less than eight millions of dollars.

The stock created by the United States for their subscription to the Bank having been actually paid previous to the 1st of July last, their interest in that institution has ceased to be nominal merely, and the shares form a part of the fiscal resources applicable to the public demands.

The objects connected with the early reimbursement of the public debt are more important than the interest of the Government as a mere stockholder; and it is therefore respectfully recommended to Congress to authorize the sale of those shares for a sum not less than $8,000,000.

A sale of so large an amount in the public market could not be expected to produce more than the par value, and, if attempted under circumstances calculated to shake public confidence in the stability of the institution, would, in all probability, prove wholly abortive. For these reasons, it is deemed advisable to effect a sale to the Bank itself—a measure believed to be practicable on terms satisfactory both to the United States and that institution.

In submitting this proposition to the wisdom of Congress, it is not intended that its adoption should be founded on any pledge for the renewal of the charter of the Bank. Considering, however, the connexion of the proposition with the Bank, and viewing the whole subject as a necessary part of the plans for the improvement and management of the revenue, and for the support of public credit, the undersigned feels it his duty to accompany it with a frank expression of his opinions.

The act of Congress to establish the Treasury Department makes it the duty of the Secretary of the Treasury to digest and prepare plans for the support of public credit, and for the improvement and management of the revenue. The duties enjoined, as well by this act as by the subsequent one of the 10th of May, 1800, requiring the Secretary "to digest, prepare, and lay before Congress, at the commencement of every session, a report on the subject of finance, containing estimates of the public revenue and public expenditures, and plans for improving or increasing the revenues from time to time, for the purpose of giving information to Congress, in adopting modes for raising the money requisite to meet the public expenditures," have been supposed to include not merely the application of the resources of the Government but the whole subject of the currency, and the means of preserving its soundness.

On this supposition, the first Secretary of the Treasury in his memorable reports of January and December, 1790, recommended a national bank as "an institution of primary importance to the finances, and of the greatest utility in the operations connected with the support of public credit;" and various communications since made to Congress show that the same views were entertained of their duties by others who have succeeded him in the Department.

The performance of the duties thus enjoined by law upon the Secretary of the Treasury implies, however, no commitment of any other department of the Government, each being left free to act according to the mode pointed out by the Constitution.

The important charge confided to the Treasury Department, and on which the operations of the Government essentially depend, in the improvement and management of the revenue and the support of public credit, and of transferring the public funds to all parts of the United States, imperiously requires from the Government all the facilities which it may constitutionally provide for those objects, and especially for regulating and preserving a sound currency.

As early as May, 1781, the Congress of the United States, convened under the articles of confederation approved the plan of a national bank submitted to their consideration by Mr. Morris, then superintendent of the finances, and, on the 31st of December, of the same year, "from a conviction of the support which the finances of the United States would receive from the establishment of a national bank," passed an ordinance, incorporating such an institution, under the name and style of "The President, Directors, and Company of the Bank of North America." The aid afforded by that institution was acknowledged to have been of essential consequence during the remaining period of the war, and its utility subsequent to the peace of little less importance.

The authority of the present Government to create an institution for the same purposes cannot be less clear. It has, moreover, the sanction of the executive, legislative, and judicial authorities, and of a majority of the people of the United States, from the organization of the Government to the present time. If public opinion cannot be considered the infallible the expounder, it is among the soundest commentators of the Constitution. It is undoubtedly the wisest guide and only effective check to those to whom the administration of the Constitution is confided; and it is believed, that, in free and enlightened States, the harmony not less than the welfare of the community is best promoted by receiving as settled those great questions of public policy in which the constituted authorities have long concurred, and in which they have been sustained by the unequivocal expression of the will of the people.

The indispensable necessity of such an institution for the fiscal operations of the Government in all its departments, for the regulation and preservation of a sound currency, for the aid of commercial transactions generally, and even for the safety and utility of the local banks is not doubted, and, as is believed, has been shown in the past experience of the Government, and in the general accommodation and operations of the present bank.

The present institution may indeed be considered as peculiarly the offspring of that necessity, springing from the inconveniences which followed the loss of the first Bank of the United States, and the evils and distresses incident to the excessive, and, in some instances, fraudulent issues of the local banks during the war. The propriety of continuing it, is to be considered not more in reference to the expediency of banking generally, than in regard to the actual state of things, and to the multiplicity of State banks already in existence, and which can neither be displaced, nor in other manner controlled in their issues of paper by the General Government. This is an evil not to be submitted to; and the remedy at present applied, while it preserves a sound currency for the country at large, promotes the real interests of the local banks, by giving soundness to their paper.

If the necessity of a banking institution be conceded or shown, that which shall judiciously combine the power of the Government with private enterprise is believed to be the most efficacious. The Government would thus obtain the benefit of individual sagacity in the general management of the Bank, and, by means of its deposits, and share in the direction, possess the necessary power for the prevention of abuse.

It is not intended to assert that the Bank of the United States, as at present organized, is perfect, or that the essential objects of such an institution might not be attained by means of an entirely new one, organized upon proper principles, and with salutary limitations. It must be admitted, however, that the good management of the present bank, the accommodation it has given the Government, and the practical benefits it has rendered the community, whether it may or may not have accomplished all that was expected from it, and the advantages of its present condition, are circumstances in its favor, entitled to great weight and give it strong claims upon the consideration of Congress in any future legislation upon the subject.

To these may be added the knowledge the present bank has acquired of the business and wants of the various portions of this extensive country, which, being the result of time and experience, is an advantage it must necessarily possess over any new institution.

It is to be observed, moreover, that the facilities of capital actually afforded by the present institution to the agricultural, commercial and manufacturing industry of all parts of the Union, could not be withdrawn, even by transferring them to another institution, without a severe shock to each of those interests, and to the relations of society generally.

To similar considerations it may be presumed, is to be traced the uniform policy of the several States of the Union, of rechartering their local institutions with such modifications experience may have dictated, in preference to creating new ones.

Should any objection be felt or entertained on the score of monopoly, it might be obviated by placing, through the means of a sufficient premium, the present institution upon the footing of a new one, and guarding its future operations by such judicious checks and limitations as experience may have shown to be necessary.

These considerations, and others which will be adverted to in a subsequent part of this report, the experience of the Department in the trying periods of its history, and the convictions of his own judgment, concurring with those of the eminent men who have preceded and undersigned in its administration, induce him to recommend the expediency of rechartering the present bank at the proper time, and with such modifications, as, without impairing its usefulness to the Government and the community, may be calculated to recommend to the approbation of the Executive, and, what is vitally important, to the confidence of the people.

Should Congress deem it expedient to authorize the sale of the bank shares for a sum not less than eight millions of dollars, the reimbursement of the public debt on or before the 3d of March, 1833, may be confidently anticipated; and from that period the amount of revenue applicable to that object will be no longer required.

The revision and alteration in the existing duties, which will be called for by this state of things, cannot too early engage the attention of Congress. The information requisite to the establishment of a scale of duties upon a permanent and satisfactory basis, will require time; and a system, in which so many important interests are involved, will be better subverted by prospective legislation than by sudden changes.

The revenue derived from the present duties cannot be safely dispensed with before the period assigned for the extinguishment of the public debt; but such revised system as Congress may in its wisdom previously provide, may with entire propriety, be authorized to take effect from and after the 3d of March, 1833.

Independently of the charge for the public debt, the revenue for the expenditures of the Government, as at present authorized, need not, it is estimated, exceed annually the sum $13,500,000.

It is believed, however, that there are other objects of expenditure of obvious expedience if not of indispensable necessity, which it may be supposed have been postponed by the higher obligation of paying the public debt. The present occasion is deemed proper to provide for those objects in a manner to advance the glory and prosperity of the country without inconvenience to the people.

It is therefore respectfully recommended, that, in addition to the expenditure as at present authorized, appropriations may, at the proper time, be provided for the following objects for augmenting the naval and military resources; extending the armories; arming the militia of the several States; increasing the pay and emoluments of the navy officers to equality with those of the army, and providing them with the means of nautical instruction; enlarging the navy hospital fund; strengthening the frontier defences; removing obstructions from the western waters; for making accurate and complete surveys of the coast, a for improving the coast and harbors of the Union, so as to afford greater facilities to commerce and navigation of the United States. The occasion would also be a favorable one for constructing custom houses and warehouses in the principal commercial cities, some of which they are indispensably necessary for the purposes of the revenue; and likewise for providing for the proper permanent accommodation of the courts of the United States and their officers.

In many districts, the compensation of the officers of the customs, in the present state of commerce, is insufficient for their support, and inadequate to their services. As a part of the general system, however, and effectually to guard the revenue, the services of such officers are necessary, without regard to the amount of business; and it is believed expedient to make their allowance commensurate with the vigilance required, and the duties to be performed. A further improvement may be made in the mode of compensating the officers of the customs, by substituting salaries for fees in all the collection districts, by which, a comparatively small expense to the Treasury, commerce and navigation would be relieved from burdens always inconvenient, if not oppressive.

It is believed that the public property and offices at the seat of Government require improvement and extension, and that further appropriations might be made to adapt them to the increasing business of the country.

The salaries of the public ministers abroad must be acknowledged to be utterly inadequate either for the dignity of the office, or the necessary comfort of their families. At some foreign courts, and those whose relations towards the United States are the most important, the expenses incident to the station are found so burdensome as may be met by the private resources of the minister. The tendency of this is to throw those high trusts altogether in the hands of the rich, which is certainly not according to the genius of our system. Such provision for public ministers as would obviate these evils, and enable the minister to perform the common duties of hospitality to his countrymen, and promote social intercourse between the citizens of both nations, would not only elevate the character of his country but essentially improve its public relations.

In addition to these objects, further provision may be made for those officers and soldiers of the revolution who are yet spared as monuments of that patriotism and self-devotion, which, under Providence, we owe our multiplied blessings.

For the foregoing purposes, together with the existing expenditure, and a moderate allowance for such objects of general improvement as shall be of an acknowledged national character, within the limits, as admitted by the Executive, of the powers of Congress over the subject, an annual revenue of $15,000,000 will be fully adequate. It is worthy of remark that such an amount of revenue would scarcely exceed one dollar on each individual of our population, as it may be reasonably computed when the reduced duties shall take effect and that the individual burden would continue to diminish with the increase of population and of the national resources.

The sources from which the revenue has hitherto been derived are the imports, public lands and bank dividends. With the sale of the bank stock, the latter will cease; and the imports, according to any scale of duties which it will be expedient and practicable to adopt, will be amply sufficient to meet all the expenditure, that portion of the revenue heretofore drawn from the sale of the public lands may be dispensed with, should Congress see fit to do so.

On this point, the undersigned deems it proper to observe, that the creation of numerous States throughout the western country, now forming a most important part of the Union and the relative powers claimed and exercised by Congress and the respective States over the public lands, have been gradually accumulating causes of inquietude and difficulty, not of complaint. It may well deserve consideration, therefore, whether, at a period demanding the amicable and permanent adjustment of the various subjects which now agitate the public mind, these may not be advantageously disposed of, in common with the other and upon principles just and satisfactory to all parts of the Union.

It must be admitted that the public lands were ceded by the States, or subsequently acquired by the United States, for the common benefit; and that each State has an interest in their proceeds, of which it cannot be justly deprived. Over this part of the public property the powers of the General Government have been uniformly supposed to have a peculiar extensive scope, and have been construed to authorize their application to purposes of eduation and improvement to which other branches of revenue were not deemed applicable. It is not practicable to keep the public lands out of the market, and the present mode of disposing of them is not the most profitable, either to the General Government or to the States, and must be expected, when the proceeds shall be no longer required for the public debt, to give rise to new and more serious objections.

Under these circumstances, it is submitted to the wisdom of Congress to decide upon the propriety of disposing of all the public lands, in the aggregate, to those States within whose territorial limits they lie, at a fair price, to be settled in such manner as might be satisfactory to all. The aggregate price of the whole may then be apportioned among the several States of the Union, according to such equitable ratio as may be consistent with the objects of the original cession, and the proportion of each may be paid or secured directly to the others by the respective States purchasing the land. All cause of difficulty with the General Government on this subject would then be removed; and no doubt can be entertained, that, by means of stock issued by the buying States, bearing a moderate interest, and which in consequence of the reimbursement of the public debt, would acquire a great value, they would be able at once to pay the amount upon advantageous terms. It may not be unreasonable also to expect that the obligation to pay the annual interest upon the stock thus created would diminish the motive for selling the lands at prices calculated to impair the general value of that kind of property.

It is believed, moreover, that the interests of the several States would be better promoted by such a disposition of the public domain, than by sales in the mode hitherto adopted; and it would at once place at the disposal of all the States of the Union, upon fair terms, a fund for purposes of education and improvement, of inestimable benefit to the future prosperity of the nation.

Should Congress deem it proper to dispense with the public lands as a source of revenue, the amount to be raised from imports after the 3d of March, 1833, according to the foregoing estimate, will be $15,000,000; but, with a reliance upon the public lands, as heretofore, it may be estimated at $12,000,000, to which, as the case may be, it will be necessary to adopt the provision for the future.

Whatever room there may be for diversity of opinion with respect to the expediency of distributing among the several States any surplus revenue that may casually accrue, it is not doubted that any scheme for encouraging a surplus for distribution, or for any purpose which should make it necessary, will be generally discountenanced. There is too much reason to apprehend that a regular, uniform dependence of the State Governments upon the revenue of the General Government, or an uniform expectation from the same source, would create too great an incentive to high and unequal duties, and not merely disturb the harmony of the Union, but ultimately undermine and subvert the purity and independence of the State sovereignties.

The public welfare and the stability of the Union would be more effectually promoted, by leaving all that is not necessary to a liberal public expenditure with the people themselves. Their affection for the Government would be thereby strengthened, and the sources of individual and national wealth augmented; so that when the Government should have cause to increase its expenditure for public emergencies, it might rely upon a people able and willing to answer the call. While these means of the national wealth are thus cherished, the machinery by which duties upon imports are collected and brought into the public treasury, may be kept in full operation, and susceptible of greater efficiency whenever the exigency may make it necessary.

It is respectfully suggested that these considerations, and others that will readily present themselves, point out the duties on imports as the best source of revenue, and peculiarly commend that these duties should be adapted to the actual expenditure of the Government.

The propriety of reasonably protecting the domestic industry is fully conceded; but it is believed it would neither require nor justify the raising of a larger amount of revenue than may be necessary to defray the expenses of the Government. Some of the evils of a surplus which an excess of revenue beyond the expenditure would necessarily induce, have been already noticed. To these may be added the affect upon the peace and harmony of the country, and upon the safety of the Union, which should certainly not be hazarded for any object not of vital importance to its welfare.

If it could be shown that the labor and capital of the United States required greater aid to shield them from the injurious regulations of foreign States, sound policy would rather commend a system of bounties, by which the duties collected from imports might be directly applied to the objects to be cherished, than the accumulation of money in the Treasury. No such necessity, however, is supposed to exist.

The amount of revenue equal to the authorized expenditures of the Government, it is a constitutional duty of Congress to provide; and to a tariff framed for this effect, it is not conceived there can be any reasonable objection. Of this duty, the constitution itself precludes all doubt, by authorising both the expenditure, and the means of defraying it.

It will be difficult precisely to graduate the revenue to the expenditure. The necessity of avoiding the possibility of a deficiency in the revenue, and the perpetual fluctuation in the demand and supply, render such a task almost impracticable. An excess of revenue, therefore, under any prudent system of duties may be for a time unavoidable, but this may be better ascertained by experience, and the evil obviated, either by enlarging the expenditure for the public purpose, or by reducing the duties on such articles as the condition of the country would best admit.

In providing a revenue upon this principle, and for those purposes, the attention of Congress will be necessarily directed to the articles of imports from which the duties should be collected; and this is a question of expediency merely, to be decided with a just regard to all the great interests involved in the subject.

To distribute the duties in such a manner, as far as that may be practicable, as to encourage and protect the labor of the people of the United States from the advantages of superior skill and capital, and the rival preferences of foreign countries, to cherish and preserve those manufactures which have grown up under our own legislation, which contribute to the national wealth, and are essential to our independence and safety, to the defence of the country, the supply of its necessary wants, and to the general prosperity, is considered to be an indispensable duty. The vast amount of property employed in the northern, western, and middle portions of the Union, upon the faith of our own system of laws, and in which the interests of every branch of our industry are involved, could not be immediately abandoned without the most ruinous consequences.

The various opinions by which the people of the United States are divided upon this subject, concern the peace and harmony of the country, and recommend an adjustment of practical principles, rather than with reference to any abstract doctrines of political economy.

The proposed action of Congress will not be directed to introduce or countenance for the first time the adaption of duties for revenue to the protection of American labor and capital. The origin of that lies at the foundation of the Government; and, taking root in the act of July, 1789, it has since increased and spread over our whole legislation, has quickened each branch of industry, and affected most of the important relations of the community. That it may have gone beyond the proper standard, and that the present crisis requires that it should be confined within reasonable limits, will not be denied. It ought to be remarked, however, that the amount of the revenue has not at any time exceeded the authorized objects of expenditure; and that, in preserving such an equality in future, justice to every portion of the community requires that it should be accomplished without uprooting those great interests which have been providently planted and carefully nourished.

If the amount of expenditure be regulated by an enlightened economy, and the aggregate of duties levied on imports be neither extravagant nor oppressive to the consumer, it is deemed to be comparatively unimportant whether it be collected from many or few articles of importation. It could only become material by causing the duties to bear unequally upon particular classes. It might not be practicable, however, in such a community as ours, and in distributing the duties with any reference whatever to the protection of labor, altogether to avoid that inconvenience, so much of the inconvenience as may be unavoidably might be temporarily submitted to, for the sake of the national advantages it would ultimately confer. It may be expected, also, that the poorer classes, so far as any such inequality would affect them, will be generally indemnified by the increased activity given to profitable modes of employment.

Happily for the United States, the sum to which it is now proposed to limit the revenue is not likely to be oppressive on any class, even according to the present numbers of the American population. It is also to be observed, that relatively, both to population and the means of consumption, it would annually diminish; while the cheapening of transportation, by the means of the rapidly increasing facilities of intercourse, would constantly tend to equalize prices, and diffuse the benefits of labor.

The objects more particularly requiring the aid of the existing duties upon the principles of this report, are believed to be wool, woollens, cottons, iron, hemp, and sugar, as comprehending those articles in which the agricultural and manufacturing industry are more particularly interested.

These duties could not be materially changed at present, without the effect already deprecated. No objection is perceived, however, to such gradual reduction of them in future as may withdraw the aid thus afforded, as the growth and stability of our manufactures will enable them to dispense with it, to such a degree at least as will, with the aid of an increase of population and the means of consumption, still leave a revenue adequate to the expenditures, or until what may be withdrawn from them may be levied on other articles which may be found to admit of it.

The additional sum, which, together with the amount of those duties, it may be necessary for Congress to provide in a re-adjustment of the tariff, will depend upon its decision as to confining the expenditures to the present objects, or of enlarging them as herein suggested. In the former case, the sum of $4,559,607, and, in the latter, the sum of $6,459,607, will be required; and, in regard to either estimate, the provision should be upon a scale sufficiently liberal to guard against the chance of a deficiency. In providing for either sum the duties may be advantageously retained upon those articles of luxury, or which are principally consumed by the wealthier classes, or upon those not abundantly produced in the United States, in preference to others. The effect of this would be to counter-bail to the poorer classes, by cheapening their general supply, the higher duties on other articles. At the same time the duties may be removed from such raw materials as will admit of it without detriment to our agriculture; whereby the manufacturers would be enabled to sell cheaper, and, also, the sooner to dispense with a part of the duties which may be at present retained for their protection. Any amount of duty upon a raw material is, to its extent, an injury to the manufacturer, requiring further countervailing protection against our own rather than foreign regulations, and is only to be justified by the paramount interests of agriculture. In that case, it would deserve consideration whether the encouragement of an object of agriculture might not be more properly reconciled with the encouragement of the manufacture, and with greater equality as regards other interests, by bounties rather than by a duty on the raw material.

While presenting these views, the burdens to which the interests of navigation have been subjected by the existing duties on articles necessary in shipbuilding, have not been overlooked; and, while equitably adjusting other interests, this may require from the Legislature particular attention. The great importance, both of our foreign and coasting navigation to the country, and especially to those interests now requiring to be cherished, cannot be doubted. In the competition which it is obliged to maintain with the commerce of the world, every where the object of peculiar aid, it would seem to demand of the Government a liberal support. It is believed that the expenses of building and fitting out vessels of every description, including steamboats, are injuriously increased by the present duties, and that a drawback of a large portion, if not the whole of the duty on all the articles composed of iron, hemp, flax, or copper, whether of foreign or domestic production, used in their construction or equipment, might be authorized, under proper safeguards, with obvious advantage to other interests, and without material detriment to the revenue.

It is hoped, however, that these suggestions will be received as proceeding from a sense of official duty, and intended to invite the attention of Congress to the various modes of revising the existing scale of duties, from which a selection may be more judiciously made with the aid of greater information than is at present in possession of the Department, rather than to present a digested scheme for the future revenue.

The undersigned is not insensible to the embarrassments attending such a subject, both from its delicacy and complexity; and the difficulties of reconciling any system of duties, in the present condition of the public mind, with the interests and views of all, are fully appreciated. These can be surmounted only by the wisdom and patriotism of the people and of Congress. He cannot doubt, however, that it will be the wish of all earnestly to endeavour to surmount them; and he confides in the forbearance and liberality of an enlightened public to accomplish the task. He respectfully suggests that the subject is to be dealt with in the spirit of a liberal compromise, in which, for the sake of the general harmony, each conflicting interest should be expected to yield a part for the common benefit of all.

The diversity of interests which characterize different portions of the Union, arising from geographical position and peculiarity of habits and pursuits, does not admit of that degree of favor to any particular interest, which, in other countries differently situated, may be safely and wisely granted. The industry of each portion of the Union should be equally regarded and gradually fostered; by which means, each would as certainly, though more slowly, attain maturity, without the aid of measures dangerous to the general peace and harmony.

Similar considerations prevailed in the formation of the constitution; and, at that period, the difficulty of drawing with precision the line between rights surrendered and those reserved, at all times great, was increased by a difference among the several States as to their situation, extent, habits and particular interests. In harmonizing these various objects, and conducting them to practical results, the framers of that instrument kept steadily in view "the consolidation of the Union, and the general prosperity of the whole." By merging in these all objects of inferior magnitude, the constitution came from their hands "the result of a spirit of unity, and of that mutual defence and concession which the peculiarity of our political situation rendered indispensable." "The full and entire approbation of every State was no question upon; but it was hoped that each would consider that had her interests been alone consulted, the consequences might have been particularly disagreeable or injurious."

In the Government thus formed, were fully and effectually vested the power of making war, peace, and treaties, that of levying money and regulating commerce, and the corresponding judicial and executive powers of expounding and executing the laws.

Upon no other principles, and in no other spirit, can the constitution be administered with safety to the Union. The force of the Government is a moral force, resting upon the sound action of the public opinion throughout the various portions of the country. Due respect for the rights and duties of the States, and a mild, equal and moderate exercise of those confided to the General Government, with a ready deference to the will of the people, are believed to constitute the soundest policy, and to furnish the best safeguards.

The observance of this policy is the duty of the Government, and a patriotic acquiescence in measures calculated to effect it, though they may occasionally act with some inequality, is not less the duty of the people. Considerations of power are not alone involved either in measures or opinions affecting the interest and harmony of the community; and no measures can or ought long to prevail, without a broad and general support from public opinion. The obligation of laws constitutionally enacted by the proper authorities, is not to be questioned; but extreme measures, adopted by slender majorities, and obnoxious to the interests and opinions of minorities, powerful in numbers, wealth, and intelligence, cannot be persevered in without danger to the general harmony, and without undermining the moral power, not merely of the executive and legislative departments, but also that of the judiciary, which may be called to sustain the authority, without the option of deciding upon the expediency of the measure. In our system each side has important rights; and those of the minority consist in requiring that the power of the majority be exerted with a just regard to their interests, both of person and property. Without a reasonable deference and concession, both as to measures and opinions, the great objects of the Government cannot be attained; and, while it is conceded that it would be improper to push measures for the protection of the labor or improvement of the country to an extreme or oppressive degree, it must also be admitted that it would not be less so altogether to deny to the General Government the moderate exercise of powers for those objects for which it is believed mainly to have been instituted.

The real strength of the Government depends not more upon a harmonious action of its various parts, than in producing the same effect upon the various interests over which it acts.

Considering the amount of labor and capital employed in manufactures of the greatest importance to the country, and which have already contributed so essentially to our defence and safety, and to the general prosperity, it could not be expected that they should be suddenly abandoned. Regarding, at the same time, the diversity of interests resulting from the peculiar situation of the United States, the manufacturing interest itself should be content with a moderate and gradual protection, rather than by extreme measures to endanger the public tranquility. The indispensable necessity of the aid of the General Government for those objects of acknowledged national concern, more especially the improvement of the rivers and harbors which are the great highway of the people, and to which the means of the several States are both inadequate and inapplicable, could not be withheld without opposition to the opinions of a majority of the people, and the interests of many portions of the Union. It is, at the same time, admitted, that this aid should be moderately conferred, and with proper deference to opinions of an opposite character. And it cannot be doubted that too extensive an exercise of the powers of the General Government over these objects would ultimately subvert the constitutional sovereignty of the States. It must be acknowledged that the just medium on all these subjects is difficult of attainment: but in the desire to seek, and in the sagacity to adopt the best, consists the true policy of an American statesman.

If the adjustment suggested to Congress by the views hazarded in this report be in any wise entitled to their respect, it is not unreasonable to hope that the various topics of national concern at present engaging the attention of the people may facilitate rather than embarrass the task. The interests of agriculture, commerce, and manufactures, and the final dispositions of the public lands, are the prominent, and necessary, and immediate objects of public policy. As incident, however, and indeed necessary, to the security and prosperity of these great interests, the preservation of a sound currency cannot escape attention. On the soundness and steadiness of this indispensable medium of exchange depend the value and stability of every description of property, not less than the activity of every branch of business; and it is not to be doubted that the commercial and manufacturing industry would be most severely and immediately affected by any derangement of this spring of their prosperity.

The measures of the General Government in respect to the tariff, to objects of public improvement, to the public lands, and to the Bank of the United States, are the sources of the existing solicitude throughout the country. For the permanent adjustment of all, in a manner to promote the harmony in all parts of the Union, and elevate the moral character of the country, the wisdom and patriotism of the Government and of the people can alone be looked to.

Independently of the considerations connected with the currency, the interests both of the Government and individuals involved in the Bank of the United States make the stability of that institution an object of great importance. No reason is perceived why this great interest should not be equally considered in the scheme of deference and concession, and compromise, which the public safety, not less than the national prosperity, so urgently recommends. While conflicting interests and opinions on other subjects are invited to meet on middle ground, and, on the altar of common good, each to offer something for the preservation of concord and union throughout this favored land, the advocates and opposers of the existing system for regulating the currency may also be expected to join in the same patriotic sacrifice.

It is not perceived that any other satisfactory basis for a scheme of general adjustment can be devised than that which shall pay a just regard to the interests of all, and observe a proper deference to the public will. On this ground mainly, one portion of the agricultural interest has been invited, to accommodate opinions conscientiously formed and ardently advocated to opposite opinions more successfully maintained by other and more powerful interests. The invitation could not be more appropriately recommended, than by affording an example in other cases founded upon the same principle. Acquiescence in the public will is not less the duty of Government than of the people themselves. The utmost respect is felt for an independent exercise of conscientious opinions, but, in a country like ours, though a sense of duty authorizes all fair attempts to convince the public mind, it equally dictates a ready acquiescence by all in the public will finally expressed.

In presenting to the view of Congress the means of the Government, the bonds due for duties which are now in suit have been reserved for this place. The amount of bonds remaining in suit since the commencement of the Government may be estimated, on the 30th of September last, at $6,835,821 63. Of this sum, it is believed that not more than one million of dollars could, under any circumstances, be recovered. The debtors, however, remain legally liable for the whole amount, and, without the hope of ever paying, are thereby kept in a state of poverty and helplessness.

The act passed at the last session of Congress for the relief of certain insolvent debtors, according to the construction which has been given to it, has afforded but little relief to those for whom it was probably intended. It will be the duty of the undersigned, in a subsequent report, in conformity with that law, to lay before Congress the principles and manner of its execution. It may not be out of place, in the mean time, when presenting a general view of the financial means of the Government, to recommend that no reliance should be placed on these debts.

The punctuality of the American merchant in the payment of duties, in every period of our history, and under the most severe vicissitudes, is deserving of the greatest admiration. Of the whole amount of custom-house bonds falling due in the first three quarters of the present year, only $46,965 76 have been unpaid. Of seven hundred and eighty-one millions of dollars secured for duties from the commencement of the Government to the 30th of September last, the whole loss may be estimated to be less than six millions of dollars. These delinquencies are believed in most, if not in all instances, to have been the result of unavoidable misfortune, involving, in the ruin of the principal, the sureties required by the laws of the United States. In most cases, the United States, by means of the existing priority acts, have obtained the benefit of whatever property the debtors possessed at the time of their insolvency. In many instances, their general creditors have either released, or would be willing to release them, if the claim of the Government did not render such an act of liberality unavailing. By this means a large number of our fellow-citizens, of fair character and intelligence, and qualified by their exertions to promote the prosperity of the country, are paralyzed in their industry, and deprived of the means of providing for their families, and contributing to the general stock of labor. It is respectfully submitted to the wisdom and generosity of Congress, whether the occasion of extinguishing the national debt, and relieving the burdens of the community at large, and where the greatest amount likely to be recovered is not required for the public exigencies, is not also propitious for giving absolute relief to those enterprising men, who, in times of difficulty and need, contributed to enrich the public treasury. The period of the total extinguishment of the national debt will be a period of national rejoicing, and might be properly signalized by such an act of grace to this unfortunate class of our countrymen.

Should Congress, however, desire to compel the payment of any portion of these debts, or to discriminate among the objects of its clemency, it is believed that a law of greater scope than the present, authorizing an inquiry into the facts, and a discharge of the debtor where there is no fraud, with or without payment of any particular amount, and returning to each debtor a reasonable per centage of the sum paid, is recommended as expedient and necessary.

The Secretary of the Treasury also transmits a report from the Commissioner of the General Land Office, showing the state of the affairs of that branch of the Department.

All which is respectfully submitted.

LOUIS M'LANE,
Secretary of the Treasury.

MILITARY ACADEMY.

United States' Military Academy, West Point, June 21, 1831.

To the Honourable the Secretary of War,

Sir: The Board of Visitors invited by a circular from the War Department, of the 31st March, "to attend the general examination of the cadets of the United States' Military Academy," in the discharge of the duty devolved on them, have directed their enquiries to a full and free investigation of the course of instruction, military and scientific, and to the internal police, discipline, and fiscal concerns of the institution. This investigation, the results of which we propose, in a succinct form to present to you, has impressed the board with a full conviction, that the institution has substantially accomplished the leading objects of its establishment; and that, regarded in any light, in which it may be viewed, whether in its connexion with the primary means of national defence, the cardinal design of its creation, or with the more remote, but no less important concerns of our internal civil polity, to the success of which it is a valuable auxiliary, its claims upon the continued support and fostering patronage of the Government are many and commanding.

The whole number of cadets, upon the examination roll, furnished to the board, is two hundred and twenty-two; these are divided into four classes; the first consisting of thirty-three members, whose course of instruction has now been completed; the second of fifty-two, who have been three years in the institution; the third of sixty-two of two years standing; and the fourth of seventy-five, admitted since the period of the examination of the last year. These classes have been severally divided into convenient sections, arranged agreeably to the relative merits of the cadets composing them; their grade being settled by the academic board, at short stated intervals, by an impartial recurrence to well ascertained and fixed rules.

The course of instruction prescribed for each class will be shown by the synopsis herewith communicated. It is the purpose of the report, to detail the observations of the board, upon the examinations of the several departments, in their order.

The studies of the first class are directed to engineering and the science of war; to ethics rhetoric, national and constitutional law; to infantry tactics and artillery. Upon each of these branches of science, the class have undergone a thorough examination, and it affords the board pleasure to state, that its result has been as satisfactory as its process has been searching and laborious.

To engineering, both military and civil, the attention of the class has been minutely and profitably directed. In the whole course of military engineering, comprising field and permanent fortifications, attack and defence of places, and military communications, as well as in that of civil engineering, comprehending the important subjects, of land and water communications, by navigable rivers, canals, common roads, bridges and rail roads; of hydraulic constructions and buildings; of nautical constructions; of carpentry, stone-cutting and civil architecture; the class have acquitted themselves in a manner meriting the most unqualified commendation. The most involved and difficult problems have been solved and demonstrated, with a readiness evincive of the thorough familiarity of the class with those important branches of science; and reflecting upon the accomplished officer charged with this department of instruction the highest credit.

That these subjects have not engaged an undue share of the time and attention of the cadets, the board are fully satisfied. The science of military engineering is intimately connected with that of war, and with every well devised system of national defence. The primary and leading object of this instruction, is to train up a portion of our youth for this indispensable branch of the public service; to fit them for the intelligent discharge of the high duties of superintending and directing the defences, and commanding the armies of the nation. All experience teaches that these qualifications are not the acquirements of a day; that the emergency which calls for their exercise is not always sufficient for their creation. The principle of the art of war, comprehending in its present advanced stage of improvement, all the exact and many of the physical sciences, with various incidental and collateral branches of learning, like all other knowledge, can only be attained by the application of the mind, aided and directed by competent and skilful instructions. That the duty of this application has been enforced, and thus assistance and instruction afforded here, the examination of this class, has abundantly evidenced.

The science of civil engineering, as taught at this academy, the board regard, as a branch of education, fundamentally important. This may emphatically be styled the age of improvement. At a time, when the energies of a discerning and patriotic public spirit are every where directed to the purposes of practical improvement; when in every portion of this wide spread confederacy, we are daily furnished with the manifestations of a desire, by means of canals and railroads, to connect the remotest portions of the Union, and through their agency, to develop the resources, and improve the condition of our country, the value of the knowledge imparted in this course, cannot be overrated. That this branch of science can be taught in this academy, with advantage, experience has shown. That in the ordinary literary institutions of the country, an attention sufficient to qualify for the discharge of the practical duties, already indicated, has not been bestowed, may be safely inferred, from the multiplied and pressing demands upon the War Department, for aid preferred by those engaged in the interesting works of improvement, contemplated, and in progress. It has been a subject of general and of just regret, that the means of assistance thus invoked, have not been within the competency of the Government to afford. To meet these continually recurring applications for the services of persons skilled in this branch of science, no mode within the knowledge of the board, is so likely to prove efficient, as that of giving to the distinguished professor in this department the means of increased usefulness by a liberal enlargement of the stock of models, now very inconsiderable.

In aid of his instructions in the first branch of this science, the model of a fortification, with all its parts complete, is regarded as indispensable. The expenditures of the Government upon the permanent fortifications are liberal and recurring; and yet, in an institution designed to fit its students for this important branch of the public service, there is not a single model by which they may be taught the mechanical construction of a work of this kind. A small sum appropriated to this object, would ensure an improvement in this branch of science, which would be beneficially felt in the construction of the public works necessary to the defence of our extensive inland and maritime frontier.

The model of a stone bridge, with its centering, and the caisson used in founding piers, where the water is deep, and the foundation of rock; of a lock upon the most approved plan, and of a dry dock, the board think would be found useful. To these might be advantageously added models in the department of architecture, calculated to improve the taste, in building. These would serve not only as the means of instruction to the students of this institution, but of extensive general improvement; to the increased comfort of our private dwellings, and the embellishment and economy of our public edifices.

These objects the board would respectfully suggest, the employment of a modeller, would be calculated most effectually and economically to accomplish.

In the science of war, the class acquitted themselves upon their examination, satisfactorily to the board. In the knowledge of the principles of infantry tactics and artillery, they appear to be well grounded. The examinations on these subjects in the recitation room have prepared the board to express a full concurrence, in the favorable opinions indicated by former boards of visitors, in relation to the modes of instruction pursued in this department, and of the merit of professors directing them.

In the practical duties of the soldier the cadets of all the classes have been thoroughly instructed. The board are at a loss for terms in which to express their admiration of the manly gracefulness of carriage, and the steadiness of position, maintained by them in the field; of the ease, promptitude, and precision with which their various evolutions in batallion performance, and of the skill and accuracy with which their artillery is exercised and manœuvred.

For the maintenance of this admirable system of discipline, of which the flattering results above indicated are the fruits, and for the preservation of the health of the cadets, by furnishing them with the means of salutary exercise, the board earnestly recommend, that a suitable building be erected, to be used during the inclement seasons of the year, when the students of this institution, cannot, with safety, be exposed.

The board cannot take leave of this branch of the subject committed to their inquiry, without a decided expression of the satisfaction they have received, from the evidence furnished by the cadets of their proficiency in the exercise of the piece, in target firing, and in the preparation of ammunition, rockets, &c. It has been to the board a subject of surprise and regret, that this post is without the horses necessary for the ordinary artillery service, and they feel it to be their incumbent duty, to press upon the Government the necessity of a provision to meet this object. Twenty horses might be usefully employed, not only in the manner above mentioned, but with great benefit to the cadets, in allowing them an opportunity of acquiring some knowledge of horsemanship, which in after-life, may prove to them valuable and important.

In the branches of ethics, rhetoric, national and constitutional law, the class acquitted themselves with great credit, evincing by their answers, a familiarity with the principles of their text books, acquired and retained not so much by the mere effort of memory, as by the application of the mind to their thorough investigation.

In this department much inconvenience has been experienced for the want of books necessary to carry on the course of instruction, in which the library, although liberally supplied on other subjects, is lamentably deficient. The board respectfully recommend that a specific appropriation be asked to supply this deficiency.

The studies comprehended in the course of the second class, are natural philosophy, chemistry, and drawing.

In the first of these branches, comprising magnetism, electricity, mechanics, optics, and astronomy, the class gave proofs of considerable attainment. In the solution of the most difficult problems, their demonstrations at the blackboard, were neat, clear, and conclusive; and executed with a promptitude and coolness, which, nothing short of a full confidence in their own attainments, could inspire. The board have no hesitation in expressing their belief, that no class of equal numbers can be found in any university in the Union, more thoroughly conversant with the subjects upon which they have been examined.

The philosophical apparatus has been much enlarged within the last two years, and is principally of French manufacture, of exquisite workmanship and beauty, and of the most modern and approved construction. For the purposes of a course of experimental philosophy, it is nevertheless inadequate. The board would therefore recommend that a small annual appropriation be asked for its extension.

The examination of the class in chemistry gave much satisfaction to the board, and furnished evidence of the zeal and industry with which the acting professor and his assistant have devoted themselves to the discharge of their respective duties. In this department, and in that of natural philosophy, great inconvenience has been experienced for the want of suitable rooms for lectures, recitations, and experiments: at present, the rooms in which the apparatus is kept, are used for these purposes. This exposes the instruments to great injury, as the experiments and preparations cannot be made near them without prejudice. A building to contain apartments would conduce to the convenience of the institution. Under this impression, the board recommend that an appropriation be asked for its erection.

In drawing, the cadets of this, and of the third class, have made surprising progress. In topography, landscapes, and the delineation of the human figure, their performances are excellent, and in a high degree creditable to themselves and to the accomplished artist from whom they have received their instructions.

The course of instruction pursued by the third class, embraces mathematics, French, and drawing. That of the fourth class is confined to mathematics and French.

In mathematics, instruction is afforded to the third class, in analytical geometry, perspective shades and shadows, spherical projections, surveying the differential and integral calculus, descriptive geometry, and plane and spherical trigonometry. And to the fourth, in algebra, geometry, plane and spherical analytical trigonometry, and descriptive geometry. To say that, in their thorough examination on these subjects, the classes acquitted themselves well would be but a feeble expression of the opinions of the board. They believe that, for accuracy and skill in the construction of the diagrams necessary for the demonstration of the problems proposed to them for solution, and the quickness, ease, and precision, with which the results were attained, these classes have never been excelled.

The examination of the third class in mathematics commenced in the afternoon of the 10th instant, and was continued on the 11th, resumed on the 13th and concluded about noon on the 14th. The examination of the fourth class, on the same subject, was commenced on the evening of the 16th, continued on the 17th and 18th, and resumed and concluded on the morning of the 20th. The examination throughout was creditable to the cadets and their instructors. The use which was made of the blackboard at the examination deserves to be known. There were two blackboards in different parts of the room, four cadets were called up at the same time, two to each board, and each cadet was told by the examining professor what he wished him to do; they then constructed the diagrams and wrote out their demonstrations and solutions on the board. While they were occupied, questions were put to one or more members of the class until one of those first called up was ready at the blackboard; he then read his demonstration or solution; but this was done with a readiness which showed that it was fully understood. He was then questioned in relation to the demonstration or solution, and the examination continued until the cadet next to him was ready. By this means, the student had time to reflect and to work out his demonstration or solution; he was free from embarrassment whilst thus engaged, because he knew that all present were attending to the person under examination. Besides the able professor who presides over this department, seven assistants are necessary to enable him to do justice to his classes, while the law provides but for one. This deficiency was formerly supplied by the selection of the most distinguished cadets, but it was found that the cadets thus selected were unable to progress with their class, and at the same time give useful instruction to others. Subsequently, officers have been detailed from the army and assigned to the discharge of the duty, but as no compensation is allowed by law for this extra service, the officers detailed have no inducement to retain their places in the institution. The consequence is, that this most important department is continually subjected to the evils of frequent changes in the instructors. At the close of the present term, as the board are informed, every assistant, except the one provided for by law, leaves the institution, strikingly illustrating the necessity of some provision to guard against this great inconvenience. It is believed that the provisions of an act reported at the last session of Congress, would, if adopted, correct this evil and many others to which the institution is exposed. The professor in this department has felt the want of a large theodolite, with Hassler's improvement, the purchase of which the board would respectfully recommend.

In French, the attainments of these classes are respectable and the examinations in this department were very satisfactory to the board.

With regard to the police of the institution, the board have found much to commend, and nothing which, in their opinion, requires alteration. An admirable system has been matured, which is fully understood and vigilantly enforced. Every thing which can conduce to the health and comfort of the cadets, consistently with a due attention to study and the performance of their military duties, has received attention.

The discipline established by the regulations of the academy, is favorably illustrated in the personal appearance and mainly deportment of the cadets; the neatness and uniformity of their dress and accoutrements, and their strict and willing obedience to the orders of their superiors. The seeming rigor of the requirements prescribed, has had the most salutary operation, in engendering a spirit of manly and honorable emulation, the distinguishing characteristic of the students of this institution.

The relations subsisting between the superintendent and instructors, and the cadets, are in strict harmony with their respective duties, and calculated to inspire the latter with a strong feeling of self respect. Every motive which can be addressed to their pride and judgment to influence a devotion to science, is here presented; and it affords the board unqualified pleasure to state that they have not been unmindful of the advantages they enjoy, nor lost sight of the high destinies to which, in the future concerns of their Government, they may reasonably aspire.

The books and accounts of the Quartermaster, and of the Treasurer and Paymaster, have been examined, and found to be correct. A strict system of accountability has been established in regard to the receipt and disbursement of the public money, sufficiently guarded to prevent its misapplication; the accounts of the cadets are regularly and accurately kept; their clothing and other necessary articles are so furnished as to avoid all imposition, and at prices, if not below, certainly not above the ordinary rates.

The board likewise examined the food served up at the meals of the cadets, which they found of excellent quality, and prepared with a cleanliness and regard to comfort, worthy of all praise. To the many inquiries proposed to the cadets themselves, the reply has uniformly been, that their food was not only good but abundant.

The medical department has also engaged the attention of the board. The hospital erected within a few years, is convenient in its arrangement, airy, and comfortable. The concerns of this department are exceedingly well directed by the distinguished surgeon under whose supervision it has been placed.

The fiscal concerns of the institution appear to have been conducted with great ability; and the appropriations of the Government to have been expended judiciously and faithfully. By the practice of a judicious economy a considerable fund was not long since accumulated which has been chiefly expended in the erection of useful buildings, embracing a commodious hotel for the accommodation of the parents and friends of the cadets, and of other persons visiting the academy.

In connexion with the subject of the public buildings, the board feel it to be their duty to reiterate the recommendation heretofore repeatedly made, that a competent appropriation for the erection of a house of worship, be asked of Congress. The room now used for the purpose, never was designed to be so appropriated; it is too small to accommodate the cadets, and others who frequent it, and is, in all other respects, inconvenient.

The library of the academy has been procured with much trouble, and at considerable expense: it is valuable, and should be preserved. To provide for its security, the board would respectfully recommend that a fire-proof room to receive it, be connected with the chapel, which they propose should be erected. The room now occupied as a library, should this recommendation be effected, may be advantageously used as a lecture or recitation room.

A reference to the reports of former and successive boards of visitors, will show that a strong conviction of the inadequacy of the existing rank and pay of the Superintendent of the academy, has long obtained. In this conviction, and the recommendations founded on it, the board entirely concur. The services required and diligently performed by him, are extremely laborious; the responsibility of his station is great, and the expense to which he is necessarily subjected, very considerable. The zeal, talent, and industry which have been so long and conspicuously displayed by him in the faithful discharge of his important and arduous duties, entitle him, in the judgment of the board, to the favorable consideration of the Government.

The board forbear to multiply suggestions, in relation to the wants of the institution already brought to the view of the Government by boards of visitors who have preceded them. They believe that the prompt and full gratification of these wants would eminently promote the public welfare, by giving increased efficiency to an institution whose interests are bound up with those of the nation.

Every facility has been afforded to the board, in aid of their investigations, by the Superintendent and those connected with him in the administration of the affairs of the academy. To the merits of all, the board take pleasure in bearing testimony; in their capacity and devotion to science, the national confidence may be safely reposed, in the assurance that the interests committed to their charge will be faithfully guarded, and zealously advanced.

We have the honor to be, Sir, your obedient servants.
